'Small' Story In Peking

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

Communist China's news media gave only routine treatment today to the joint Peking-Washington announcement that President Nixon will visit the Chinese mainland.

The Nationalist Chinese regime of Chiang Kai-shek on Taiwan reacted with dismay, the Russians with suspicion, but most other countries in Asia, Europe and elsewhere welcomed the news.

The official Communist party newspaper Peking Daily, which has the largest circulation in the country, carried the three-paragraph text of the announcement, as reported by the New China News Agency (NCNA), without additional information or editorial comment.

Peking Radio carried the announcement uring its main, nationwide broadcast Friday night. The announcement was fifth in the newscast's nine items and was not mentioned in subsequent broadcast Friday night or this morning. The radio customarily repeats important news items several times.

In what may have been a bureaucratic lag—or a sign that things really have not changed yet—NCNA followed up its Nixon announcement several hours later with the text of a party functionary's denunciation of "U.S. imperialism" as an "arch rival."

In Hong Kong, Communist newspapers, which take their editorial cue from Peking, gave the Nixon announcement prominent, front-page play. There was no editorial comment.

In Taipei, the Nationalist Chinese government lodged a "strong protest' with U.S. Ambassador Walter P. McConaughy. Diplomatic sources in the capital predicted the move would force on Chiang a "two Chinas" United Nations policy, which both the Nationalists and the Communists have been rejecting.

"We are very disturbed," said Foreign Minister Chow Sukai, speaking for the vacationing president. The Nationalists have broken relations with every country that has recognized Peking.

The Kremlin, which has viewed the quickening of the U.S.-Chinese thaw with consternation reacted with distinct coolness. Tass, the official news agency, reported the invitation tersely and without comment.

The North Vietnamese delegates to the peace talks in Paris were as equinanimous, but diplomatic sources said the new Sino-American contacts may break the conference stalemate.

In Warsaw, sources predicted the secret ambassadorial talks between Peking and Washington, begun in Geneva in 1954, would close as new channels of communications open up.

Prime Minister Eisaku Sato of Japan said the new development "will contribute to the easing of tensions, especially in Asia, and is to be welcomed." He said Japan would continue its "friendly and amicable" relations with South Korea and Nationalist China.

South Vietnam, Cambodia, Thailand and Malaysia expressed hope the Nixon-Mao reapproachment would hasten an end to the Indochina war. Denmark and Sweden expressed a similar hope.

The news was equally welcomed by Great Britain, France, West Germany, Belgium, Norway and the Vatican.

In Cairo, where the U.S. has been promoting an Arab-Israeli settlement, the Middle East News Agency said "the natural road to any positive effort to solve the Indochina problem should pass through Peking."

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said in Jerusalem the Middle East was the only tension-spot in the world where there is no direct contact between the opposing sides and hoped one would come about soon.

The press in Pakistan—from which Nixon's foreign adviser Henry Kissinger slipped out during last week to visit Peking and accept Chairman Mao's invitation for Nixon—praised the event.

The reporters also confessed they were baffled how they could have missed the year's greatest scoop.

Viet Peace Likely Key Peking Issue

Nixon's Policy Hinted

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—President Nixon will discuss peace in Vietnam as one of the "foremost, immediate" topics he will take up with Red Chinese leaders in Peking, White House officials confirm.

Mainland China is a main war arsenal for North Vietnam and the recent moves toward better Sino-American relations obviously open new diplomatic avenues for ending the war.

A ranking White House aide, talking to newsmen Friday, refused to speculate on what impact Nixon's visit would have on the Vietnam War. But he said the main purpose of the visit is to seek a more peaceful world, and added:

"FOREMOST OBJECT"

"In a quest for peace in the world, peace in Southeast Asia has to be a foremost, immediate objective." The Peking visit is expected to take place some time early next year, well before the May 1 date mentioned by Nixon in his announcement, the White House said.

The President, elated over his diplomatic coup in arranging the first visit by an American President to mainland China, winds up a 12-day stay at his Pacific Ocean front villa Sunday and will fly back to Washington.

He scheduled separate meetings with congressional leaders of both parties and his cabinet Monday morning to amplify his China policy.

After opening remarks, Nixon was expected to turn the briefing over to his national security affairs adviser, Henry A. Kissinger, who made the secret trip to Peking that arranged the invitation.

JAFFEE REPORT

Today, he awaited a report from Dr. Jerome K. Jaffee, his anti-drug abuse adviser, who toured Vietnam, and other Asian countries, to survey the extent of heroin addiction among U.S. troops there.

The Chief Executive held a national security council meeting for one hour Friday, apparently on Vietnam, China and the Middle East.

The White House refused to disclose any of the substantative talks covered in the Kissinger sessions with Red Chinese premier Chou En-lai during his 49 hours on the mainland.

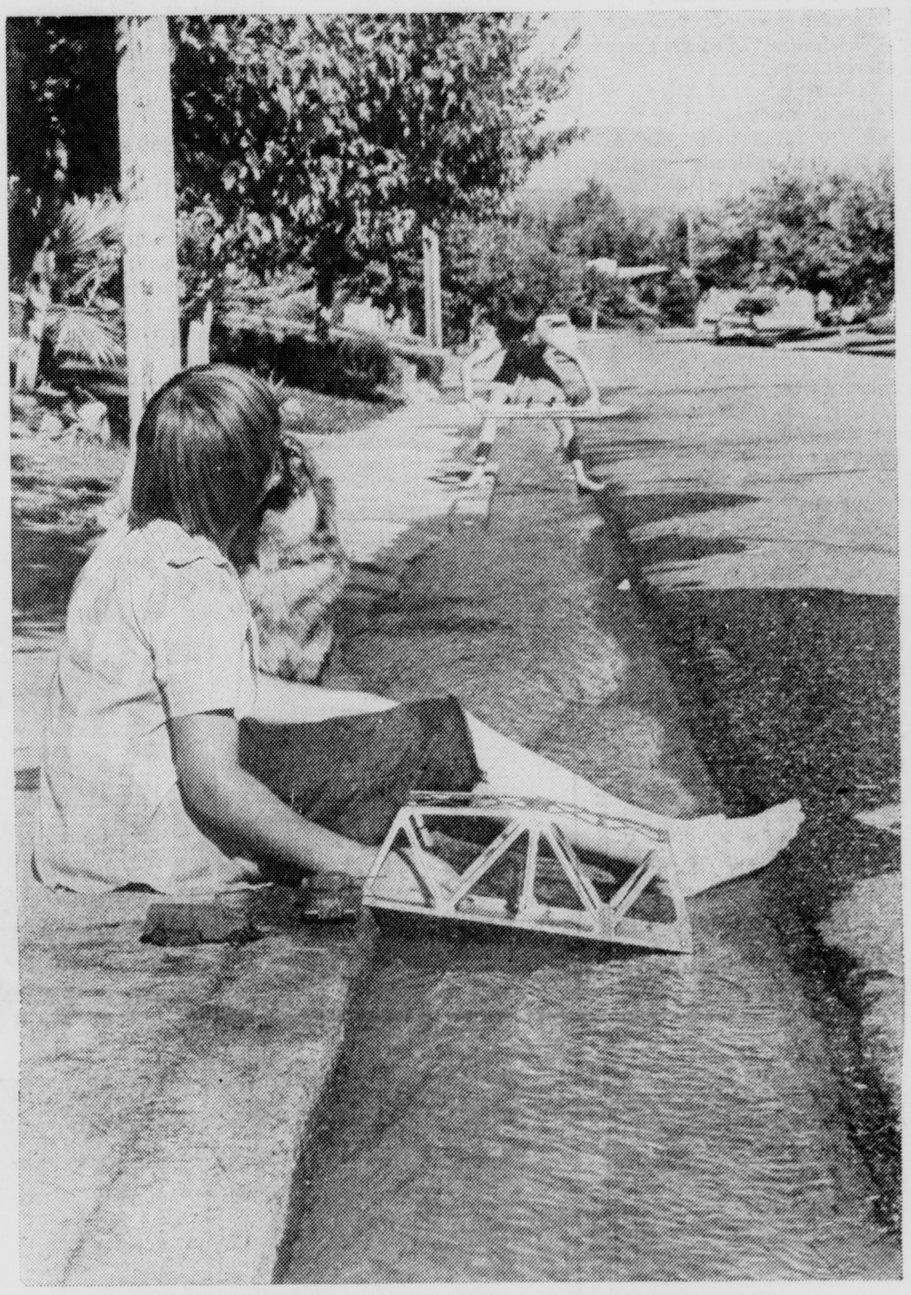
But when asked whether Chou had brought up the question of a new Geneva conference to settle the war in Indochina, a White House official, who declined to be identified, said he did not want to talk about specifics. "We will have to let events speak for thenselves."

The official also insisted that the U.S. sincerely hopes to end the war at the Paris peace table.

He flared up when asked why Kissinger had not contacted Le Duc Tho, North Vietnam's special delegate, or Madame Nguyen Thi Binh, the Viet Cong foreign minister while he was in Paris. Both Communist delegates had said they would be willing to meet with Nixon's foreign policy adviser.

The official told reporters that Kissinger has "insisted through all periods ... that the surest most reliable and most desirable way of ending the war in Vietnam was through negotiations."

Furthermore, he said, Kissinger maintained this position "when it was being ridiculed and when people said that there was absolutely no possibility of negotiations."



CONQUERING A STREETSIDE RIVER

Through the imagination of two youths, water flowing from a broken water main through a gutter can become a raging sea. William Martin (front), 13, of 680 Bamboo Terrace, and Paul Terrell, 12, of 785 Las Colindas Road, both Terra Linda, grabbed model boats, tanks and a bridge and ran for the rapids yesterday when a defective water main caused a small flood on Martin's street.

Bagley Says No Welfare Program Yet

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly Welfare Committee has reached "conceptual agreement" on a welfare reform plan, but its chairman says "We don't have the program yet."

Chairman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, said Friday the panel, composed of five Democrats and four Republicans, has reviewed many areas of reform during a series of closed sessions.

"We have agreed on a number of them," Bagley said. "It's a conceptual agreement and not agreement on language or on an actual bill. We're not taking any hard votes. We're simply going through the components of the various proposals."

He said if a welfare reform plan pending in the Senate should fail passage, then his committee could draft another attempt by the end of next week.

A proposal by Sen. Anthony C. Beilenson, D-Beverly Hills, that includes several components of the governor's defeated welfare "reform" program is scheduled for a final vote early next week.

Beilenson's bill is projected to save $23 million this fiscal year. The governor's program would have saved $89 million.

Bagley said his committee is considering the concept of "expanding job finding and job training and expanded child care centers, not job creation."

"The governor touts the 'work ethic' but he doesn't do anything to provide the work," Bagley said. "If the 'work ethic' is worthwhile, and all the governor's speeches say it is, then obviously the legislature has to do something.

Rail, Labor Leaders In Talks To Settle Walkout

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Rail management and labor negotiators got together today with government mediators in an effort to settle a long dispute that resulted in strikes Friday against two railroads and imposition of tough work rules on those operating.

The United Transportation Union (UTU) and the rail management were attempting to break an impasse over work rules which led to walkout against the Southern Railroad and the Union Pacific idling nearly 49,000 employees. The UTU has threatened to strike three more lines next Friday.

George Ives, chairman of the National Mediation Board, and a Labor Department representative headed the mediation efforts today.

Pickets went up at 6 a. m. local time Friday 25 minutes before a 12-hour all-night marathon bargaining session broke down. UTU President Charles Luna, wearing a gray-stripe shirt and puffing a cigar, stalked out of the Labor Department declaring, "The strike is on."

As pickets appeared at major terminals of the two lines, other railroads began implementing changes in work rules which they said would greatly increase efficiency, but eliminate thousands of rail jobs and reduce thousands of pay cecks.

Despite the rules changes, a spokesman for the Association of American Railroads said no wildcat strikes had hit the other lines. "The men seem to be working under the rules," the spokesman said.

Luna said the workers would have to tighten their belts and keep struggling to eliminate the rules that will "wipe out over a hundred years of collective bargaining benefits."

The policy followed by the railroads, as a means of counteracting the effects of the selective strike that recently won Supreme Court support, "abolished all rules that pertain to rates of pay, rules covering seniority, provisions for lunch periods, conditions governing vacations and all arbitraries and rules pertaining to work assignments," the UTU said.

Despite a statement by Acting Labor Secretary Laurence H. Silberman that both sides are eager to resume talks and that the differences have been narrowed in the past 48 hours, Luna said, "far from bringing the men to their knees —this action (abolishing rules) just throws another roadblock in the way of eventual settlement of the dispute."

Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe said the effect of the strike can be contained, if the walkout can be limited to the Southern and Union Pacific —and can be ended soon. But Volpe indicated that no immediate end to the strike was in sight. "Talks will continue over the weekend," he said.

The most serious consequences today were in the upper midwest where farmers are harvesting a bumper wheat crop. They faced a shortage of boxcars before the walkout.

Southern and Union Pacific account for about nine per cent of the tracks in the United States and haul about 25 per cent of the nation's farm produce moved by rail.

Bullet Halts West Marin Phone Calls

Telephone service to 36 customers at Point Reyes Station was disrupted late Thursday and yesterday when a bullet was fired into a Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. relay station.

The shooting, apparently related to the four-day-old strike by communications workers, occurred at about 10 p.m. Thursday, phone company officials said. The station was unmanned.

Franklin Rudolph, manager of the company's Mill Valley office, said phone service was restored at 1 a.m. yesterday.

The bullet tore through lines and fuses, he said.

Jack Eddy, district manager for the company, said acts of vandalism have occurred throughout the country since the strike began.

About 500,000 telephone workers, including 550 in Marin, are striking the company nationwide in a salary dispute. Workers are asking for a 25 per cent wage increase in a three-year contract with cost-of-living provisions. Bell Telephone, Pacific Telephone's parent company, has countered with an 11 per cent raise offer.

Meanwhile, automated equipment and supervisory personnel are continuing to provide service. However, equipment breakdowns and lack of workers to install phones has delayed service in some areas.

TYPHOON'S PART

Heavy Fighting In Central Highlands

SAIGON (UPI)—The South Vietnamese command today reported heavy fighting Friday in the Central Highlands and northern parts of the country.

The northern front was still today as Typhoon Jean, the worst July weather in 20 years, swung in from the Tonkin Bay and headed for Hanoi.

A military spokesman said allied troops killed 141 Communist soldiers in battles scattered across the country Friday. The only allied casualty reported was an American helicopter crewman, wounded when his OH6 "Loach" was shot down.

A U.S. military spokesman said the observation craft, the 1,978th lost in Vietnam since 1961, was brought down Friday in the A Shau Valley, four miles northwest of A Luoi. The valley is a major Communist route into the northern provinces.

The big new typhoon dropped six to nine inches of rain along the coastal plains and mountains in the northern sector and brought air and ground operations to a halt. Weathermen said it was about 130 miles east of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) separating North and South Vietnam and was expected to hit Hanoi Sunday.

Spokesman said South Vietnamese killed 30 Communists in three scattered fights in the north, and another 15 in the vicinity of Firebases 5 and 6, opposite the junction of the Lao, Cambodian and Vietnamese borders in the Central Highlands.

They also killed 14 in a fight south of Pleiku City and just west of the old special forces camp at Plei Me, on a main Communist infiltration route. Eighteen other guerrillas were killed in the Mekong Delta.

Session On Successor To Bruce

The Marin County Board of Supervisors, in its quest for a replacement for former County Administrator Alan Bruce, held an unannounced dinner meeting in Sausalito July 8 with a committee that had been appointed to screen applicants, it was learned yesterday.

Board Chairman Louis H. Baar said the screening committee was authorized at the session to hire a professional consulting firm to help recruit and screen candidates nationwide, at a cost of not more than $4,000.

The firm selected was Griffenhagen-Kroeger, Inc. of Berkeley, Baar reported.

No public notices of the meeting was issued in advance because the county counsel's office advised that none was needed due to personnel discussions involved, according to Fran Warner, clerk to the supervisors.

All five board members met over dinner at the Alta Mira Hotel, Mrs. Warner said. The supervisors then departed to let the screening panel — headed by Ignacio Vella, chairman of the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors — continue its discussions.

Four-Nation Parley On Jordan Warring

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and leaders from Libya, Syria and Sudan met today at the Mediterranean summer resort of Mersa Matruh to discuss the renewed fighting in Jordan between troops and guerrillas and the Middle East crisis in general, political sources in Cairo said.

The sources said the talks in Mersa Matruh, about 155 miles west of Alexandria, began Thursday. Meeting with Sadat were Premier Col. Moammar el-Khadafy of Libya, Vice President Mahmoud el-Ayyoubi of Syria and Revolution Command Council member Zein el-Abedeen Abdel Kader of the Sudan.

The semi-official Middle East News Agency said the meeting today lasted 75 minutes but gave no details of what was discussed. Nor was any information available on the earlier talks.

In Israel, Foreign Minister Abba Eban said Friday night he believed the United States has "decided in principle" to give Prime Minister Golda Meir the additional warplanes requested in June.

Eban said in a military radio broadcast from Jerusalem that Israel needs the F4 Phantom jet fighter-bomber to keep pace with Egypt's rapid arms buildup and is waiting anxiously for word from Washington on when the planes will arrive.

In Amman, UPI Correspondent John Bonar reported King Hussein's army is forcing the remnants of the Palestinian guerrilla movement in Jordan into a narrow strip of land. There, he said, the army will be able to control the commandos' movements and supplies shipments.

Eban said he believes the Nixon Administration still favors a balance of arms between Israel and the Arabs.

Bomb Scare At Apartments

About 20 San Rafael residents, some still in their pajamas, were routed from their Canal Street apartment house today after a device which appeared to be a bomb was found in a utility room in the building.

The device — four road flares and an alarm clock connection with wires — was discovered at about 8:30 a.m. by a garbageman making his rounds at 220 Canal Street.

Police evacuated the apartment house and cordoned off the street. Two Army bomb disposal experts from the Presidio of San Francisco, summoned by police, declared the bomb a fake.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Emergency

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—Secretary of Agriculture Clifford M. Hardin declared a national emergency Friday, authorizing a release of "such sums as may be necessary....to control and eradicate" a horse sleeping sickness epidemic spreading northward through Texas and threatening other states.

The disease, Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis (Vee), has already killed up to 6,000 horses in Texas and Mexico and made hundreds of humans ill.

Doctors reported Friday a 6-year-old San Antonio girl died of some form of encephalomyelitis, possibly the Vee strain. But it was emphasized that Vee, though fatal to horses, almost never kills humans.

The girl was identified only as the daughter of an Air Force enlisted man.

Representatives of states bordering Texas clamored for vaccine to protect themselves before the epidemic spreads further, but what short supplies of vaccine the government has on hand are being used exclusively in Texas.

Roving Report

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—President Nixon got a report Friday from David M. Kennedy, the roving ambassador who toured the world asking foreign nations to voluntarily limit certain exports to the United States.

Kennedy spent six weeks overseas, as part of the administration's effort to get foreign nations to limit their penetration of the U.S. market and head off passage of trade quotas by Congress.

Kennedy spent most of his time in tthe Far East, urging voluntary export limits on textiles, shoes and steel.

A Similarity?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The attorney for mass murder suspect Juan V. Corona said Friday there were similarities between this week's sickle slayings in the Sierra foothills and the 25 killings his client is charged with.

Richard Hawk also said he plans to file false arrest damage suits next week on behalf of Corona, 37, a farm labor contractor, against Sutter County and its officials.

Corona was indicted Monday on 25 counts of murder in the slayings of itinerant farm workers whose bodies, hacked by a cleaver or machete, were found in graves along the Feather River near Yuba City.

Rain Deaths

SEOUL (UPI)—More than five inches of rain fell on much of Central Korea today with 30 persons reported killed, 13 injured and 10 missing in flooding and mudslides.

Police said more than 800 homes were flooded and nearly 3,000 persons were homeless. Several passengers were missing in the capsizing of a ferry in the rain-swollen Han River at Seoul.

Spain Is Next

KINSHASA, The Congo (UPI) —Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, in the backstretch of his round-the-world diplomatic mission, ended his tour of blak Africa today and set off for a business and pleasure visit to Spain.

Agnew was departing today for the eight-hour flight across much of Africa and was to arrive in Madrid barely in time for a formal dinner.

He has scheduled meetings Sunday and Monday both with Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the Spanish head of state and his heir apparent, Prince Juan Carlos.

After three days in Madrid, Agnew and his entourage will fly to an undisclosed location on th Costa Del Sol where he will be joined by his wife, Judy, his two daughters and close friends for four days of rest and relaxation.

Agnew wound up a seven-day, three-nation trip across black Africa Friday with a lengthy discussion — which included President Nixon's proected trip to China — with President Joseph Mobutu of the Democratic Republic of The Congo.

MOTHERS APPLAUD

Princess Grace's Solution To Child's Blissful Life

CHICAGO (UPI) — Princess Grace of Monaco told applauding mothers Friday that breastfeeding could help encourage family unity and thereby help fight "this current wave of public indecency."

The blonde former movie star criticized films, television commercials, magazines and other media for "debasing" values and urged renewed emphasis on the mother-child relationship to combat such influences.

Her Serene Highness was speaking about her own experiences in nursing her children to 1,200 members of La Leche League International. The organization founded 15 years ago in Franklin, Ill., by mothers who wanted to encourage others to try breastfeeding.

Princess Grace told the women, many of them nursing their own children or obviously expecting new offspring, that affairs of state were not allowed to interfere with feeding when her children were newborn.

The princess said she nursed each of her children for two months and wished she could have continued longer.

One of the ways in which all of us can help to combat this current wave of public indecency which is threatening to undermine and destroy western civilization, is to concentrate upon and increase the solidity of the family," she said. "This solidity begins with the child at the mother's breast."

At a press conference earlier, she told reporters she had trouble deciding what films her own children should see and was also concerned about "television commericials, some of the songs being sung, magazines, films, everything."

"It seems to me, nothing's sacred anymore. It's kind of difficult, I think, in bringing up children to try to give them a sense of values with all this exposure to everything being debased and being made ridiculous," Princess Grace said.

"When other children in a family can watch a mother breastfeeding a little baby and being able to do this without embarrassment, to realize the wholesomeness of sex and the naturalness of it, this helps prepare them for what they are exposed to outside the home," she said. "And they don't get the wrong ideas and put sex in the wrong proportions."

Head-On Crash Kills Nine; A Lone Survivor

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (UPI) —Nine young persons were killed early today when two cars collided head-on, molding into a single mass of wreckage, police said.

There was one survivor, who was listed in critical condition at a Flint, Mich., hospital.

Eight of the victims were in the same car, along with the survivor. The ninth victim was the driver of a car which, traveling north in the southbound lane of Interstate 75 just south of Grand Blanc, forced another vehicle off the road before crashing head-on into the vehicle with the nine occupants.

The occupants of the car which was forced off the road prior to the fatal accident escaped injury.

Three of the victims, all from the Detroit suburb of Troy, were identified as: William Douglas Nance, 19; Louis Beall Jr., 21; and David Klepetsanis, 18.

The names of the others, including the two drivers, were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Three Die In Collapse Of Mine

ASHERS FORK, Ky. (UPI)— Rescue workers early today found the bodies of three coal miners trapped and killed by a slate fall in a small mine in this southeastern Kentucky community.

The bodies of Oscar Sayler, 22, Hima, Ky., and Frank Gibson, 21, and Ernest Harris, 26, both of Manchester, Ky., were seen through cracks, buried under five feet of slate in a shaft of the Halmar Coal Co. mine.

Sayler and Gibson, both single, had been hired the day before the accident, while Harris, married and the father of two, was hired only last week.

About 50 workers, many of them coal miners living in neighboring towns who volunteered their services, worked in shifts, five at a time, to bring out the bodies. They were not expected to cut through the rock to the bodies until this afternoon.

Officials said there were at least three separate cave-ins. Gibson and Sayler were trapped in the first, about 150 feet from the opening of the mine and only eight feet from the face, where the coal is cut.

U.C. Regents Ask Budget Slash Veto

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— University of California regents have asked the State Legislature to override Gov. Ronald Reagan's veto of $13 million in funds from the university budget.

The governor, who was present and voted against the resolution Friday, said a vote for the budget "is a vote to increase the taxes of the people of California."

Regents voted 12-6 in favor of the resolution by Regent William M. Roth of San Francisco after approving by a 16-1 vote a "more polite" resolution saying the board reaffirmed its earlier stand on the budget. Reagan cast the only "no" vote on the resolution introduced by Regent Dean A. Watkins.

The university originally requested $375 million for the 1971-72 budget and the legislature voted to appropriate $350 million, enough for a 10 per cent raise for all faculty members. Reagan cut this back to $337 million.

The governor and regents favoring Roth's resolution clashed heatedly during debate.

Hearing Ordered For Nude Dancer

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—A exotic dancer who says her nightclub act "climaxes in complete nudity" has won a court hearing Monday on the constitutionality of Portland's new nude dance ban.

The dancer, who performs under the name Casey Champagne, asked Circuit Court Judge Phillip Roth for a temporary injunction against enforcement of the ordinance. The judge denied the request, but ordered a hearing next week.

Hospital Releases Snakebite Victim

SAN GABRIEL, Calif. (UPI)—Barry Sone, 11, who was bitten by a dead rattlesnake, was released from the hospital in good condition Friday.

The boy touched the rattler after his mother had chopped it in two with a spade, and was bitten by the still-functioning reflex muscle action. Snake experts said the biting reflex continues active for some time after the snake's death.

Venue Change Is Asked For Bennett

An attorney for William O. Bennett of Kentfield, state Board of Equalization member, asked yesterday for a change of venue of Bennett's scheduled Marin trial on a drunk in public charge.

The attorney, William O. Weissich of San Rafael, said in his motion filed in Marin Municipal Court that an impartial and unbiased jury could not be obtained in Marin County for the case.

He blamed a "deluge of publicity" stemming from Bennett's trial last month on a drunken driving charge. In that case, a Marin Municipal Court jury's guilty verdict was thrown out by Judge Robert A. Smallman.

The drunken driving charge stemmed from Bennett's arrest in Sausalito April 25. The drunk in public charge is in connection with his arrest March 4, also in Sausalito.

He said he had been told the I-J is seen by about 172,000 of an estimated 200,000 persons living in Marin.

A hearing on the motion has been set in municipal court for July 29.

Death Ruled Accidental

The death of a 57-year-old Sleepy Hollow man June 17 was apparently accidental, the Marin County coroner's office said yesterday.

Benjamin Masten Perkins of 200 Deer Hollow Road died when his pick-up truck careened down a grassy slope in his front yard and crashed into the side of a barn.

An autopsy was performed to determine if cause of death was the accident or whether Perkins suffered a seizure just before the accident.

Coroner's investigator Keith C. Craig said today there was no indication of a seizure.

Attorney For Magee Will Seek Removal

The attorney for Ruchell Magee said yesterday he plans to ask to be removed from the case Monday because of remarks made by a San Francisco federal court judge.

Ernest L. Graves of Los Angeles, the court-appointed lawyer for Magee, earlier had said that comments about his fees made by Judge Samuel Conti of U.S. District Court had made it difficult for him to continue in the case.

Conti had remarked about the $8,500 paid by Marin County to Graves recently for his services. The judge made his comments July 9 during a hearing on a bid by Magee's codefendant, Angela Davis, to have their case transferred to federal court. The pair is charged in connection with last August's shoot-out at the Marin Civic Center that left Judge Harold J. Haley and three others dead.

Conti, rejecting the bid, returned the case to Marin County, where pretrial hearings are due to resume Monday.

Graves also told the Independent-Journal yesterday that "accident will happen" in connection with publicizing of secret grand jury testimony through a motion by Miss Davis's attorneys.

The lawyer said it was probably accidental that the entire transcript of grand jury proceedings — some of which previously was sealed — was attached to a motion made to an appellate court in San Francisco.

The portion made public for the first time is testimony by Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas which said that Magee fired the shotgun blast that killed Judge Haley.

Graves reiterated a statement made earlier in court that he did not consider the testimony particularly damaging to his client but that "having been once sealed, it assumed a special emphasis."

Costs Of Sewer Line To Be Told

San Rafael City Council will learn the actual cost of the first stage of the city's $1.4 million sewer modernization program, at its meeting at 8 p.m. Monday in the city hall.

Public Works Director Norris M. Rawles is to report on contractors' bids due to be opened at 10 a.m. Monday. The bids must be reviewed by the federal department of Housing and Urban Development before contracts can be awarded formally by the council. Rawles will ask the council to adopt a resolution of intent to award the contract, at Monday's meeting.

The council also will hear landowner Ed Dulin's appeal against planning commission denial of his request to place fill on a 1.38-acre lot at 1955 Francisco Boulevard.

Wallace K. Shepherd, executive director of the Marin County Housing Authority, will appear before the council. He will ask the city to eliminate two-year residency requirements for eligibility in the leased housing program, discuss closer liaison between the city and the authority, and propose that the authority act for the city to build 40 low-rent units authorized in a 1964 referendum.

A joint powers agreement accepting $10,000 in county funds to support the city's senior citizen program also will be considered by the council.

Wrong District

In yesterday's Independent-Journal an error in a headline had the Dixie School District trustees approving a $1,200 expenditure for employees' health insurance. It should have read the Nicasio School District.

killed nine guerrillas deep in the U Minh Forest, along the southwestern tip of Vietnam, while supporting South Vietnamese 21st Infantry Division troops ona sweep of the swamp and jungle area.

South Korean forces reported killing a total of 55 guerrillas in scattered clashes in the central coast provinces of Binh Dinh, Phu Yen and Khanh Hoa.

The South Vietnamese also reported clashes to the west and southwest of Hue and 50 miles south of Da Nang. Spokesmen said 14 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese were killed and one prisoner taken.

The U.S. command issued no morning war communique today for the 13th time this month, indicating no significant contact involving American troops.

Field reports from Phnom Penh said Communist forces bombarded Lompong Chamlong 15 miles east of the capital. The government said the mortar attack caused no casualties or damage but kept Cambodian troops pinned down.

Cambodian forces have been trying to force North Vietnamese troops out of the marshes east of the capital since June 1, lest the Communists get close enough to fire rockets into the center of the city.

Theft-Burglary Case Bound Over

John Norman McMurphy, 18, of Corte Madera, was bound over to Marin Superior Court yesterday on charges of car theft and burglary.

He is to be arraigned in superior court Wednesday.

McMurphy was arrested July 7 by Marin County sheriff's deputies on Highway 101.

The car he was driving had been stolen from a Corte Madera man earlier that day and money and property found in the car had been taken from a Bel Marin Keys residence that had just been burglarized, deputies said.

Rec Panel Likes School For Center

The Sausalito Recreation Commission wants the city council to limit study for a municipal center to the Central School site.

The city is considering sending $14,000 for a study on the possible use of the Central School property and the city's waterfront property as a municipal center.

According to James E. Muldoon, the commission Thursday night did not say it favored the school as the municipal center's site, only that the proposed study should be limited to that area. The city planning commission, meeting the same night, declared itself in favor of buying the school site for a municipal center.

The commission will meet at 4 p.m., Tuesday to walk through the school to study possible uses for recreation commission needs.

In other business, Muldoon said, Chairman Thomas Rogers submitted an eight-page proposal concerning modifications to the proposed Park Plaza Plan, including public access to the waterfront in that area and a commercial development in the area of the Bank of America.

He said the commission did not consider at the meeting, but will study it for discussion at a later date.

Wrong Figure In 'Food Conspiracy'

A typographical error in yesterday's Independent-Journal distorted a comparison of food prices in a story dealing with the White Panther-sponsored "food conspiracy."

The story said that a $223 bill would have been run up at a regular market for an identical list of items purchased through the food conspiracy for $2.25. Actually, the store figure was $3.23.

sors, requires that 24 hours written notice be provided for all special meetings, even those legally closed to the public.

The Independent-Journal was unable today to reach any spokesmen for the county counsel's office for comment or explanation.

Supervisor Michael Wornum said today the meeting was closed to the public because the board and the screening committee discussed qualifications of specific county employees for the post.

At the July 8 meeting, the supervisors limited advertising in the recruiting effort so that total cost would not exceed $4,000 for the hiring process, said Baar.

About 14 applications and queries have been turned over to Vella and his committee.

On the screening committee are Vella, Thomas J. Mellon, San Francisco city administrator; Jack M. Merelman, general counsel for the County Supervisors Association of California; and M. D. Tarshes, San Mateo County administrator.

Salary for the administrator's job is set at between $26,000 and $30,000. Bruce was drawing $29,410 per year when he quit on July 1.

Condition Good From Accident

Two San Francisco men were reported in good condition today at two Sonoma County hospitals after a car-truck accident yesterday on Highway 101, south of Sierra Avenue, Cotati.

Ralph Acuna, 30, suffered head injuries in the accident and was admitted to Santa Rosa Memorial Hospital. His passenger, Anthony Boyadzis, 29, was in Hillcrest Hospital in Petaluma. He suffered face cuts and broken ribs.

The California Highway Patrol said their car, southbound at 2:05 a.m. yesterday, struck the rear of a slow-moving truck driven by Frank Montgomery, 55, of Fortuna.

Gallagher Will Lead School Panel

Leroy R. Erickson of Valley Ford was elected vice president; N. Louis Passalacqua of Bodega Bay, clerk, and Roy A. Parks of Tomales, trustee representative, at an organizational meeting Thursday night.

Supt. Charles A. McCully said trustees adopted a publication budget of $1,155,325, and will have a public hearing on it at 2 p.m. Aug. 6 at the district office, Tomales.

McCully said if legislation is passed to reimburse the district for tax loss because of the Point Reyes National Seashore being taken off the rolls and agricultural preserves paying a reduced rate, the budget would be increased. Trustees accepted the resignations of Jay Armstrong, teacher, Tomales High School; Wanda Madson, cook, Tomales High; and Regina Pozzi, teacher aide, Tomales Elementary.

The board hired Michael Maloney as an intern teacher at Tomales High at a salary of $6,342 a year.

The Bastille was destroyed July 14, 1789.

UC Senate Gives Educator Award

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—The University of California Academic Senate has given the Clark Kerr award to outgoing Chancellor Roger Heyns.

Members unanimously voted for a resolution praising Hayns as a "patient, courageous and wise educational leader in a period of turbulence and of much hostility to higher education."

Heyns is leaving to take a post at the University of Michigan. He will be succeeded by Albert H. Bowker, who now heeds the City University of New York. The award is named for former university president Clark Kerr.

Playboy Bunny Helps Run Show

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—When disc jockey Terry Lee became honorary mayor of Los Angeles Thursday he promptly appointed his own city council — a Playboy Bunny, two actresses, an actor and a former football player.

Lee, of KREL in Corona, decided he could play mayor because Mayor Sam Yorty had played disc jockey last week, substituting for vacationing Dick Whittinghill on KMPC.

With permission from Yorty, Lee broadcast from City Hall for three hours after being sworn in by City Clerk Rex E. Layton.

CAMERINO FASHIONS

Marco Polo Look On Italian Front

VENICE, Italy (UPI)—A tall beige camel regarded us with a jaundiced eye, stamped a cloven hoof and shrugged the foremost of his two humps.

He wore the same look of disdain his ancestors once gave Marco Polo. This surly fellow was introducing the Marco Polo-inspired line of Roberta di Camerino in the first of the Italian fall and winter fashion shows Thursday night.

As such they were typical of the simple dress with fancy look the jet set buys in quantity from Roberta, queen of the expensive little nothing.

All Italy's top designers have announced a return to the classic look for fall in the Rome collections opening tonight, with emphasis on suits and coats with hems somewhere in the vicinity of the knee.

Roberta chose the Chanel length, just below the knee, for daytime and for evening dropped those wool and silk jersey pullovers to the ankle, sometimes slitting them up the thigh.

Most women buy a purse to match a dress. Roberta's collection gave one the idea the wearer bought a purse and then needed a dress to match —and a hat and scarf and coat and boots and luggage. The carryover of the same print sometimes made it difficult to see where clothes left off and accessories began.

THE SHOW setting was as exclusive as the clientele for whom the merchandise is destined.

The camel, two shetland ponies and a baby elephant joined models in parading through the white washed interior of a long brick building Napoleon once used as a powder storehouse. The building stands alone on Roberta's private wooded island in the Venetian lagoon not far from Marco Polo Airport.

Guests arriving by motor launch were greeted by gondoliers in three ceremonial barges owned by the city of Venice — replicas of a dragon boat, a Viking ship and of the Doge's barge with its gilded lion up front.

ITALIAN DESIGNERS are unveiling their creations for fall and winter in Rome through next week, and these two versions from the Fontana Sisters collection were previews of the Fontana showing to be held next week. They are turquoise and yellow Montgomery-style long coats, designed to be worn over cocktail dresses. (UPI Cablephoto)

INSIDE RUSSIA

Children Are The Privileged Class

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Children are Russia's privileged class.

Soviet educators accept the theory that the most important period in life for physical, mental and moral development is from birth to age 7. A majority of Russian parents apparently agree. The result is a huge and growing network of nurseries and kindergartens throughout the country.

Mrs. Kitty Weaver, world traveler and student, offers a detailed description of the Soviet's little-known pre-school centers in her book, "Lenin's Grandchildren."

IT WAS LENIN who, immediately after the 1917 revolution, called for the widest possible expansion of public- pre-school education. The Russian government set to work and, by 1960, 3,115,000 pupils were enrolled. The number of children in nurseries and kindergartens is now nearing 12 million.

The service is largely paid for by the government. It permits mothers to work and still know their children are being well cared for, and in the company of other children.

"We love our children," the director of a center told Mrs. Weaver. "We call them our privileged class because we try to give them the best of what we have.

"We haven't always had so much —we lost 20 million people and many of our cities in the last war alone. The children are our future, and we want that future to be a happy one."

Mrs. Weaver's report drew warm praise from Alexander V. Zaporozhets, director of preschool education in the Russian Academy of Education. He took exception to some critical statements, but said even a long list of the book's "shortcomings" could not detract from its indisputable overall merits.

THE SOVIET nurseries and kindergartens, which can accommodate children three months old through age 6, are not compulsory or free. Any city family may send children to them at any time, and about 80 per cent of these children are enrolled. the supply of institutions in small towns and rural areas cannot yet meet demand. the Soviet government now is opening more preschools in these areas.

The state bears 75 to 80 per cent of the school cost. The parents' share is determined on the basis of a family's income and number of children. It usually ranges from three to 12 rubles ($3.30 to $13.20) a month.

The school buildings generally are two-story brick or stucco with big windows and large, pleasant rooms. An institution may be strictly a day school or a five-day live-in school with the children spending only weekends at home.

THE NURSERIES accommodate infants from two months to age 3. Kindergartens are for 3 to 6 year olds.

A program of instruction outlines methods to be used in rearing the children, and a "Handbook of pre-school Education" defines details of buildings, equipment and personnel.

The nursery school and kindergarten are pocket-sized collectives, where small Soviet citizens are taught they must put the welfare of the community ahead of personal preference.

"We want the children not only to learn to play, but to play together," a school director said. "This is the beginning of collectivism, which is the basis of our system."

Mrs. Weaver saw the premise put to work when an 18-month baby received a guest of approximately the same age in his playpen. They stared at one another for a while until finally the visitor smiled and said something in Russian baby talk that sounded like 'goo.'"

THE NURSERY staff was pleased by the babies' first meeting.

The Russian attitude toward treatment of toys is typical of Soviet ideology, Mrs. Weaver said, and is one of the basic differences between Russian and American children.

"Look, Milan, how you have spoiled this toy," a Russian child may be told. "Do you know how much work it took in the factory to make such a pretty autobus? And you have broken it so quickly. All of the children loved this autobus, and now they will not have a bus."

In America, Mrs. Weaver said, a teacher is more apt to say, "Now you won't get another toy, since you don't know how to take care of it." The American child is not made to feel he has betrayed his country by breaking a toy.

Hot Pants For Men? Girlfriend Who Wears Them Says No

DEAR HELEN:
My girl has five pairs of hot pants. I don't complain.

But when I picked her up and I was wearing a pair of hot pants that weren't as short as hers, she threw a fit. After all, they're sold in men's stores. She says they look obscene, men having hairy legs and muscles. And she wouldn't go out with me until I went home and changed.

Should a man be dictated to-like this? — GUY

DEAR GUY:
It depends on who wears the pants in this twosome. — H.

DEAR HELEN:
The other night several of us kids were swimming in our pool and this neighbor yelled over that if we didn't stop making so much noise he'd call the cops. We stopped.

So the next night, he and his wife had a big fight that lasted until after midnight, and kept everybody awake.

Did we call the cops? No! We didn't even call up and tell them to pipe down. — IS THIS FAIR?

DEAR ITF:
No. But I'll bet it was interesting. — H.

DEAR HELEN:
About the girl who worried over her big feet: She should cheer up — it could be worse: I not only have a size 10 foot, I also have a size 10½ foot. I have the choice of either swimming in my left shoe or folding up accordion style in my right. Please only use my initials. I'm still senstive about my tootsies. The only time I don't hurt is when I laugh. — J.C.

DEAR HELEN:
When I read the letter from "Tired of Playing Footsie" I was reminded about my sensitivity over big feet when I was a teenager.

Now, at 24, I envy her because you see, when I look down, there is only one size 11 foot there. I was in a dune buggy accident a year ago, and lost the other.

My fiance (we were to be married in September) was driving the buggy. He wasn't hurt. I saw him only once after that, when he came to say he had been transferred and "would write soon." He never did, but people say he's still around town.

Tell "Tired" to count her blessings. Both of them. — ONE FOOT IN THE GRAVE

DEAR HELEN:
I'd like to tell "Nadine" the "six foot giant" that she is short by my standards. Wonder who's giving her this height complex?

If she is afraid to ask a guy to go to her queen's ball then she is going to be too shy to stand up in front of the audience and receive her crown. To think that in this day, when fashions are being made for tall girls, there is a person left who is ashamed of being tall! Tell Nadine to walk proud. She isn't tall — everyone else is short! — SIX-FOOT-TWO, FEMALE AND PROUD

DEAR HELEN:
Our daughter, age 14, is six-feet-five-inches and wears a size 14 shoe. Because I let my height bother me as a youngster, I've taken special precautions to help her be proud of hers: She isn't bothered by it nearly as much as the people who ogle her. Why must we all be the same to be accepted! — MRS. T.

DEAR MRS. T.:
Only small people (in spirit, not stature) ostracize the different. — H.

Day In Santa Rosa Is Planned Friday

A day in Santa Rosa is planned for Friday by residents of the Tamalpais Retirement Residence in Greenbrae. Leaving by bus at 9:30 a.m. they will first view the garden show and art exhibits at the Sonoma County Fair.

Lunch at the Marshall House will follow and a tour of gift shops and the Gallery of Flowers, where Santa Rosa artists' works are on display, is planned.

Protein Need

One-half cup of creamed cottage cheese fills about one-fourth of a girl's daily protein need, while being low in calories and in cost. Cottage cheese does not replace milk but adds essential protein to keep muscles firm and agile, say Dairy Council of California nutrition consultants.

SEW SIMPLE

The Fabric's Wrong Side Could Just Be Right One

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,
Seems that there is so much emphasis about the right or wrong side of fabric. I have seen a satin-back crepe or a new crepe back satin, and I would like to combine these two sides for a contrast in my garment. They would be exactly the same color, and it would be so simple if I knew this were possible. Also, while I'm on the subject, I have often seen fabric I loved, only to be told that I liked the "wrong" side. Is there a set rule that we must use the right side?

MRS. M.M.W.

DEAR MRS. M.M.W.,
Wools, especially, often have loose threads where the yarns have been joined, showing on the wrong side. Examine your fabric carefully, if the coloring and weaving is the same on both sides, there is no reason they can't be reversed if you prefer.

As to reversing the satin and crepe; here again, the finish side is the approved side because special care is used to assure perfection of weave. If you have examined the fabric carefully, and it looks the same on both sides, by all means use them in a contrast for your design detailing instead of another color. Rules are made to be broken. There comes a decision we must all make ourselves and this can usually be guided by good judgment.

"When constructing any kind of pants from knits, when you will be using the elastic waist, it's easy to have a smooth bulk-free finish. If your fabric has a tendency to ravel, overcast the raw edges first. Press seams open and machine stitch close to the outer edge, twice the width of the hem, if you have a one-inch turnover, stitch for two inches. This eliminates any obstructing when inserting the elastic."

DEAR EUNICE,
Your name is quoted with almost the same reverence as the Bible among our friends. You have helped so many of us, hope you have one more answer for me. My daughter is being married this fall and since the event will be in the evening, she prefers me to wear a long gown. My older girl was married just two years ago, and I bought a very expensive beaded chiffon dress and am not able to buy another at this time.

As you can imagine, my dress is too short and is also sleeveless and somehow it just doesn't look new but the dress is in perfect condition. Any suggestions you can give me so I won't have a "patched" look will be more than appreciated.

MRS. G. S.

DEAR MRS. G. S.,
I think it will be relatively simple for you to use your dress, and with some imagination, make it look perfect this fall. One of the newest looks for fall is the separates look in a one-piece dress, in other words, using a combination of two to three fabrics in the same dress.

I would suggest you remove the skirt from the bodice and cut long sleeves from the beaded skirt fabric. Next, combine the beaded chiffon with a skirt of velvet, satin, crepe, etc. that will complement the bodice fabric. If you need a slimming line, try to carry out the same color. If you have a small waistline, the belt could be another contrast, otherwise apply a bias fold of the skirt fabric to cover the seam where the skirt joins the bodice.

Martha Heartily Approves Of Nixon Plan To Visit Peking

LONDON (UPI) — Martha Mitchell says she heartily approves of President Nixon's plan to visit Communist China because people should live as brothers and sisters, whatever their politics. Anyhow, she said, there are some people in the United States worse than the Communists.

She spoke her mind on a variety of matters, including the Pentagon papers, American youth and her own fondness for speaking out, during a tea Friday with newsmen.

"We have become one world now," she told the newsmen. "With the weapons we have, it's no longer one country against another. We should live together as brother and sister, Communists and non-Communists."

Besides, she said, "There are elements worse than the Communists in our own nation."

Mrs. Mitchell, smoothing her bright emerald taffeta dress, said she thought the American undergrounds, both black and white, were "trying to overthrow the government by force."

As for the younger generation, Mrs. Mitchell said many of them were "a bunch of spoiled brats, they've had too much of everything."

Mrs. Mitchell said she thought government leaders were deceiving the people in not telling them what they were really thinking and doing and and that was why she talked so frankly to the press.

In one way, the publication of the Pentagon papers was justified, she said, because "the citizens have a right to know."

"But, on the other hand, I don't approve of publishing stolen goods and the government had to take the stand they did," she said.

She complained that American newspapers were always misquoting her.

"For instance, I always try to return calls to newsmen, and when I do, the headlines read 'Martha calls again' as though I instigated it," she said.

Postmaster Is Announced

Omar E. McNally Jr., assistant postmaster in Fairfax, has been named postmaster for Corte Madera, the U.S. Postal Service announced yesterday.

McNally, 44, received his appointment under the new merit selection basis established for the Postal Service in recent legislation, officials said.

McNally has worked for the post office since 1943.

He is a native of Ross and now lives at 115 Rocca Drive, Fairfax, with his wife, Martha. They have three children.

McNally served in the Navy from 1944 t0 1946.

New Vote On Alliance Is Sought

The Sonoma County Mayors and Councilmens Association has called for a new vote on whether the county should withdraw from the Association of Bay Area Governments in favor of a new alliance of northern counties.

Association president Thomas Miller, a Sebastopol councilman, wrote Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, this week stating the group's opposition to the bill he has authored which would set up the north coast planning and development commission. Under the bill, Sonoma would withdraw from ABAG and join Mendocino, Humboldt, Lake and Del Norte counties in the new alliance.

"We believe that persons residing in the cities of Sonoma county will not be fairly represented . . . " Miller said, because they would have only one vote on the governing board regardless of population.

"We feel further that the cities of Sonoma County are being discriminated against in terms of the costs of the new organization," he said. Because of higher assessed valuations in Sonoma County, the cities would pay nearly half the costs of organization operations. He said the association also feared the proposed organization would be an erosion of home rule and local control.

"We believe any regional organization authorized by the state Legislature should be put to a vote of the people in the effected area before it is imposed," Miller said.

In April, Sonoma voters elected to withdraw from ABAG membership. City officials have said that residents had no knowledge of what the new organization would entail and may have changed their minds.

Woman Hurt In Two-Car Crash

A Belvedere woman suffered minor injuries Wednesday in a two-car accident on Fifth Street, San Rafael, police reported yesterday.

Harriet Burns Sherwin, 41, of 30 Windward Road, was to be treated by her own doctor for neck and back pains she suffered when her car and a second car driven by Maurice Patrick Angland, 51, of 10 Millay Place, Mill Valley, collided, police said.

Mistrial In Protest Trial

Trial of 10 persons arrested at a May 5 sit-in at the San Rafael office of the U.S. Selective Service ended yesterday in a mistrial.

After almost six hours of deliberation, a Marin Municipal Court jury indicated it was unable to reach a verdict on misdemeanor charges of failing to disperse and wilfully obstructing a public place.

It was one of three court actions yesterday involving persons arrested at the "May Day" sit-in.

Four persons found guilty June 17 of the two misdemeanor charges were sentenced by Judge Peter Allen Smith and five persons found guilty and sentenced July 8 had their jail terms cut short by Judge Baty.

Judge Smith gave the four persons found guilty by a jury in his court a choice of $200 fines each or 20 days work for the Marin County Parks and Recreation Department.

Ordered to return to court Monday to tell the judge their choice were Thomas Louis Oleari, 22, and Bryan Thomas Geddy, 23, both of Fairfax; William Gaston Begelow, 19, of Tiburon, and Lillian Lee Cunningham, 19, of San Rafael.

Five persons sentenced to 10 days in Marin County Jail were released three days early yesterday by Judge Baty at the request of their attorney, Robert Della Valle of San Rafael.

Released were William Griffin Zane, 26, of Fairfax; Robert Nelson Wall, 24, of Novato; James Kimo Campbell, 24, of San Rafael, and Randy Clifton Patterson, 22, and Mary Blair Willard, 22, both of Kentfield.

In lieu of serving the remaining three days in jail, Judge Baty ordered them to work three days with the county parks and recreation department.

"If they haven't gotten my point by now, they aren't going to get it by Monday," the judge said in granting Della Valle's motion.

The five were released from the jail while the jury in the trial of the 10 was still deliberating, and they joined in the cheers and smiles when jury foreman Ione L. Wilson of Ross reported the jury had made no progress since its first ballot.

On trial were Kenneth William Bott, 19, of Mill Valley; Robert Alan Le Blanc, 23, Gregory Carlton Fearon, 22, Carol Marie Ouellet, 20, Deborah Lee Neil, 18, and Daryl Kent Grossman, 23, all of San Rafael; Michele Tormanen, 19, and James Russell Allen, 23, both of Fairfax; Mark Nolen Werner, 22, of Sausalito, and Debbie Webb, 20, of Kentfield.

The jury began its deliberations at noon and was called back to the courtroom at 5:45 p.m.

Because of security regulations at the Hall of Justice, Marin juries which have not reached a verdict usually are sent home at 6 p.m. and allowed to return to the Hall of Justice to continue deliberation in the morning, or in the case of a Friday jury, on Monday morning.

When the jury returned to court yesterday evening, Mrs. Wilson reported that it was split, 8-4, but did not indicate whether the majority favored acquittal or conviction.

When asked by Judge Baty for a show of hands as to which jurors thought further deliberation would be fruitful, no juror raised his hand.

The 10 defendants in the case had acted as their own attorneys through the seven-day trial. They argued — as had the defenses in the two previous sit-in trials — that their opposition to the Vietnam War and the Selective Service system justified their protest.

Four of 37 persons arrested at the sit-in were juveniles and were booked at Marin Juvenile Hall, the trial of a final group of nine who were charged with the two misdemeanors is set to begin Thursday. Five others arrested have pleaded guilty to failing to disperse and are to be sentenced Sept. 10.

Lovelorn Army Guard Turns Gun On Four, Then Kills

TIJUANA, Mexico (UPI)—A lovelorn Army guard killed four fellow soldiers and wounded two others with an automatic rifle Friday before he was shot to death at a federal garrison, Mexican authorities reported.

Col. Alfonso V. Ballesteros Pelayo, commanding officer of the fifth infantry batallion, said the soldier opened fire on his companions for no apparent reason.

But, he added, Pvt. Ezequiel Ocegura Gomez, 21, was the victim of a "love deception" by his girl griend, who had apparently left him for another man.

The shooting took place at a motor pool in this border city where Gomez was on guard duty. Tijuana is located on the U.S.-Mexica border about 15 miles south of San Diego, Calif.

The dead were Cpl. Juan Contreras Leija, Cpl. Jose de Jesus Madrigal, Pvt. Manuel Avila Lopez and Pvt. Marcos Luvano.

Two of the victims were dead at the scene while two others died at hospitals. Gomez also was pronounced dead at the garrison.

Officer of the guard Javier Herrera fired the death shot at Gomez.

The two wounded soldiers were identified only as Cpl. Sanchez and Pvt. Cuevas Gradilla. Both were listed in satisfactory condition at the hospital. Gomez got his weapon from a gun locker, Pelayo said in a press statement.

Witnesses said several other soldiers grabbed rifles and shot at Gomez in an effort to halt his shooting spree.

In explaining a delay of several hours in releasing information on the shooting, the commanding officer said:

"Our primary objective was to save the lives of the wounded. We were at their bedsides at all tines seeing to it they received the best care available. Therefore, we were not able to communicate with the news media as soon as might have been desired."

Pair Hurt In Crash On Freeway

Two members of a Novato family have been treated at Marin General hospital for injuries suffered in a three-car mishap on northbound Highway 101, north of Lucky Drive in Greenbrae.

Georgie A. Wallace, 48, of 87 Santa Maria Drive, suffered a cut lip, and scrapes and bruises. John Wallace, 57, was treated for a bruised chest.

The California Highway Patrol said yesterday that the accident occurred at 10:40 p.m. Thursday when a car driven by Arlene J Millard, 30, of 194 Knollwood Drive, San Rafael, swerved to avoid another car and struck the center divider.

Officers said the Millard car was struck by the Wallace vehicle and then by another car driven by Harold D. Millard Jr., 32, also of 194 Knollwood Drive, San Rafael.

Innocent Pleas In Grass Case

Kurt Edward Benedict, 23, and Beverly Ann Benedict, 22, both of Redwood City, have pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to misdemeanor charges stemming from their arrest July 3.

A pretrail conference was set for Aug. 18.

The pair was arrested on suspicion of possessing dangerous drugs and marijuana by a California Highway Patrol officer who had stopped them for motorcycle equipment violations on Highway 101.

Mrs. Benedict was charged only with a misdemeanor count of possessing pot, and Benedict was charged with a misdemeanor count of possessing marijuana paraphernalia.

Interesting Study: Moons Of Jupiter

By SHERMAN WALKER

The 12 moons of Jupiter that have so far been discovered are an interesting study in their own right.

The moons are numbered not according to their distance from the planet, but according to their order of discovery. The four larger moons were discovered by Galileo with his homemade telescope. For a while these four were the only ones known. Later, seven very small ones were found outside the orbits of the four large ones and finally a very small one inside their orbits.

The four outer moons are going in retrograde direction opposite the others. There is a possibility that they may be former asteroids, captured by Jupiter's strong gravity.

The first two large satellites, I and II, are about the size of earth's moon; the other large ones are considerably larger, even larger than planet Mercury.

The first four satellites (the big four) were originally given the poetic names of Io, Europa, Ganymede and Callisto but these have been found cumbersome and also hard to remember. The numbered sequence is now almost universally used.

The large moons of Jupiter have figured in other investigations that are far afield from earlier investigations. Before accurate chronometers were made it was a problem for sailors to obtain their correct longitude at sea. It was suggested that the motions of these moons, since they could be predicted, could be used for computing longitudes. These were also used to obtain the speed of light.

Residency Policy Will Be Discussed

A Marin County Economic Opportunity Council subcommittee has urged San Rafael residents concerned about residency requirements to attend the San Rafael City Council meeting Monday at 8 p.m.

Adelaide P. Wilson, chairman of the council's newly formed health, food, housing and transportation committee, said the committee agreed to contact people who have called EOC about residency requirements to qualify for Marin County leased housing in San Rafael. Mrs. Wilson said the San Rafael City Council will discuss these requirements at its meeting.

Mrs. Wilson said EOC has recently formed the six-man committee she chairs to combine several smaller committees into one. She said a larger committee makes it easier to comply with federal law to have equal representation from members appointed by a public body, nonprofit private group members and poor people before a committee can take any action.

West Marin Fill Plea To Be Studied Thursday

Henry H. Wilkins, who owns 11.5 acres of tidelands on the west shore of Bolinas Lagoon, wants to put five feet of fill — about 45,000 cubic yards — on his property across the road from Bolinas School.

His request will come before the Marin County Fill Committee at 3 p.m. Thursday in Room 308 of the Civic Center.

Irving L. Schwartz, executive officer for the fill committee, said Wilkins gave no reason other than that he wants to use it for some recreational purpose.

The fill committee will get two other requests.

Businessmen Eye Revision Of Square

The Village Square Association of Corte Madera has started a spruce-up of the area aimed at reviving the early 20th-century charm of the businesses there.

"The character of the buildings is there but it's been 'painted out' during the years," President Robert D. Satterthwaite said.

The businesmen have obtained a plan and color guide from the San Francisco architectural firm of Cope-Peterson, Satterthwaite said.

In addition to the refurbishing of the stores and businesses on the square, which Satterthwaite compared to a project in Mill Valley a few years ago, the association members plan a "community project day" next month.

At that time they will paint and repair bus stops and other public areas.

Innocent Plea To Grand Theft

Barbara Ann Fisher, 31, of no known address, pleaded innocent Thursday in Marin Municipal Court to felony charges of grand theft and embezzlement.

Preliminary hearing was set for Aug. 10.

She is a former seasonal employee in the State Department of Parks and Recreation and was arrested Monday. The parks department declined to divulge details of the arrest or charges.

Cartoonist Said To Be Seeking Site For Center

Novato Chamber of Commerce directors have announced they will try to get Schulz to put the proposed center in the Deer Island area, northeast of highway 101 and 37.

Robert Anderson, chairman of the Economic Development Committee, reported that Schulz and television producer Lee Mendelson, who has produced Snoopy TV shows, are seeking an 800-acre site in California for a center that would open in 1975.

The chamber on Thursday also endorsed the campaign by the Novato Boy's Club for $100,000 to construct a clubhouse in Novato and adopted a budget of $24,818 for 1970-71, up $2,245 from expenditures last year.

Starvation Rate Of Babies In Hospital

HOUSTON, Tex. (UPI)—An average of one baby a month each year dies of starvation in Houston hospitals and uncounted others die of malnutrition at home, a Baylor College of Medicine physician estimates.

Dr. Buford Nichols, also chief of gastroenterology at the Junior League Clinic of Texas Children's Hospital, said by the time most starving infants reach the hospital they are literally skin and bones because their mothers do not understand what is happening to them.

Patriots May Lose Kapp On Contract Technicality

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

When the New England Patriots go looking for help in the next college draft, perhaps they'd be wise to select a lawyer.

Just a few days after they lost lineman Phil Olsen because of a loophole in his contract, the Patriots were informed Friday by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle that quarterback Joe Kapp had not signed a regulation contract and was ineligible to practice with the squad.

Although Rozelle emphasized that Kapp was not a free agent, the 6-foot-2, 215-pound quarterback said after returning to his home in Milton, Mass., that he wanted to make some telephone calls. Team President Billy Sullivan, asked if it was possible that Kapp had played his last game for the Patriots, replied, "It is."

Earlier, a spokesman for the New England team said that Kapp "is fully satisfied with the money and he's fully satisfied with the contract. He's just refusing to sign it and he's acting on the advice of his attorney."

Olsen, who never played with the Patriots because of an injured right knee, was declared a free agent by Rozelle because of the faulty paperwork involved and earlier this week the former All-America lineman at Utah State signed with the Los Angeles Rams, joining his brother Merlin.

In the case of Kapp, who came to the Patriots last year after playing out his option at Minnesota, a spokesman for Rozelle's office in New York said it was "normal" for teams to submit a temporary agreement to the commissioner. However, this must be followed by a standard player contract.

"We asked the Patriots to have him sign the standard contract and when he declined, the Commissioner ruled that he would not be permitted to practice until it was signed," the spokesman said.

Another big name in the NFL figured in the early season news Friday when the Chicago Bears announced that nine-year veteran Ronnie Bull has been placed on waivers. Bull, a running back who was the league's Rookie of the Year in 1962, ranks fifth among the Bears in all-time rushing with 2,871 yards in 787 carries.

Linebacker Chuck Howley, a 13-year veteran with the Cowboys, failed to report to the Dallas camp at Thousand Oaks, Calif., and there was speculation he would retire from football. Running back Duane Thomas, embroiled in a salary dispute, also failed to report.

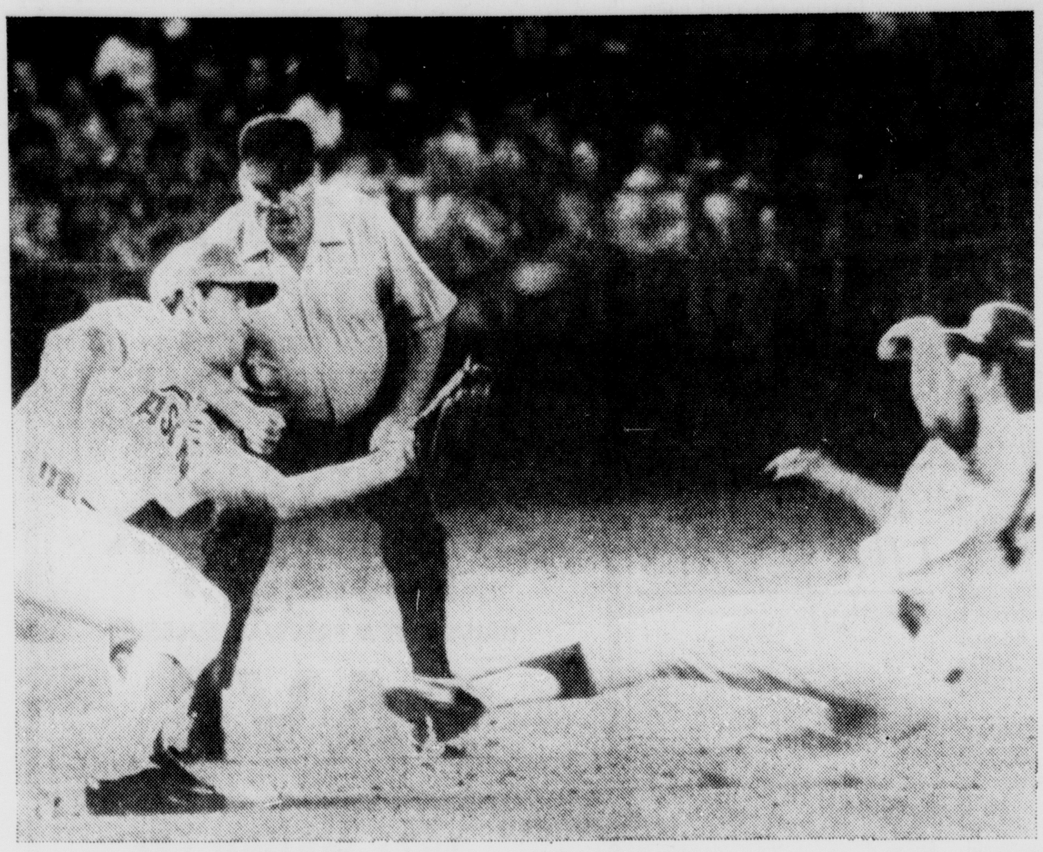
"I talked to Chuck yesterday," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He was still up in the air as to whether he was going to play or retire."

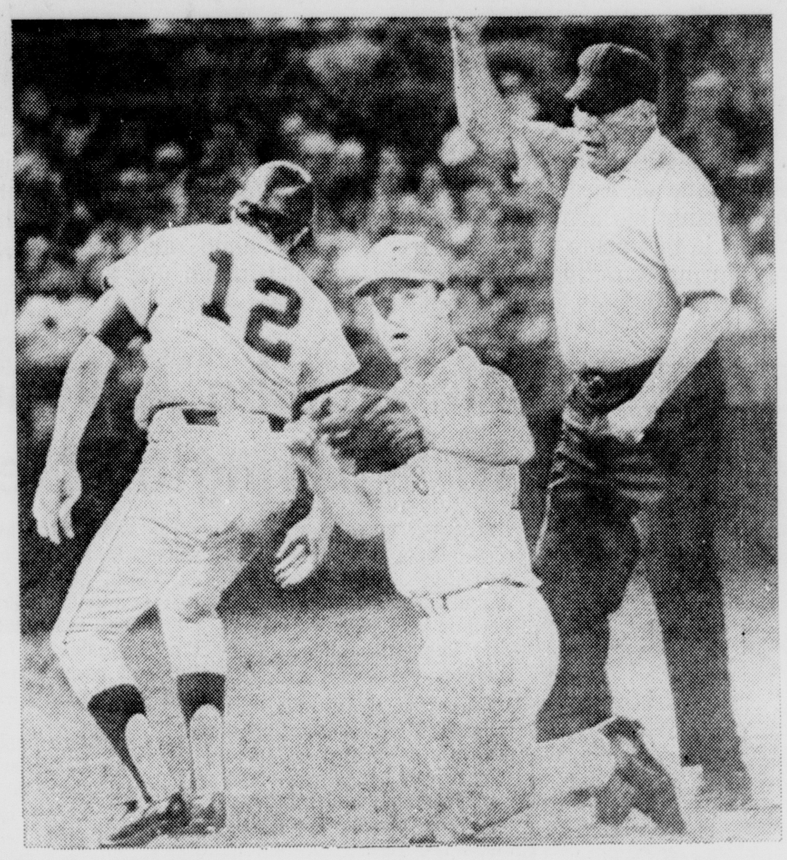
In other news from the training camps:

—All-Pro defensive end Bubba Smith reported to the Baltimore Colts camp in Westminster, Md., after losing an argument over whether he could renegotiate his contract.

—The Cleveland Browns released three rookie players — quarterback Mike Cilek of Iowa, cornerback Willie Green of Western Kentucky and free agent Joe William of Maryland State.

—Bart Starr limbered up his arm on the sidelines while three other Green Bay quarterbacks —Zeke Bratkowski, Rick Norton and Frank Patrick — threw pass patterns to rookies.





A RARE AND BEAUTIFUL PLAY

Houston Astros third baseman Doug Radar waited, ball in glove, as Ken Boswell of the New York Mets slid into him in the third inning last night in the Astrodome. As umpire Al Barlick called Boswell out, Radar's face expressed disbelief. He had just completed a triple play. Shortstop Roger Metzger began the plan by snaring a line drive on one bounce near second base. He stepped on the bag to force Tommy Agee, and threw to first to get Cleon Jones. First baseman Denis Menke then fired to Radar, who nailed Boswell. (UPI Telephoto)

Vida's 18th: One-Hitter

OAKLAND (UPI) —Fairly soon, lefthanded pitcher Vida Blue will be able to spend the two dimes that have been bobbing in his trousers all season.

The phenomenal lefthanded pitcher for the Oakland Athletics allowed only one hit—a leadoff single by Tony Taylor in the fourth inning—to shut out Detroit 4-0 before 24,434 appreciative fans in the Coliseum Friday night.

That gave the 21-year-old hurler from Mansfield, La., his 18th win of the season, tops in the big leagues. It also was his first one-hitter this year. It also extended his string of scoreless innings to 26, including 11 against California in a game the A's eventually won in the 20th last Friday.

Before the season started, Blue put two dimes in the pocket of his baseball trousers as a constant reminder he wanted to win 20 games.

"I was just coasting ... trying to keep in the groove and maintain my rhythm," added Blue, who has lost three games. "It wasn't my best game but it was all right.

"But really, I don't care if I give up on hit, no hits, five hits or 10 hits. Winning the ballgame, that's all that counts."

Blue then put on his Joe Namath sweatshirt and went out to a party with rookie leftfielder George Hendrick, who is three months younger than Blue and provided the big bat for Oakland Friday night.

Hendrick drilled a double with the bases loaded off starter and loser Les Cain of Richmond, now 5-4, to highlight a four-run first inning for the A's. That gave Hendrick six hits in his last 11 at-bats and boosted his batting average to .364.

"Hendrick will be with us the rest of the year," said A's manager Dick Williams. "He's going to be a good one. He's solid and he certainly produced tonight."

Another Save For Johnson

CINCINNATI (UPI) —Jerry Johnson made sure lightning didn't strike twice in the same place.

The San Francisco Giants' ace reliever came on for the fading Gaylord Perry Friday night to quench a ninth-inning Cincinnati threat and save a 4-3 win for the Giants.

On Thursday, Johnson wasn't as fortunate as he threw a home run ball to Tony Perez with two-out in the bottom of the ninth to give the Reds a 2-1 win.

Perry was sailing along with a 4-1 lead Friday night when he walked Lee May, then Perez tripled and Tommy Helms singled to pull the Reds to within one run.

Johnson stopped the rally by striking out Jimmy Stewart and Hal McRae to notch his 12th save and preserve Perry's eighth victory against eight defeats.

The Giants jumped on Reds' starter Gary Nolan for three runs in the first inning. Chris Speier doubled, Willie Mays singled, Willie McCovey reached base on an intentional walk and Dick Dietz poked a two-run double.

Mays, who may have pulled out of a long slump with his three hits for the night, doubled in the fourth and scored on a two-bagger by Ken Henderson.

The Reds' George Foster, a former Giant, homered in the fourth.

San Francisco will wind up the series with the Reds today and then move on to Atlanta for a doubleheader Sunday.

Nichols, Lotz In Deadlock

CHICAGO (UPI)—Bobby Nichols, who couldn't hold a lead predicted half in jest today that he'll be the winner of the $150,000 Western Open on Sunday.

Nichols headed into the third round today in a deadlock with Dick Lotz for the lead, each four under par with 138. But Nichols could have been alone in front, had he been able to par his last hole.

Lotz was in the clubhouse, after his second straight 69, when Nichols headed down the fairway on the last hole, five under par, and needing only another par for the lead. He knew he could be in front if he parred.

"I wasn't concerned about the scoreboard today," he said. "That's for Sunday. I noticed the board and I knew somebody was four under, but I didn't know who.

"I'll certainly look at the board Sunday," he added. "And I'll see you all Sunday night. This is my second time here, and I like it."

Nichols, who was 13th on the money winning list last year with more than $103,000, said he bogied the last hole because "it was the toughest today. I think these are the narrowest fairways I ever played in my life."

He got a poor drive on the last hole and his second shot went into a trap. His explosion was short and he two putted from 30 feet to fall into the tie with Lotz. Still Nichols had the best round of the day, a 67.

Lotz, 6th in earnings last year with $125,000, said he felt "I lost my timing the last six or seven holes. I did some scrambling but I guess that's the way to win a tournament and it might as well be me."

Lotz and Nichols held only a one stroke lead on Bruce Crampton, the first day leader, and Jerry Heard, both at 139, while Babe Hiskey, Dale Douglass and Phil Rodgers were tied at 140, Tommy Aaron and Bert Greene at 141 and Frank Beard, Larry White and Mac McLendon at 142.

Seventy-three players qualified to play the final two rounds, shooting 148 and under. Among those who just made the cut at 148 were Lee Hrevino, who won the U.S. Canadian, and British Opens in his last four tournaments, defending champion Hugh Royer, and Miller Barber, who finished second the last time the Western Open was held on Olympia Fields' north course, a par 71 6,749 yard layout. Billy Casper also made the cut at 145.

ROOKIES LOSE

49ers Fail On And Off Field

GOLETA, Calif. (UPI) — While the San Francisco 49er rookies were getting their first test of the summer training camp, 49er general manager Jack White was trying to settle the contract dispute with San Francisco's top draft choice.

Both the rookies and White failed.

In a scrimmage Friday against the Dallas Cowboys rookies, the 49er rookies, along with a few veterans and taxi squad personnel, were whipped, 34-7.

White returned from Dayton, Ohio, without former Ohio State star Tim Anderson's signature on a contract.

"It's up to them now," White said after five hours of talks with the defensive back and his agent, Tony Razzano.

Dallas quarterbacks Steve Goepel, a 12th round choice from Colgate, and Frank Holmes, a free agent from Grambling, combined to complete 16 of 20 passes for 334 yards and three touchdowns in the scrimmage.

The only bright spot for the 49ers was second round choice Joe Orduna of Nebraska. Orduna scored San Francisco's only touchdown on an eight-yard pass from quarterback Buster O'Brien

Huge Field For Marin Jr. Tennis

The largest field in its history, more than 325 entries, will compete beginning Monday at four San Rafael locations in the 18th annual Marin Junior Tennis Tournament.

Albert Park, San Rafael High School, Boyd Park and Gerstle Park will be the scenes of action for the tourney, which is being sponsored by the San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department and the Independent-Journal. Singles and doubles events will be played throughout the week, culminating with finals on Saturday.

More than 200 singles entries had been received by the registration deadline Wednesday afternoon, according to the park and rec department. The field will include such season Northern California tournament veterans as Gary Walters of Tiburon, John and Lisa Beritzhoff of Mill Valley and Steve and Diane DeMartini of Greenbrae.

Beritzhoff and DeMartini, both playing in boys 16, should face each other in the best matchup of the tourney. Walters, who led Redwood High School to a perfect season last year, is expected to coast to the boys 18 championship.

On the distaff side, Miss DeMartini is the player to watch as she tries, at age 13, to win the girls 16 singles crown. Last year she beat Miss Beritzhoff for the girls 14 title, and then teamed with her for the doubles championship in that age group. They should have no trouble repeating that victory.

Miss Beritzhoff will remain in girls 14 for singles play, and should be unbeatable.

Other players of consequence in the field include John Baroni of Mill Valley in boys 14, and Mike O'Neill of Mill Valley and Jim Isaacs of San Geronimo in boys 12, highly regarded girls include Meredith Mills of San Rafael and Robin Dix of Kentfield in girls 18, Debbie O'Neill of Mill Valley and Lisa Sockolov of San Rafael in girls 16, and Carmelita De Urioste of Mill Valley in girls 14.

A Sweep Of Honors In TransPac

It's Windward Passage the first to finish the 2,225 mile race, and it's undoubtedly Windward Passage the winner of the overall fleet standings.

The apparent clean sweep of all three categories in the 26th biennial race is the first ever by a Class "A" yacht, and the first by any one boat in 35 years.

Only two of the 54 yachts still at sea have any kind of a chance to win the overall handicap honors.

The 40-foot sloop Argonaut out of Santa Barbara and the 36-foot L'Allegro from the Richmond Yacht Club could conceivably still make it, but the odds are against them.

Argonaut must cross the Diamond Head finish line by 5 a.m. HST today, and the latest estimate of her arrival by Transpac officials here is 8:48 tonight.

L'Allegro has until 1 p.m. to make it, but the best Transpac estimates put her across the finish line at 8 p.m.

Raider Rookies 'Prepared'

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (UPI) — After two days of summer training camp, Oakland Raider coach John Madden already has high praise for the rookies who are battling for spots on his team.

"This group of rookies is the most prepared that we've ever had for the opening of camp," Madden said.

Madden attributed much of the preparation to four rookie camps held during the spring by the Raiders.

"In other years the rookies were ill at ease, uncomfortable in their surroundings," he said, "But this group has four camps under their belt, and I think they're ready."

The veterans report to camp Sunday. Quarterback Daryle Lamonica, however, may not report since he is having contract difficulties.

Leahy's Condition Remains Critical

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)— Former Notre Dame football coach Frank Leahy remained in critical condition under intensive care Friday at St. Vincent Hospital.

Leahy, 62, underwent abdominal surgery Thursday. A hospital spokesman said Leahy's condition was "unchanged" from earlier reports.

BLOWUP OVER FINE

Wynn Threatens Houston Writer

HOUSTON (UPI)—Jim Wynn, the Houston Astros' controversial "toy cannon," and manager Harry Walker cursed each other in the clubhouse Friday night after Walker fined Wynn $100 for swining at a three-balls, no-strikes pitch in the first inning.

Wynn then threatened to beat up Houston sports editor John Wilson, standing nearby, if reports of the shouting match appeared in the newspapers.

The cursing began when Walker called Wynn into his clubhouse office and fined hm for swinging at the pitch with bases loaded, no one out and the score tied 1-1.

Wynn popped out to second base.

New York Mets pitcher Nolan Ryan had walked three men in the inning, and then threw three straight balls to Wynn.

"I called him in to try to talk to him, and he wouldn't listen," Walker said afterward. He said Wynn blew up, started cursing and stalked out of the office.

Walker followed him out, shouting, "I'm not going to take that stuff off you or anyone else."

"Why can't you shut up," Wynn answered, and both men hurled simultaneous obscenities at each other.

Wynn, who makes about $70,000 a year, is in a season-long slump, hitting .221 with only four home runs.

The Astros' won the game 9-4.

Wilson, a veteran sports writer for the Houston Chronicle, was standing in a corner of the clubhouse while Wynn and Walker fussed.

Wynn turned to Wilson, saying, "I better not see anything about this in the paper or I'll beat the — out of you."

"It will be in the paper," Wilson said.

"Then I'll beat the ——out of you if you ever come back in this clubhouse," Wynn said.

"I'll be back," Wilson said.

Wynn's teammate and personal friend, Joe Morgan, gave Wynn's account of what happened in Walker's office.

"He said Walker called him in and told him he was fining him $100," Morgan said. "He then said Walker told him "I don't want to hear a wod out of you." Harry can blow up awfully quick, and he started cursing and ranting.

"That's when Wynn blew up. That's the way Jim says it happened," Morgan said.

Ali Goes 20 Rounds In Workout

HOUSTON (UPI) — Former peavyweight champ Muhammid Ali put in what he figured was his hardest working day in five years Friday and said even he himself was surprised at his good condition.

"I'm surprised and happy to see myself in this good of shape," he said after boxing 20 rounds in preparation for his July 26 bout with Jimmy Ellis.

"I thought maybe after 12 rounds I'd quit and say that all that talk about going 20 rounds was for publicity, but I felt so good after 12 that I wanted to go on."

Ali went five rounds on a heavy bag and speed bag and then boxed five rounds each with two spar mates.

"I worked enough to take tomorrow off," Ali said. "I'm in better shape now than I was for (Joe) Frazier. See my belly. It's disappearing.

Ellis, meanwhile, worked eight rounds Friday.

"I was in shape when I came here," Ellis said. "I'm not trying to get in shape. I've got it together now. Maybe he (Ali) is still trying to get it together."

Trans-Miss Defender Wins Again

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Allen Miller says it would "really be a thrill" to win the Trans-Mississippi Golf Championship three years in a row.

And the 22-year-old University of Georgia star seems to have a good shot at that third straight title as he goes into the semifinals today of the 65th annual event.

"I think my chances look a lot better for winning a third straight now than they did at the beginning of the week," Miller said Friday after he had won a third round and quarterfinal match.

Miller, the first two-time winner since Jack Nicklaus in 1958-59, took a narrow 1-up victory over Greg Trompas, San Diego, in third round action. He came back in the afternoon to defeat Bob Karlovich of Tulsa, Okla., 3 and 1, Friday afternoon.

Miller will play Artie McNickle of Sacramento, Calif., today in a semifinal match on the 6,795-yard par 72 Spyglass Hill course. In the other semifinal match, Barry Jaeckel of Los Angeles, who upset co-favorite Tom Kite, Jr., of Austin, Tex., Friday, meets Alan Tapie, Downey, Calif.

Jaeckel, the 22-year-old golfer who caddies for Dean Martin as a sideline, threw 1-under par golf at Kite — including birdies on the 16th and 17th holes — for a 2-1 win in the third round.

Bad Pitching Means More Double Plays

Cincinnati — Chris Speier and Tito Fuentes have been turning over double plays at an admirable clip this season. All Giant fans are aware of that although the precise team total of DPs at All-Star time might have escaped their attention.

It was 93 in 90 games. Fuentes at second base participated in 60 of them. Speier, the rookie shortstop, had a hand in 58.

However, neither Fuentes nor Speier is looking forward to setting any DP records this season. Now, that may seem incompatible with the natural ambitions of a couple of classy glove men. But it makes good sense.

DOUBLE PLAYS are unnecessary if pitchers are keeping traffic off the base paths. In other words, DPs are directly related to the traffic permitted by pitchers. For instance, last season the Montreal Expos wound up with a total of 193 DPs. Expo pitchers permitted an inordinate amount of traffic last year.

Thus, in not looking forward to any team DP records this year, Fuentes and Speier are hoping that pitching of the Giants improves during the second half of the season. The team pitching was beautiful at the outset of the 1971 campaign but between Memorial Day and July Fourth it left much to be desired, particularly that of Juan Marichal and Gaylord Perry.

Neither Fuentes nor Speier would be so crass as to relate ineffective team pitching to double plays. Both are diplomats, especially Fuentes who has a charming way about him and an easy way with words.

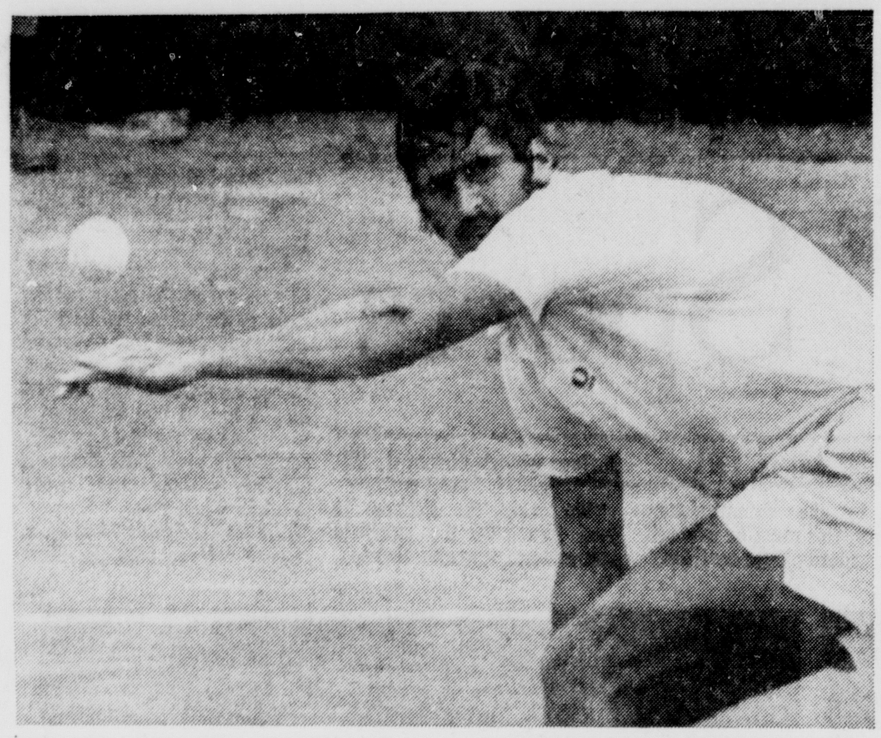
"I LIKE to be everybody's friend," said Tito. "Sure, I know all pitchers like DPs in sticky situations. The fellows that turn over the double plays for pitchers are their best friends. See what I mean? I like to be everybody's friend. I don't like to see my pitching teammates in trouble. But if they are in trouble I hope I can help them with a DP.

"Records? DP records? They mean nothing if you don't win a pennant. That's the kind of record I want — a pennant record."

Overlooked in Cincinnati's runaway with the 1970 National League pennant was the DP defense of the Reds. Johnny Bench, Tony Perez, Pete Rose, Lee May and Bobby Tolan grabbed the headlines with their big bats. They powered the Reds to the 1970 pennant. No matter how many runs Red pitchers gave up, Bench & Co. would get more.

Yet, the Red defense was a most important element in the Red runaway. The Reds turned over 173 double plays. Tommy Helms led all second basemen in the National League. He participated in 107 of Cincinnati's DPs. Woody Woodward and Dave Concepcion at shortstop had a hand in 137, Woodward 86, Concepcion 51.

So, even if the Giant pitching staff does have trouble in the 72 games during the second half of the 1971 baseball campaign, there still is the DP combo of Speier and Fuentes to keep things in perspective.



WHO NEEDS A RACKET? John Newcombe of Australia appears to be using his arm as a tennis racket in this photo taken yesterday during a match against Andres Gimeno of Spain in the Washington Star tournament. Newcombe's racket was in his other hand, and he used to to beat Gimeno, 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Red Hot Cubs Only Team With A Shot At The Bucs

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Chicago Cubs have emerged as the main challenger to the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League Eastern Division race, but they may not get close enough to force a showdown.

The Cubs, who finished second to the Pirates last season, scored their 14th triumph in their last 20 games Friday by downing the Philadelphia Phillies 11-2, and have moved into sole possession of second place in the NL East.

However, the Cubs still trail the Pirates by 10 games as Pittsburgh ran its winning streak to eight games Friday night by edging the San Diego Padres, 2-1, on Bob Robertson's home run in the eighth inning.

The New York Mets, who were expected to battle the Pirates for the division title, continued their downhill slide by losing to the Houston Astros 9-4 for their 12th setback in their last 14 games. The Mets trail the Pirates by 11 games.

In other NL action, San Francisco edged Cincinnati 4-3 to move six games ahead in the Western Division, Atlanta topped Los Angeles 3-1 and St. Louis blanked Montreal 6-0.

Ferguson Jenkins coasted to his 14th victory of the year on a seven-hitter and also hit a homer as the Cubs tagged four pitchers for 16 hits. Glenn Beckert led the Chicago assault with four singles and Ron Santo chipped in with a two-run homer. Willie Montanez hit his 18th homer for the Phillies.

Robertson's home run was a titanic smash off the concrete facade in front of the top left field deck at Three Rivers Stadium and broke up a pitcher's duel between the Pirates' Bob Johnson and the Padres' Steve Arlin. Johnson allowed only six hits in going the distance to even his record at 6-6. Nate Colbert accounted for San Diego's run with his 20th homer of the year.

The Astros collected 14 hits and also pulled off the first triple play in their history in defeating the Mets. Bob Watson and Roger Metzger each had three hits for the Astros.

Ralph Garr of the Braves was thrown out of his first big league game but it came too late to help the Dodgers.

Newcombe Advances In Washington Net

WASHINGTON (upi) —Top-seeded John Newcombe eased past Chile's Andre Gimeno Friday to gain a semi-final singles berth in the $50,000 Washington Star International tennis tournament.

Newcombe, of Australia, this year's men's champion at Wimbledon, was pushed to three sets before by Gimeno, who won a stormy match Thursday from Cliff Richey. The scores were 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.

Newcombe meets Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., in one semi-final match Saturday. Riessen beat Ismail El Shafei of Egypt, 6-1, 6-7, 6-2, to gain a semi-final spot.

The other semi-final match will pit Stan Smith of Pasadena, Calif., against Australia's Ken Rosewall. In quarter-final play, Smith beat South Africa's Cliff Drysdale, 0-6, 7-6, 6-1 and Rosewall breezed past Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield, Calif., 61, 6-4.

In quarter finals doubles play, John Alexander and Phil Dent beat Pierre Barthes and Rod Laver, 6-3, 6-4; Bob Carmichael and Ray Ruffles defeated Bill Bowery and Owen Davidson, 6-3, 6-1; Newcombe and Ray Moore squeezed past Gimeno and Roger Taylor, 1-6, 7-5, 7-6, and Riessen and Tom Okker beat Bob Lutz and Charles Pasarell, 6-2, 6-4.

PETTY FAVORED

Qualifying Today For Trenton 300

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI)— Buddy Baker, having the most successful year of his career, attempts to take the pole today in a borrowed Dodge during qualifying for Sunday's Trenton 300, last of NASCAR's threerace Northern series.

However, since joining the Petty team this year, he has had little except success. Competing only on the super tracks, he has earned about $80,000 and won the Rebel 400 at Darlington. In eight races, he finished no worse than sixth and was runnerup in the Daytona 400 and Ontario 500.

Other drivers who will try to qualify today include Richard Petty, seeking his third victory on the Northern tour in his Plymouth; Bobby Allison, who was the hottest driver on the NASCAR circuit recently with four consecutive major speedway victories in his Holman-Moody Ford; Pete Hamilton in a Cotton Owens Dodge and James Hylton in a Ford.

Since the Dodge and Plymouth drivers turned to the wedge engine to thwart Ford's horsepower advantage, Baker says, "The racing is the most even it's been in three or four years."

For the Trenton race, Baker will be driving a Dodge borrowed from Neil Castles because his own car is being prepared for the Atlanta 500.

Known as a charger in the past, Baker credits the Petty team with changing his philosophy somewhat.

"I learned that the driver who leads the first half of the race usually isn't the winner," he explains. "I pick up now on what other drivers do who are leading. If they have to pit for tires, I watch to find out why and learn by what they're doing.

"The Pettys are the most professional team in racing," he adds. "They win because they've been doing it longer than anybody else. When another team might tighten a nut, they'll double nut. That's the difference."

Petty won the first two races of the Northern tour at Malta, N.Y., and Islip, N.Y., to gain his 11th and 12th victories of the season and run his earnings to $159,050 this year.

ONE ROUND LEFT

Two Tied For Lead In Publinks Golf

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)—Bob Blomberg was playing so well it scared him. Fred Haney didn't feel he was playing well at all. But the two ended up tied for the lead entering today's final round of the United States Golf Association National Public Links Tournament.

Blomberg, a "young 26," from Alameda, Calif., carded a one-under par 71 over the Papago golf course in Friday's third round for a 54-hole total of 220. Haney, 22, a University of Oregon graduate from Forest Grove, Ore., had a 75 to deadlock the lead at four-over par.

One stroke back were Lee Carter of Dallas, Tex., Archie Dadian of South Milwauke Wis., and Gary Balliet of Rochester, Mich. At 222 were Gary Navario of Wichita, Kan., Rodney Velasquez of Hayward, Calif., and Tom Olson of Phoenix.

Blomberg, the most talkative and colorful player on the course with his large straw hat, cigar in his mouth and wet towel flung across his back, said after his 71, "I'm just having a ball. My roommates and I filled out scorecards predicting our rounds before teeing off. I put down a 72. Maybe that helped."

He added, "My putting was so good it scared me. I shanked a wedge on the 12th, hit up from behind the trap and sank a 10-foot putt for my par—that's the kind of day it was."

Haney, aiming for a chance on the professional golfers association tour late this summer, was surprised to be tied for the lead. "I just don't think I've played that well. I had a lot of three putts. The wind was a little stronger, and the pin placements were especially tough."

The tall, slender Haney said he was anxious to see the pin positions for the final round. "They can make this course as hard as they want by the placements," he said. "If they're any more difficult than today (Friday), 74 might be a good score."

Blomberg and Fred Cook of Cypress, Calif., were the only players to break par Friday at 71, and Eddie Post of Fort Smith, Ark., was the only one to match it.

Balliet, the second round leader, and Dadian, who had been tied with Haney for second at the end of 18 holes, fell victims to inconsistency as they finished in the last twosome. Balliet came in in par to finish at 77 after going out in five-over 41. Dadian, who made the turn at 40, toured the back nine at even-par 36 for a 76.

Should today's round end with a tie, an 18-hole playoff will be held unday, to be followed by sudden death if necessary.

PANAFRICA - U.S. TRACK

Confusion Costs A Victory

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI)—Mirus Ifter knows only one language —Amharic—and it didn't help him much Friday in the 5,000 meter race at the Panafrica-United States International Track meet.

Ifter, assigned to the Ethopian Army contingent that guards Emperor Haile Selassie, was hoping that his coach would be able to shout insructions to him during the race. But Ifter didn't see his coach.

He misunderstood the signal for the beginning of the final lap, a gun shot, and that, combined with the roar of the crowd of 18,000, led him to believe he had defeated American record holder Steve Prefontaine in the 3.11-mile race.

When Ifter heard the gun, instead of the bell he is accustomed to in Ethiopia, he slowed down, stopped and then laid down on the infield grass.

Prefontaine, who was trailing Ifter by some 25-yards when the Ethiopian dropped out, went on to win in 13:57.6.

Meet officials conferred after the race and decided to give Ifter a watch in recognition for "a remarkable performance."

Following the race, Prefontaine said he thought Ifter's misfortune was "disheartening," and that he had anticipated a great duel with the Ethiopian in the final lap.

Only one African was able to place first Friday in a men's event as the American team built up a 54-30 point lead.

Robert Ouko of Kenya, who hopes to attend nearby North Carolina Central University, upset Juris Luzines of the U.S. Marines and American record holder Ken Swenson of the Army with a 1:46.7 time in the 800 meter run.

The American wome, faring almost as well as the men, held a 49-32 lead over a team of female athletes from around the world.

In Friday's competition Rod Millburn of Southern University, who shaved two-tenths of a second off track's longest standing record last month with a 13.0 clocking in the 120-yard high hurdles ran a 13.39 in the equivalent 110 meter hurdles to beat Ron Draper of North Carolina Central.

John Smith, former UCLA student and holder of the pending world mark of 44.5 in the 440-yard dash, outsprinted Darwin Bond from the University of Tennessee in the 400 meters.

In field events, Oregon's Bouncy Moore took the long jump with a leap of 26-feet, one-quarter inch and shotputter Karl Salb won with a toss of 14-feet, 10 and 3-4 inches.

Heading today's action on Duke University's rubberized asphalt track was a match among Kipchoge Kieno of Kenya and Americans John Baker and Jim Crawford in the 1,500 meter event.

Kieno, who has turned in the year's fastest mile, garnered a gold medal in the 1968 Olympics by beating Jim Ryan.

Sid Sink, holder of the pending American record of 8:26.4 in the 3,000 meter steeple chase, was to battle Oregon's Mike Manly and Kenya's Ben Jipcho and Amos Biwott in the 1.87 mile race over hurdles and a water jump.

Stewart Favored At Silverstone

SILVERSTONE, England (UPI)—Scotsman Jackie Stewart, a winner at Silverstone in his last appearance here, hoped to move closer to his second world drivers' championship today in the $96,000 British Grand Prix.

However, the 32-year-old driver had to share the favorite's role with Switzerland's Clay Regazzoni, who won the pole position Friday while shattering Stewart's official lap record of one minute, 19.1 seconds with a clocking of 1:18.1. This averaged out to 134.92 miles per hour over the 2.92-mile airfield circuit.

Regazzoni, driving a 12cylinder Ferrari 312B2, achieved his record time in the first practice session of the day and although Stewart, in an eight-cylinder Tyrell-Ford, matched the low time in his final trial, the Swiss driver retained the pole position for registering it first.

Lassie fired his series at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael and Treadway shot his score at Greenbrae Lanes. Penny Tauscher rolled a 620 and Lu Sharp a 619, both at Greenbrae, to highlight women's scores.

In the Warriors match game eliminations going on at Castle Lanes in San Francisco, Ed Henry of San Rafael is in fifth place at the cutoff mark. The top 57 begin two more weeks of play before the cut to the top 16. Henry is averaging 206 after 28 games.

In the women's Warriors section, Marilyn Epidendio and Penny Tauscher, both of San Rafael, survived the cut to 28 women, Marilyn ninth with a 184 average and Penny 20 at 177.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, July 17, the 198th day of 1971.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Venus, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury and Jupiter. Those born on this day are under the sign of Cancer.

British clergyman Isaac Watts was born July 17, 1674.

On this day in history:

In 1948 southern Democrats from 13 states organized a states' rights party to oppose the Truman-Barkley ticket. The states' right party presidential ticket was headed by Strom Thurmond.

In 1955 Arco, Idaho, a town of some 1,300 people, became the first community in the world to receive all light and power from atomic energy.

In 1968 a National Airlines jetliner with 64 aboard was skyjacked to Cuba.

A thought for today: Marcus Tullius Cicero said, "If you aspire to the highest place, it is no disgrace to stop at the second or even the third."

Budget Planning Aid In Apparel Shopping

NEW YORK (UPI) —Family budget planning, careful shopping and buying at sales enable the family to be outfitted well without the creation of a financial disaster, say home economists.

The clothing bill is affected by the time of year the shopping is done. If a family member want a new outfit, it might be best to wait until a good price is announced before buying it.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Millions Of Players Could Use Reminders Of Game Principles

Bridge is played on many levels, and the play that is routine to one person may be brilliant to another. I would apologize for the simplicity of today's hand but for one fact: the actual declarer was an expert of some 20 years' experience. If he could make the blunder that cost him a grand slam, there may be millions of other players who could use a reminder of an important principle of play.

Opening lead — ♠ 8

LEADS JACK

West led the jack of hearts as a feeble deceptive maneuver. I must confess that I made this witless but harmless lead, hoping my partner could ruff, wanting to make a safe lead in any case, but not wanting to reveal the true heart position.

Declarer, a very experienced player, won in dummy with the king of hearts and planned the play. He could eventually discard a diamond on the ace of hearts, but he would still have to ruff one diamond. That meant that he could not draw trumps.

TAKES DIAMONDS

With this thought in mind South took the top diamonds at once and led a third diamond, planning to ruff it in the dummy. Something funny happened to his hand on the way to dummy's nine of spades. I ruffed the third diamond with the ten of spades, and the grand slam was down.

DANGEROUS GENERALITY

South indulged in a dangerous generality when he decided that he could not afford to draw trumps. He could not afford to draw three rounds of trumps, since then dummy would not have a trump to ruff one diamond. But South could afford to draw two rounds of trumps.

LEAD ACE, KING

After winning the first trick with the king of hearts, declarer should lead out the ace and king of spades. Only then can he afford to tackle the diamonds. When South leads the third diamond, West is out of diamonds but is also out of trumps.

South safely ruffs the diamond in dummy, returns to his hand by ruffing a low heart with the queen of spades and then draws the last trump with the jack of spades. The rest is easy.

DAILY QUESTION

♠ - A K Q J 6
♦ - A 8 5 3
♣ - A Q J.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid only one spade.

Quebec Installs Nuclear Reactor

TROIS- RIVIERES, Quebec (UPI)—Quebec's first nuclear power station, whose nuclear reactor is the first in the world that can be fueled with natural uranium and cooled by ordinary water, is in operation.

The station, four years under construction, is located on the St. Lawrence River 10 miles east of here. It is expected to reach its full power output of 250,000 kilowatts by the end of 1971.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

THE EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

'Parent Power' Seen By Different Eyes

"WE WISH THE public would take more interest in what we are doing. We wish the public would make its views known on the questions before us."

So runs the litany of local elected office holders, especially school board members.

It is not surprising, then, that Elizabeth M. Deedy's valediction, after 17 years service on Marin school boards, was a plea to the citizenry to take more interest in what goes on in public education.

During her 13 years on the College of Marin board of trustees, she served as chairman more than half the time. Earlier, she served four years on the Mill Valley School District board.

During the combined periods of nearly two decades, she displayed an intense and continuing interest in public education problems and a dedication of time and energy seldom seen.

You might say she was a veritable pillar of the public education establishment.

Her farewell message was presented to the annual meeting of the Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau, which could probably be described as a bastion of the establishment.

SOCITY'S DROPOUTS would have the world believe that the establishment is quite well satisfied with itself. If such dropouts had listened to Mrs. Deedy they would know that its leaders are profuse in their criticism of the establishment. She had criticism, sometimes direct and sometimes implied, for the legislature, the press, and individual citizens for their shortcomings in dealing with public education.

In sum, the thrust of the comments was to urge greater citizen influence in the solution of problems of public education.

IN THE JULY issue of the Tamalpais High School District Alumni News, a Drake High School alumnus vows not to subject his newborn child to the established educational system.

The Alumni News reprints a lucubration by Michael Rossman, 1956 Drake graduate who subsequently was a participant in the so-called Free Speech Movement at Berkeley.

Upon the birth of his first child, Rossman wrote his rambling, sometimes diffuse, "declaration" of intent to provide for its own education. "Our parents were forced to abandon their children to the part-time uses of the state," wrote Rossman, vowing not to do the same to his own child.

"We ourselves must be directly involved in what and how our children learn," Rossman declared.

(That part sounds like a favorable, affirmative response to Mrs. Deedy's plea that citzens take more interest in their schools.)

ON THE ONE HAND, Rossman indicates that to accomplish his end, "We must grow our own;" i.e. provide personally for his child's education.

On the other hand, he acknowledges that "no couple can cope alone even with their own relation. We learn in a larger community. To free our young, many must come together. . ."

Thus Rossman implies that a "new school" is the solution.

"Learning Power to the People," he concludes.

THE PARALLELS between the comments of the establishment's Mrs. Deedy and the revolution's Mike Rossman are striking.

Mrs. Deedy's suggested course of action inevitably would tailor the schools to the wishes of the people.

To turn one's back on Mrs. Deedy's suggestions for reforming the system would be, in today's idiom, a copout.

The approach suggested by Rossman and his ilk is just that, a copout.

Fellow Raccoon Fans

Bit by bit we learn more about that fascinating creature, the raccoon. Fellow raccoon fans phone or write to us giving us the benefit of their observations, doubts and experiences. There must be thousands of people feeding raccoons in Marin today.

Several weeks ago, we wondered in writing what had happened to "our raccoons." The balance of the response was that this was not unusual. Expert opinion at the Louise Boyd Junior Museum and the Marin County Humane Society told us that such sudden disappearances are not unusual, that the raccoons often take to the hills in late spring and early summer. The dominant theme was that raccoons are individualists. They are subject to distemper, but their natural resistance is such that it seldom reaches epidemic proportions.

So, if we alarmed you about the disappearing raccoons, we're sorry. They are apt to operate on whim and fancy. Signs of their unique charm and high intelligence. Individualism is the raccoon way of life.

Jays, Crows & Squirrels

Few birds are as loudmouthed as the jay family and their cousins, the crows. Well, this year our Marin neighborhood has them all, California jays, Steller's jays and crows. The combination makes for raucous gatherings.

It also seems that we have more than our usual quota of squirrels in our backyard bay tree this season. When we see the branches of the tree shake and hear a loud churring sound, we know if we watch carefully we will catch a glimpse of bright eyes or a bushy gray tail through the foliage.

With all these alleged enemies about, one would think our vicinity would suffer from a shortage of songbirds. But, here too, we are well supplied. This leads us to conjecture about the strange ways of Nature.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to the Golden Gate Bridge District's Sausalito-to-San Francisco ferryboat for an almost incredible performance record for the first half of this year. The Golden Gate made almost 3,500 trips, and only one was cancelled for maintenance.

BOUQUET to Stanley H. Friese, Marin County assistant superintendent of schools, on his appointment as chancellor of the public schools of Alaska.

BRICKBATS to those jurisdictions that are raising tax rates while at the same time receiving windfalls from the old rates because of increase in the assessment ratio.

'And All The Trumpets Sounded For Him . . .'

Supervisors Should Cut From The Top

I was away at the time of the recent budget hearings, and was shocked upon returning to learn that the board of supervisors had voted themselves a generous salary raise of $100, thus making their salary beginning August, 1971, in the amount of $1,100 per month, for part-time work. In addition to this, each board member has office staff to do much of the work. Does your conscience bother you in the fact that the home owners and other small property owners in Marin are being taxed and taxed — out of their homes — so you gentlemen can spend and spend — giving no heed to the fact that we are going through a recession, and the philosophy of public bodies should be to cut expenses, rather than to raise? Or don't you have a conscience? I think not, judging from the attitude "let the public be damned, and if they can't pay through the nose, let them move out of the county." This is exactly what many of our residents are doing.

The board members were receiving $800 per month for part-time work, in 1967 — and this was raised to $1,000 in November 1969 — and now another $100?

My practical suggestion is: Give a 20 per cent cut to all department heads. Then cut everyone else who makes $1,000 or more by 10 per cent. How's that for an idea?

Another gripe: The board seems to have plenty of money for such trivia as the Marin Ballet and EOC. They are breeding a complete tax revolt in this county. Either they will have to assume their responsibilities to make drastic cuts, no matter how it hurts (starting from "the top"), or the taxpayers will see to it that these gentlemen will be replaced by fiscally responsible board members.

Tax Deductible Week End You Have To Talk Business

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service has ruled a summer week end at a country home, or a resort, is tax deductible as entertainment, providing business is discussed during the period in question. The host must be able to prove that he has a logical business relationship with the person entertained, and the week end invitation was not just for pleasure.

While the IRS cited no example as to what would constitute a tax deductible week end, we believe the following would be acceptable:

"WELL, MISS GOODHEART, I guess you're wondering why I brought you out here to the Secret Valley Hotel for the week end."

"The idea did pass through my head, Mr. Rathbone."

"Drink?"

"Thank you, I'll have a teensy weensy double vodka on the rocks."

"Miss Goodheart, I was wondering if you had any ideas on how we could increase our sales on hydraulic turbine fluids."

"I'VE ONLY BEEN with the company two weeks, Mr. Rathbone, and being in the secretarial pool I really haven't had much chance to think about it."

"Would you care for another drink?"

"Just ask the bartender to freshen this one up with a little more vodka."

"Miss Goodheart, has anyone told you you're a very, very beautiful and warm person?"

"Oh, Mr. Rathbone! You do have a way with words."

"I'M GOING TO ASK you something personal now, Miss Goodheart, and you don't have to answer if you don't want to."

"Yes, Mr. Rathbone?"

"If we were going to set up a Midwest sales office for the company should we do it in Akron, Ohio, or Springfield, Ill?"

"Gosh, Mr. Rathbone, they both sound great to me."

"Forgive me if I take notes. Miss Goodheart, has anyone told you that you have lovely skin? Sitting here under the stars with the violins playing in the dining room you remind me of a Greek goddess."

"I'll admit it's better than typing."

"MISS GOODHEART, I knew when I first saw you that you had a head for business. Tell me something. If we merged with Cleary Plastics and spun off our interest in Alpha Containers do you think the Justice Department would give us any trouble?"

"I say do what you want as you only live once. My, Mr. Rathbone, your hands are warm."

"You do something to me, Miss Goodheart. I've never felt this way about a woman before."

"I don't want you to get any ideas, Mr. Rathbone, that just because I came to the Secret Valley Hotel with you for the week end, that I can be trifled with."

"And I respect you for it, Miss Goodheart. I want you to know I brought you out here because I see in you a person who can make a great contribution to the company. You're young and fresh and pink-cheeked and that's what the company needs.

"We want new blood, with strong minds and firm bodies."

"MR. RATHBONE, you're chewing on my earring."

"Sorry. What I'm trying to find out from you is a way we can cut costs, up production and still compete with the Japanese."

"That's a big question, Mr. Rathbone. Maybe we should sleep on it."

"Miss Goodheart, you have made me and my accountant the happiest men in this world."

Heroin Traffic By Officials Another Blot On Thieu Regime

WASHINGTON — It is no longer a question of whether the Nixon administration should insure the continuity of the shaky regime of Nguyen Van Thieu in Saigon but whether it can keep Thieu in power. With American support Thieu can probably come through the charade of the elections in October.

But the signs of his weakness multiply. He seems unable to make the changes that would give his government at least a face-lifting. Instead he sits tight at the center of a power structure made up of generals and political operators who are his dependents.

A NOTORIOUS example of the henchmen on whom he relies is Maj. Gen. NQGO Dzu, commander of II Corps, one of the four command regions. Rep. Robert H. Steele, R. Conn., testifying before a House foreign affairs subcommittee, identified Dzu as a chief heroin trafficker in Southeast Asea. He said that South Vietnamese officers deal in large quantities of heroin and transport it around South Vietnam in military aircraft and vehicles. Steele claimed that American military authorities gave Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker "hard intelligence" on Dzu's operation.

Two facts give this charge special credence despite Dzu's immediate denial. First, it was Steel who disclosed the high rate of heroin addiction among G.I.s in Vietnam. And, second, as a former agent in the CIA he had access to information that might not have been available to others.

Dzu has been for a long time a dubious figure in the military hierarchy that is both controlled by and controls President Thieu. On a visit to his headquarters in Vietnam two years ago I learned it was no secret that he was held in disregard by members of his staff. Rumors of corruption were rife. Members of his family were said to run a chain of restaurants largely supplied out of American military stores.

Time magazine recently reported a letter sent by 27 South Vietnamese majors and colonels to Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky accusing Dzu of a long list of corrupt practices and falsification of battle reports and casualties. The typical technique, the officers said, is to do badly but to report well. "We wonder whether we are fighting communism or supporting it," they wrote.

The letter may have been merely a shot in the political campaign that threatens to grow more violent as election day draws near. Ky, who accused the Thieu government in a fierce speech of a plague of military corruption, expressed doubt about the letter's authenticity and indicated he would do nothing about it. Dzu put it down to the work of his enemies in the army.

THE TRAFFIC in opium and its heroin derivative has for many years been a way of life in Southeast Asia. Opium is the chief cash crop for thousands of farmers in Laos, Burma, Thailand and Vietnam. With the American escalation and the infusion of vast amounts of dollars, a new market opened up that has been assiduously cultivated. There can be little doubt that from the peasants in the poppy fields to high officials, both military and civilian, in the four countries the enlarged traffic is extremely profitable.

The large and pressing question is what American officialdom in the region can do about this. The least that should be expected is not to resort to a cover-up. Until Congressman Steele came up with his estimate of 20 to 30 per cent of G.I.s hooked on heroin, the army had done little or nothing about this curse.

The military response following the disclosures was to order a urinalysis as the first step for every G.I. about to be shipped out. But, as the G.I.s quickly learned, it was only necessary to stay off the stuff for about three days for the test to turn up negative.

THOSE CUSTOMARY high military sources inspired a news story that addiction was far less than had been feared, perhaps as low as two per cent.

This may be true and, if so, it is remarkable good news. But in the first six months of this year 8,200 men turned themselves in under the Vietnam drug amnesty program. The figure for June was 1,500. Since clearly only a minority of heroin users take this step, it indicates a high addiction rate. To keep even a residue of a demoralized army in South Vietnam is to invite new disasters like the drug curse.

Black African Nations Again Unable To Agree

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Ever since the beginning of the Organization of African Unity in 1963, "unity" has been the element most lacking.

So, its division now on the issue of a dialogue between the black African states and the white supremacy regime of the Republic of South Africa comes as no great surprise.

When the OAU was founded in Addis Ababa, key principles included: respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of each state; noninterference in internal affairs of other states, peaceful settlement of disputes; nonalignment with world power blocs, and emancipation of African territories still not independent.

AN EARLY TROUBLE was the rivalry between the conservative and so-called progressive African states under the leadership of the then president of Ghana, Kwame Nkrumah, and Nkrumah's ambitions to lead a unified, socialist black African state.

Through the years there have been other sources of serious conflict, each of them in one way or another in violation of the organization's founding principles.

There was the question of the former Belgian Congo and the use of white mercenaries to bolster a black regime, as well as the controversial figure of Moishe Tshombe who established himself briefly as the Congo's ruler.

Another source of division was the civil war in Nigeria and the question of recognition of the break-away state of Biafra.

FRICTION ALSO arose on the matter of support for various liberation forces — against the Portuguese in Angola and Mozambique, against the wpite regime of Rhodesia and against South Africa.

To help finance these forces, the OAU set up special funds but only a few of the members paid their dues.

Adding to the frustration was the dawning knowledge that as an organization the OAU had neither the strength nor the will to enforce the harshly phrased resolutions it passed regularly condemning the white African regimes and those it accused of supporting them, including the United States.

And it was this that led the foreign minister of Ghana, alluding both to the organization's financial debts and to its lack of resolve, to declare that rather than OAU it might be called IOU.

AS FOREIGN MINISTERS met to prepare the way for the current summit meeting of the OAU, five walked out in protest against what they considered an attempt by the leadership to bury a proposal that conversations be opened with South Africa.

They were Ivory Coast, Dahomey, Togo, Upper Volta and Gabon. Other means having failed, they believed that talk might lead to an easing of South Africa's white supremacy laws.

Unfortunately, it was being proved again that the forces which divide Africa's new nations are stronger and more numerous than those that unite them.

'NOW' GENERATION

Youth Carry 'Jesus' Scene Into Montreal

By JANET CAWLEY

MONTREAL (UPI) — The long-haired youth stood on a downtown sidewalk, pointed his index finger to the sky and said: "Jesus Christ is the one way to salvation."

This scene is being replayed throughout North America today as increasing numbers of the "now" generation are putting down drugs and picking up Bibles, quoting Jesus instead of Mao, and leading a revolution of religion rather than violence.

Call them "Jesus Freaks" (not preferred by members), or "Jesus People" as they like to call themselves, the movement has converted thousands of youths with help of modern-day slogans like "Groove with Jesus" and "Turn on with God."

Rev. Ritchie Haward, assistant pastor and youth director at Montreal's Evangel Pentecostal Church, explained in an interview that he sees the new religious fervor as "the end of a search."

"These kids have tried various scenes and found they weren't lasting," he said. "So they turned to something more basic."

He rejected the idea that many will eventually tire of the movement, as they have of other lifestyles, and move on to something else.

"I'm not saying everyone is going to hang in —there's a dropout rate in everything — but most have found it's something very real," he said.

Chuck Smith, a member of the movement in Montreal, summed it up another way: "If they backslide, it's because they didn't slide forward in the first place."

Haward estimated the number of Jesus People in Montreal has increased tenfold over last year —to about 200 "hard core" members and up to 1,000 new converts, most in their late teens and early 20s.

This rise is due in great part to evangelizing by the young people themselves, they believe.

Haward explained they believe in a personal witness, an evangelism. They go out in the streets and talk to their friends, to communicate their faith and tell about the change in their lives.

"But the kids are very careful about whom they approach —they're led by the spirit of God to each individual —and they won't press the issue if the person isn't receptive," he said.

Most of the converts, Haward said, "were exposed to religion before, often as a child. They had at least some nominal acquaintance with churches and Sunday School. But most drifted away and few seemed really interested in religion at the time of their conversion."

Those who convert, Smith said, "come from different social and economic groups, even though they may not appear to. And there seem to be more men than women —perhaps because women are more interested in security and the home, and men are more adventurous."

Haward noted that "today men are more willing than they were to admit they need religion."

Once converted, the Jesus People do not necessarily affiliate themselves with any particular church or religion, but worship, instead, wherever they feel they best fit in.

Asked to comment on the dangers inherent in the movement, Haward noted the possibility of "becoming so heavenly minded you're no earthly good. That's why it's necessary to have teaching. Otherwise, people can become mystic and interpret scriptures their own way."

SISTER MARIE-JOSEPH VAN DEVEN
. . . have to be able to hope for the better'

ENTERS POLITICS

More Than 'Heart' Needed, Nun Says

TILBURG, Holland (UPI)— When Sister Marie-Joseph Van Deven decided to run for a seat in The Hague City Council a little over a year ago, City Alderman Geert Hylkema told her she was too emotional to be in politics.

"If you contribute your brains," she told Hylkema, "and I add my heart, we will go a long way together."

Having been a city councilman for a year now, Sister Marie-Joseph is not so sure.

"The wall I used to run into is still there," she said in an interview at the Sisters of Love convent, which is her home. "The worst discovery I made was that everything moves so slowly—and cannot move any faster."

When the 58-year-old nun first campaigned for election in a working class area of The Hague, she was greeted by hecklers shouting, "What use have we got for a holy hag?"

A year later her constituents say, "Sister, you're our secret weapon."

"It is a fact that many doors open because I am a Council member,' she said. "With the aid of the authorities, I have been able to relieve some of the misery. It was not much, but if a hundred people are in danger of drowning and I can save one of them, I do so."

Sister Marie Joseph, who spent 27 years as a schoolteacher, admits to not knowing and not caring much about politics.

"My only motive for agreeing to run was my hope I could do more for my people," she said.

"Throughout the day people are asking for help," Sister Marie Joseph said "When I get home I realize I've left the people behind and couldn't doing anything about it.

"If you help one person, others think of you as God Almighty. How can I make them realize this is not so?"

The nun said the Council job sometimes troubles her conscience.

"Recently I voted along with the party in favor of a proposal to curb parking excesses. But I was still bothered by the thought of the man in the working class district who is happy working under his small car in front of his door because inside his slum dwelling there is no room for him."

Despite the frustrations and problems, Sister Marie-Joseph says she will stay in politics for at least another year.

"Being a politician and a nun have one thing in common--you have to be able to hope for something better," she said.

A New Era In Bibical Study

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Pontifical Biblical Commission was born 59 years ago as a bulwark against the tide of new ideas sweeping the Roman Catholic church.

As far as it was concerned, God made the world in just six days. Adam was Adam, and that was that. And the devil appeared to Eve in the unmistakeable form of a serpent.

During the modernist dispute in the early part of the century, the commission was used to bludgeon opinions then considered hostile to the Holy See.

Times have changed. The Vatican Ecumenical Council put the Bible in a place of prime importance in the church. No longer do Roman Catholic biblical experts treat it as though it were factual in every detail. As their Protestant colleagues, they are investigating the possibility that the Bible expresses ideas rather than clear-cut history. They are digging into Hebrew and Aramaic texts. They are searching for meanings perhaps still hidden.

Recently, Pope Paul VI gave recognition of this change. He took away the independent status of the old biblical commission, whose members were appointed for life, and dismissed the 36 cardinals, prelates and sundry experts who belonged to it.

He ruled, instead, that a new biblican commission will be formed under the wing of the Doctrine of the Faith, the watchdog body for Roman Catholic dogma.

The world's bishops' conferences will be asked to nominate top biblical scholars to serve on it. But the Pope will have the final word on who is to be appointed to the 20-member commission.

His directive said the commission will include representatives of all schools of thought. Vatican officials said he would announce his decision within three or four months.

All members — and they can include laymen — will serve for five years. Non-Roman Catholic scholars may be consulted, but they may not be commission members.

The panel will continue to grant degrees in biblical studies.

It will study biblical questions posed by the Pope and by bishops' conferences.

Vatican officials predicted it also would aid Christian unity attempts. One recalled that the late Cardinal Augustin Bea, a champion of ecumenism, used to say that joint biblical study was the surest path to unity.

Moore is campus minister at the University of California at Davis and chairman of the Board of Christian Social Concerts of the California-Nevada Conference of the United Methodist Church.

Behr Seeks Support On River Legislation

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, citing an upcoming crucial hearing on his legislation to preserve the Eel, Klamath and Trinity as wild and scenic rivers, has urged "every possible expression of support" from the public.

The bill, SB 107, will be heard at 9:30 a.m. on July 26 in Room 5007 by the Senate Finance Committee. The chairman of the committee, Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, who opposes the bill, had bottled it up without a hearing since May.

Behr said the hearing will be a "critical moment in our campaign" to save the three rivers. 'This is the bill's critical test. It is extremely important that Senate Finance Committee members be deluged with every possible expression of support: cards, letters, telephone calls."

According to police, Hurl was thrown from the motorcycle by the impact of the collision but only received cuts to his knee and ankle.

He was treated at Marin General Hospital.

Profile Of A Marinite

By RALPH CHATOIAN

LeRoy French is a man who feels almost as comfortable underwater as he does on dry land.

French, owner of the Bamboo Reef skin-diving store in San Rafael, is one of those lucky souls who was able to transform a hobby into a profitable business, and at the same time have the talent to rise to the top in his skill inworld-wide competition.

Last February the 33-year-old French was the winner of the International Underwater Photographer of the Year Award, presented to him in Santa Monica at the 14th annual Underwater Film Festival. It put him in the same class as internationally famous underwater photographer-explorers Jacques and Phillipe Cousteau.

AND HIS business, which was started on a shoestring 10 years ago, is growing by leaps and bounds.

French started out as a 23-year-old business man by opening the Bamboo Reef with partner Al Giddings Jr. at its present location, 3765 Redwood Highway in San Rafael. Then it was hardly more than a small room where skin divers could get together to swap stories. The inventory was almost nonexistent.

But they did have a swimming pool for diving.

"THAT WAS something," laughed French. "We had a ready-made pool, something we couldn't have possibly afforded on what we started out with."

The premises had used by a patio supply business, French explained, and when it moved, the display pool remained. There the diving lessons are still given.

The shop was decorated in bamboo and sacking, all on a do-it-yourself basis. The help came from a San Francisco wholesaler who supplied some inventory on consignment, and the Bay Area's first "skin-diving only" store was really in operation.

FRENCH AND Giddings built up the business the first four years, and then opened another Bamboo Reef, this time in San Francisco. A short time later, the two dissolved their partnership, Giddings remaining the owner of the San Francisco store and French the owner of the shop in San Rafael.

"Even though we're in competition now, we remain good friends," said French.

As the San Rafael business grew, French reached the point about four years ago where he was able to tear down the old building and put up new structure, much largar than the one in which he started operation. And then came further expansion and diversification.

NEXT TO his skin-diving place is his second venture, Sojourns Ltd., underwater tour specialists. Last month he started his third business, French Underwater Industries Inc., in Northgate Industrial Park, dealing in underwater photographic systems and equipment.

French's underwater filming expeditions take him to the far corners of the earth, to spots in the South Pacific, the Caribbean, Latin America, the kinds of places many of us dream about. And when he's there, filming for magazines or television companies in the U.S. and Europe, his talents don't come cheap — unless you consider $250 per day and expenses a small sum to pay for those underwater pictures and films.

His next trips will take him to British Honduras and Swan Island, then Guam and the South Pacific. He'll be doing some work for Skin Diving magazine.

A NATIVE of San Francisco, French has been around water much of his life. He started skin-diving with a snorkel when 12 on his family's ranch in Idaho.

"There was always hunting, fishing and horseback riding," said French. "So I wanted to try something different. . .like skin-diving."

When he was 16, French started doing a little off-coast diving, with snorkel, around San Francisco. Two years later he got his first scuba-diving gear, when he was really hooked.

Scuba (which stands for Self Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus) diving was a relatively new thing then.

"YOU COULD drive up and down the coast and maybe you would see two or three divers. Now you see hundreds," French declared.

French remembers back to that first underwater breath. "It has to be one of the most exciting experiences of your life. All your life you've been conditioned to hold your breath underwater, then all of a sudden you can breathe while staying under. It is one of the greatest feelings a person can experience.)

French was involved in a near-fatal mishap when he was 24.

DIVING NEAR the Farallon Islands, he was attacked by a man eating white shark and suffered severe wounds to his left leg. He fought off the shark by using a spear gun as a sword, stabbing at the shark as he was pulled about 10 feet under the water before he fought free.

The shark attack came just days before a planned wedding with Carolann (Cam) McMenamin and forced a change of plans, with French spending a few weeks in a hospital.

The couple eventually were wed, and now live in Ross, with their two sons, LeRoy Jr., 6, and Matthew. 1.

THREE YEARS prior to that shark attack, LeRoy's brother, James E. III, nearly lost his life after a deep dive in Carmel. He suffered a severe case of the "bends" and was placed in a decompression chamber at the San Francisco Naval Shipyard for 48 hours.

In his early days of skin-diving, French helped promote the Marin Skin-Diving Club. Thus when he opened his business in 1961 he had a ready-made list of customers who were happy to bring their business to him and save the trip to San Francisco or to other sporting good stores in the Bay Area.

AND FRENCH hasn't forgotten this.

"I would say that 90 per cent of our growth here is because of the people of Marin County. When we started here, the abalone divers and old fishermen used to bring their business to us.

"The people have been simply wonderful."

LeROY FRENCH EXAMINES a few of the artifacts he had recovered from the deep in his underwater diving and filming expeditions to some of the world's most exotic and idyllic spots. Coming up are trips to British Honduras and Swan Island to shoot still pictures for magazines and film footage for television. In February, 1971, he was named International Underwater Photographer of the Year at Santa Monica's Underwater Film Festival.

MARIN CLEANERS Phone 454-4792 — Member N.I.D. of San Rafael, Bel Aire & Fairfax

"What Made The Bubbles On My Windbreaker?"

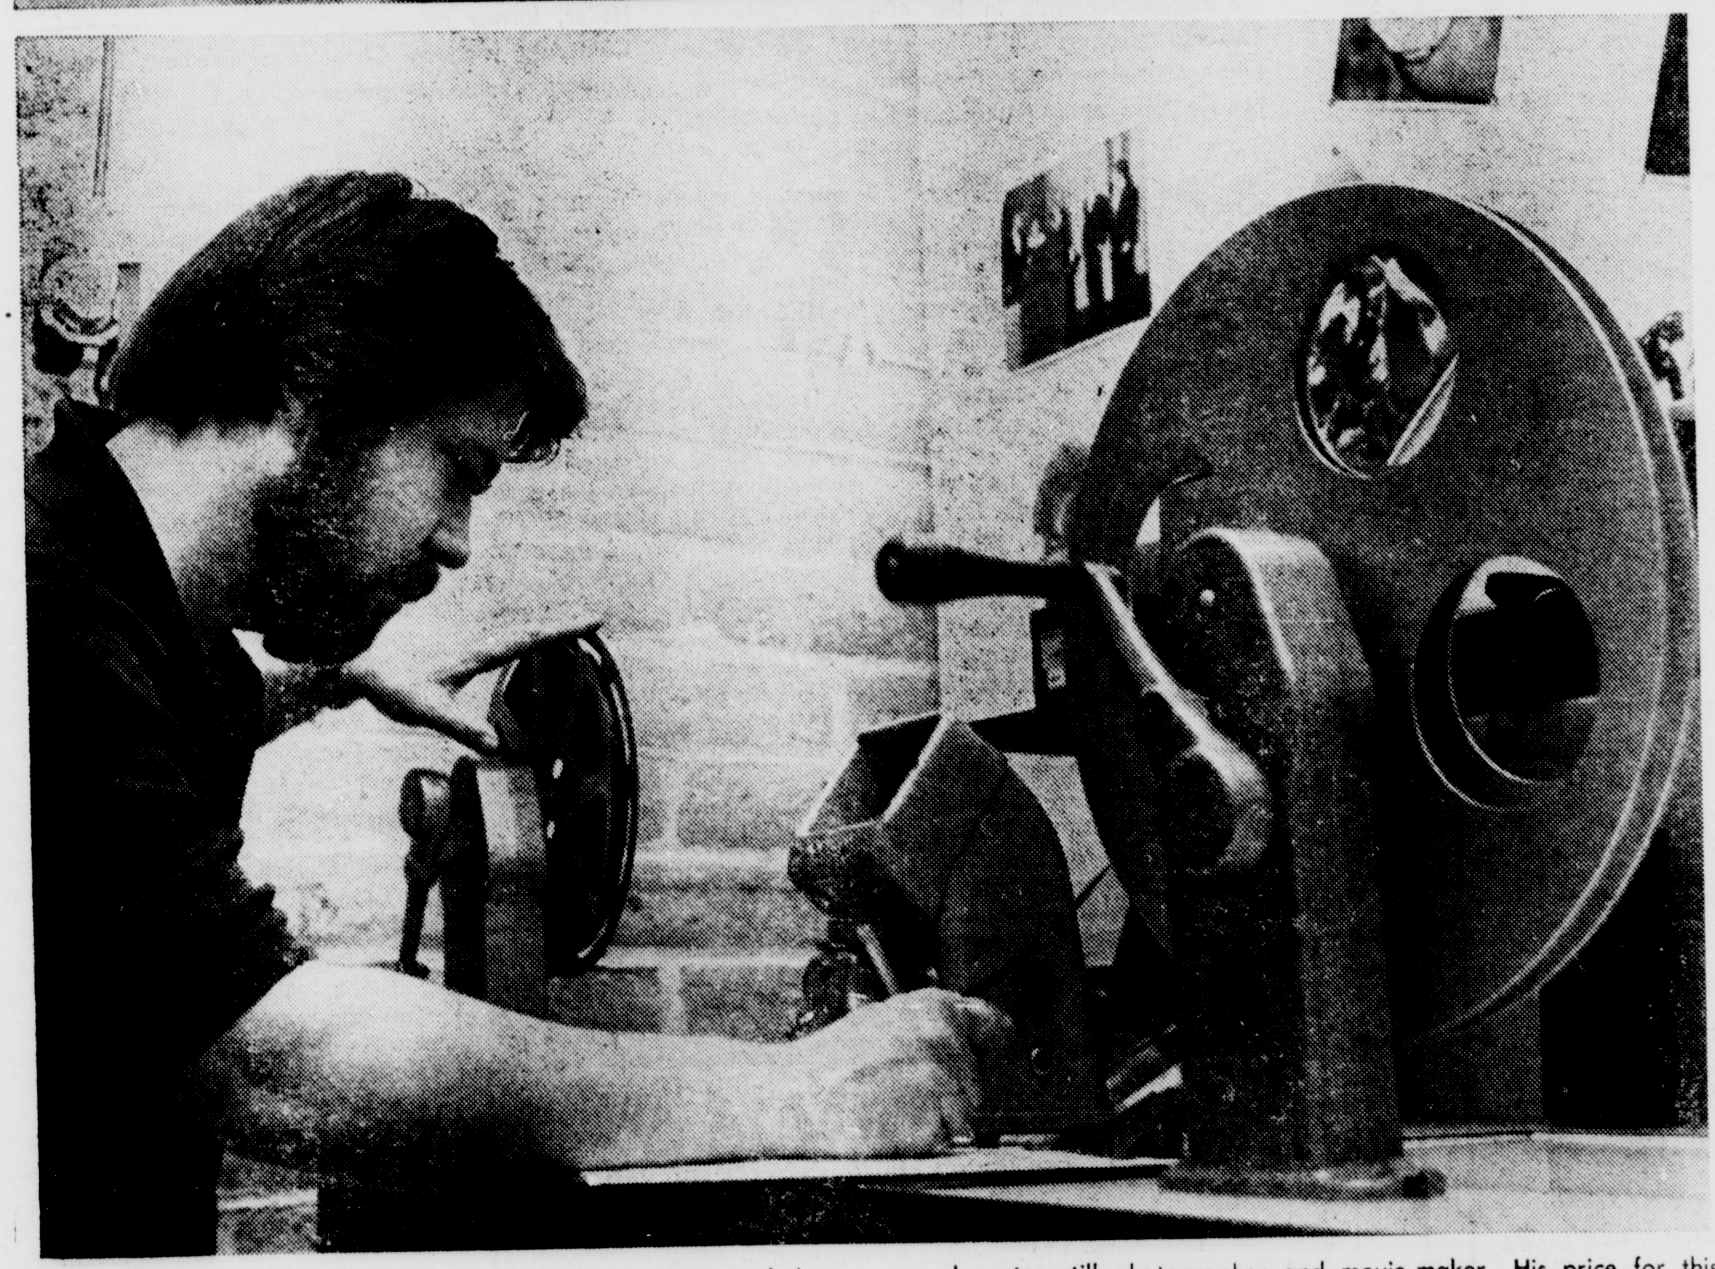
Your dacron windbreaker is lined with rubber. This lining is used to waterproof and windproof the garment. The dacron fabric is designed to adhere to the rubber lining. However, when the windbreaker is drycleaned the rubber lining and the dacron separate. Blisters appear. Sometimes the lining may separate completely from the fabric. Not all windbreakers do this.

There is no way to determine before cleaning whether or not this separation will occur. The National Institute of Drycleaning warns against such garments when labeled "Salik-suede" made in Belgium and "Heeksuede" made in Holland.

The "bubbles" you mentioned, Mr. J.R.C., are the blisters formed by the separation of the dacron fabric of your windbreaker from its wind and waterproof lining. This cannot be corrected.

By Robert and Ronald Cassasa, Marin Cleaners, Inc.

ABOVE, LeRoy French demonstrates for Kathryn DeMasi a camera fitted into a marine housing for underwater use that is typical of the underwater photographic equipment his newest business, French Underwater Industries Inc., deals in. The new enterprise was started up in June of this year in Northgate Industrial Park as an adjunct to his highly successful Bamboo Reef skin-diving school and store. French also operates Sojourns Ltd., dealing in underwater tours for sports-minded travelers.



IN HIS FILM-EDITING room, LeRoy French works upon some of the footage that has won him an international reputation as an underwater still photographer and movie-maker. His price for this highly specialized and difficult work: $250 a day and expenses. And there is a brisk demand for his skilled services.

A Plan For The Future California

Group Led By Marinite Sketch Proposed Course

By DON KEOWN

The California of the future can be a state with a runaway population headed toward the 40-million figure, with spreading cities that continue to gobble up our remaining good farming and recreational lands, with rural slums and run-down urban cores, with chronic unemployment, with increasing crime and social discontent, with an educational system that seems irrelevant to society's needs, with growing smog and worsening water pollution, with minimum integration, with prison disorders, and with its communities caught more and more in the stranglehold of automobile congestion.

Or, the California of the future can be a state with its population leveled off at a reasonable 30 millions, its urban sprawl controlled and contained, its housing renewed, its people guaranteed a decent minimum income and complete health care, its vehicular congestion and pollution relieved by public transportation systems, its recreational open spaces protected, its penal programs stressing rehabilitation instead of punishment, its schools serving not only as year-round study centers but also as places for avocational and recreational activities, and the shapes and attributes of its communities determined largely by the residents themselves.

THE CHOICE between these two alternatives, says Alfred E. Heller of Kentfield, rests with the people of California.

If we select the first alternative — a choice by which California will become more and more "a tortured place" — then we have only to continue as we have in the past, tackling our problems on a piecemeal basis after they have reached crisis proportions — doing too little, too late, and sometimes moving in the wrong direction.

The second alternative — "a California that is a constructive and compassionate society, working toward a better chance for the good life for all" — will require a considerable change in our thinking and, more importantly, in our actions.

A PROPOSED course that might bring about that constructive and compassionate California has been sketched by an organization known as California Tomorrow in a 40-page illustrated report — "The California Tomorrow Plan, A First Sketch" — published earlier this year.

Alfred Heller is the president and one of the founders of California Tomorrow, and the editor and principal draftsman of the report.

He was born in San Francisco and educated at Putney School in Vermont and at Stanfod University. He served in the Korean War and then taught school. At the time he and some acquaintances conceived the idea for California Tomorrow, he was a newspaper publisher, living at Grass Valley and putting out the Nevada City Nugget.

IT WAS 1961, and Heller points out that "this was before there was any broad understanding of or any great interest in our environmental problems."

Still, it seemed to Heller and his concerned friends, that there was "a clear need for an organization that could bridge the gap that existed between the agency experts and the special-purpose conservation organizations and general public."

ALFRED E. HELLER of Kentfield discusses one of the proposals made in the 40-page California Tomorrow report which he edited, charting a future course for the state emphasizing a comprehensive and coordinated planning approach to both its environmental and its human problems. Heller, former newspaper publisher, teacher and California Highway Commission member, is the California Tomorrow president.

"We also felt," says Heller, "that we should be committed from the outset to the idea that the best way to solve the multitude of problems confronting California would be through a quiet, systematic process — an approach that, for the want of a better word, might be called 'planning'."

THIS, HE ADDS, has remained the theme of the California Tomorrow movement through its 10 years.

Heller recalls that there were four persons, including himself, in attendance at that first meeting he called in 1961 to begin the formation of a new organization.

On hand were Samuel Lee Wood, Sacramento planning consultant; the late Catherine Bauer Wurster of the University of California department of city and regional planning, and Harold Berliner, then and now the Nevada County district attorney.

HELLER WAS selected as the new group's first, and to date its only, president.

The first name chosen for the organization was California Resource Policy Institute. But in those first few months some one suggested a change to California Tomorrow, as more expressive and dramatic. And that suggestion was quickly adopted.

As California Tomorrow, that fledgling organization has grown as a non-profit, tax-exempt corporation to its present membership of about 7,000 concerned Californians.

"WE STARTED out with a bang," Heller remembers. "In 1962 we issued a report that we called 'California, Going, Going' that was the first significant voice to be raised in our state urging that the state engage in comprehensive, coordinated statewide planning."

True, legislation had been enacted in 1959 authorizing a comprehensive development plan for California. But there had been no follow-up.

And finally when the state did spend four million dollars for a study, the result was a document entitled "State Development Plan Program, Phase II."

"IT WAS," SAYS Heller bluntly, "virtually unreadable. But in essence it seemed to boil down to a call for the state to create a plan. This, of course, had been authorized years earlier. So we were no further along than we had been before.

"And in the meantime the problems had increased tremendously."

Heller had been appointed by Gov. Edmund G. Brown to the California Highway Commission in 1964. But before the year ended, he resigned to devote his time to other commitments.

Now he disposed of his newspaper to devote his full time to California Tomorrow, and he moved with his family to Marin County to be closer to the headquarters the organization maintains in the Monadnock

Better California Is The Objective Of Citizen Group

Alfred Heller Of Kentfield Edits Report That Sketches The Future

Building at 681 Market Street, San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA Tomorrow maintains a paid staff of five full-time employees at its Market Street address.

A prime project of the nonprofit corporation is the issuance of its quarterly journal, Cry California, "dedicated to bringing the public a greater awareness of the problems we must face to maintain a beautiful and productive California," under the editorship of William Bronson.

CONCERNED OVER the state's failure to make real progress in comprehensive planning, and by the deteriorating environment, California Tomorrow launched a study of its own. The result is the report issued in March that has enjoyed a brisk sale at $1 a copy through the San Francisco office and at some newsstands in various California cities.

"It represents," says Heller, "about eight months of intensive work by a small group of people."

But the work California Tomorrow had already done through the years in environmental problems and in planning provided an invaluable springboard for the study.

ROTH SERVED on the Heller-headed task force that conducted the California Tomorrow study for which the technical staff came from the San Francisco office of Skidmore, Owings and Merrill.

Heller feels one of the greatest benefits that might derive from the study and the report is that it could serve as a pattern or model for a better-financed state planning program.

"We began to think," he explains, "that one of the reasons the state might have failed to come up with a comprehensive, statewide plan, is that there was no real model available to show how it might be done. It had never really been attempted anywhere on such a scope."

HELLER HOPES that the state will be inspired not only by the study and report that California Tomorrow developed on a small budget, but also by the follow-up program of scrutiny and criticism to which the report has been subjected.

Heller and others have been taking it before the public at various gatherings, to solicit reactions, objections and suggestions.

Turnouts have been large, Heller says, and interest high. And generally the responses have been favorable.

Heller enjoys especially the give-and-take exchanges that develop when he presents the plan to college students and to other groups of young Californians.

"WE TELL them that what we are saying is that environment is inseparable from urban and social problems, and vice versa," Heller declares. "We say that our sketch is only one way in which our system might be made to work. If they disagree, we confront them with this question: 'All right, have you something better to suggest?' And we are willing to listen. In fact, eager to listen."

But Heller believes the most serious opposition to the California Tomorrow proposals will come from land promoters and developers — "people with whom land value is such a prominent issue." He admits that land value involves matters that could not possibly be dealt with in detail "in a sketch report of this kind."

But he believes the answering of the developers' objections will be largely a matter of creating a climate of understanding of California Tomorrow goals. "For we all have a stake in a more orderly, healthier California, whether we be developers or in some other profession."

HELLER emphasizes that the report issued in March should not be regarded as a finished program. "It is an open-ended thing," he says. "We plan to continue to work with it, making revisions, particularly as we receive and evaluate suggestions during this feedback period."

A refined version of the plan is to be issued in about a year. And California Tomorrow might commission a number of special resource studies in connection with that updating.

What is vitally important about the report, Heller believes, is that it represents a first attempt at showing the interrelationships of environmental and social needs, and a first affirmation that both can be dealt with through a single, coordinated set of policies.

"THE CLOSE relationship of physical and social problems is well known," points out the report. "We have attempted to show how they can be met under a single, easily understood set of policies and goals.

"In preparing the sketch plan we have not felt bound by any established notions of what 'planning' is supposed to be. Instead we have attempted to determine what it must be, and to indicate why."

But does Heller really expect to see adopted a program that contains such proposals as a

Agricultural zone.

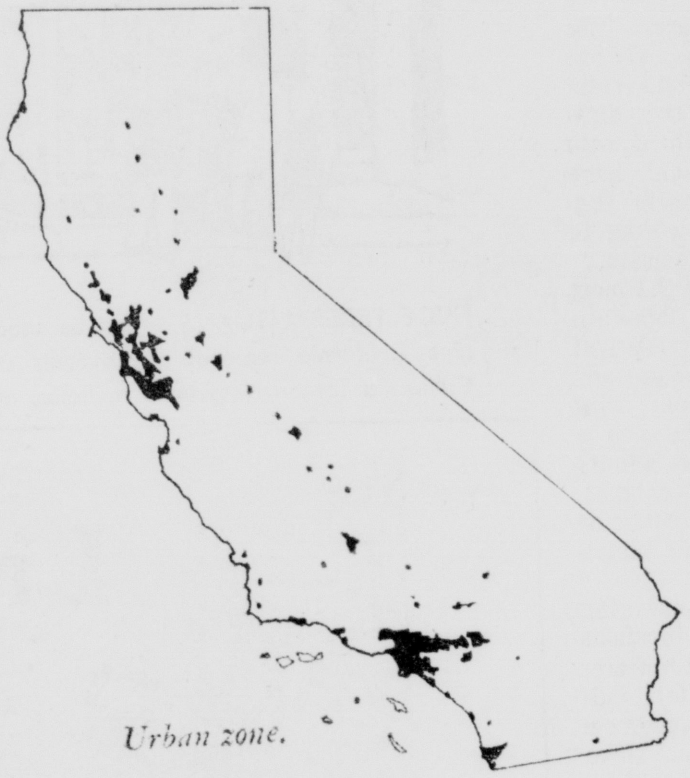
Conservation zone: Desert.

Conservation zone: forest watersheds.



Urban zone.

The Systematic Approach To California's Problems

$4,000 guaranteed minumum income for a family of four, a national health program, a limitation on election campaigns of 90 days with financing from public funds, the installation of "Constitutional controls" over migration into California, the elimination of capital gains tax relief and a special tax on automobiles to help finance their recycling?

"IF I WASN'T an optimist, I wouldn't have gone into this thing in the first place," Heller answers.

Then he adds: "That is not to say I am blindly optimistic. I'm aware of the obstacles. But under the conditions, you do your best. And the alternative here is too terrible to be accepted under any circumstances."

And Heller points out that California Tomorrow's program does not have to be accepted in its totality for it to be successful — as long as it starts the state to thinking in terms of comprehensive, coordinated planning that encompasses both its ecological and its human problems.

A KEY PROPOSAL in the California Tomorrow report calls for the establishment of an 11-member state planning council which would prepare a California Plan specifying both long and short term state goals and policies and absorb the budgeting responsibilities now exercised by the State Department of Finance. The California Plan would be submitted to the governor and the legislature for their approval and would be updated annually.

Regional governments, likewise, would have their regional plans, drafted within the framework of the California Plan.

All existing counties would become municipal governments, like the cities, providing the full range of municipal services to citizens who now live outside city boundaries.

AND THROUGH these local governments, community councils would be set up to help bring the decision-making to the neighborhood level.

One of the basic policies of the California Tomorrow program would establish as part of the California Plan state zones that would define generally those areas where building and development could or could not take place, thus preserving agricultural soils and recreational areas and checking urban sprawl.

Four zone classifications would be included:

Agricultural, where building would be prohibited or restricted; Conservation, for state-administered lands of scenic, historic and ecological importance plus hazard (earthquake fault, flood danger, etc.) areas, where building would be banned or allowed only under very strict controls; Urban, for lands already urbanized or suitable for urban development, and Regional Reserves of land which does not readily fall into any of the other three categories and which would be available to the regions for use for public purposes, as open space, for high density development or for a variety of other uses, thus providing flexibility and variety.

THE FIRST two zones would be under state administration, the last two under regional supervision.

Under the California Tomorrow plan quality standards would be enforced for the protection of air and water. For example: "Waste waters percolated into the ground may not contain toxic substances in excess of accepted drinking water standards. All taste and odor producing substances must be removed prior to discharge."

And: "No chemical poisons of any kind may be marketed until the manufacturer has demonstrated conclusively that the short and long-range effects of their use will not damage the ecology of the state . . . "

And: "The basic state requirement is 15 acres of public open recreation space per 1,000 population within 40 miles of population centers. In addition, the state requires five acres of distributed green space per 1,000 people within the jurisdictional boundary of each community council. At least half of this must be public open space, available to all."

ALSO ENFORCED would be standards to keep noise at levels "not merely tolerable but amenable." A recommended scale in decibels is included.

Building code requirements would be so written as to encourage investors to remodel old buildings, while owners of deficient housing would be deprived of tax advantages they now enjoy. Taxes would not be reduced as improvements deteriorate.

The assessment of land for tax purposes would be made according to its use and not according to its potential for development.

As a population control measure, the number of children who could be declared for income tax purposes would be limited to two.

NEW ARRIVALS in California would be charged a $1,000 "capital investment fee" to be collected in installments to help pay for the improvement services these new residents require. Federal authorization would be required.

Special taxes would be levied upon motors of more than 65 horsepower, and upon excessive use of electricity.

Along with the special tax on automobiles to pay for their recycling, there would be a packaging tax on containers and wrappings — cans, bottles, plastics, cardboard, etc. — with the proceeds used to pay for an efficient solid waste disposal system in each region. The government would also establish price supports to encourage the recycling of such wastes, and would sponsor research seeking new, economical recycling techniques.

A SPECIAL TAX on redwood is suggested as typical of taxes to be levied on building materials that represent limited resources.

A Federal Conservation and Development Bank would be set up to make long-term, low-interest loans "of enormous size" to the regions to finance their developmental programs.

A high speed rail line would link northern and southern California, with new cities developed along its route to relieve existing communities of some of their population pressure.

Regional transit systems would be developed.

THERE WOULD be a publicly-provided health clinic in each community.

Is the future California that would develop from the California Tomorrow plan a completely rosy one?

Alfred Heller and his colleagues admit that there would be results that some Californians probably would find disconcerting.

For instance, under the program "you would not have a great deal of money with which to buy great numbers of labor-saving machines for your homes. But you would have the basic appliances."

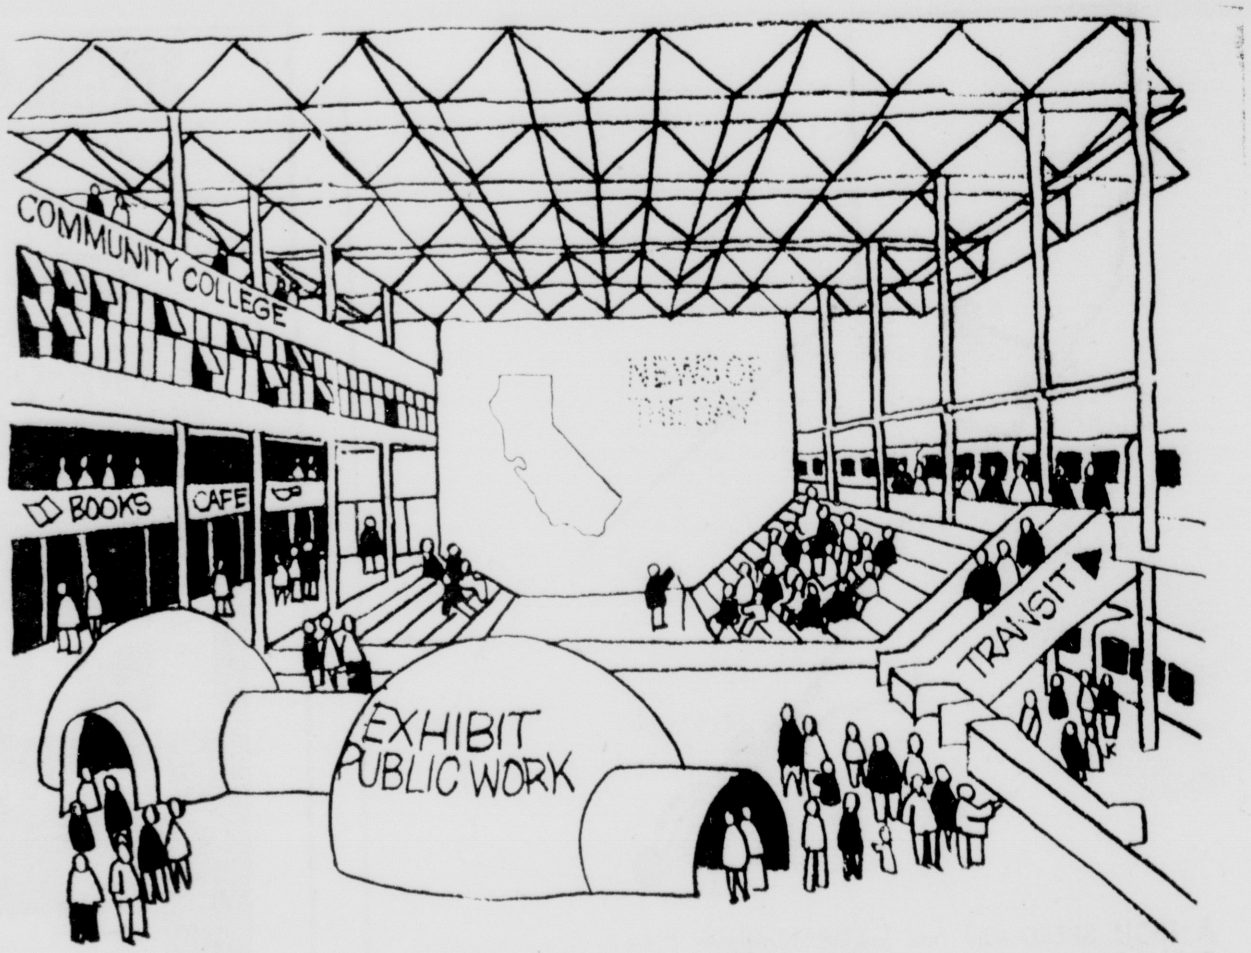
And: "Costs would be high, partly because of the environmental constraints on manufacturers. Taxes, too, would be high."

BUT IN RETURN, "you would have access to amenities such as public transportation and parks that would stand in lieu of purchasing power. You would eat better and enjoy better housing than you would have years before on an equivalent salary."

Many, they admit, would remain discontented, with restrictions on the use of private property, with income, with governmental interference, with bureaucratic red tape. But these same complaints are heard today when the state is making only ineffective attempts to protect the environment and to provide a framework for the development of our communities.

Nor would prejudice and inequities be erased from our society.

BUT THEY would be, Heller believes, eased, since the restructuring of the planning processes would give each citizen a better opportunity to work in and to influence the governmental bodies.



TRANSIT STATIONS could also serve as community centers, suggests the California Tomorrow study report. This artists's drawing from the 40-page report shows one such concept of a center that might be developed by a community council in cooperation with local government.

The California Tomorrow report puts forth eight "activators" which the organization regards as essential if the better California is to be realized, adding that these activators "cannot be compromised. Halfway measures enacted as substitute for an activator are worse than no action at all." They are:

1. Emergency action to protect valuable lands of the state in immediate danger of unhealthy change or destruction.
2. The adoption by the legislature of basic goals for the state of California that would serve as the basis for development and for the coordination of state policies and programs.
3. The instituting of one single, strong agency to direct state planning and budgeting.
4. The formation of the strong regional governments.
5. The organization of community councils.
6. The setting up of a social-economic-resources model of the state to be used in fact-finding and decision-making. Such a model, it is noted, is already in the formative stage at the University of California at Davis.
7. The use of California's influence upon the federal government to make U.S. grants and loans to state and local governments contingent upon the existence of strong state planning and budgeting operations, and upon the existence of regional governments with regional plans. Also: pressure for federal action on such U.S. programs as a minimum income for families and a national health system.
8. And finally, that the people of California be agreeable to taking the risks required "in a first attempt to find a path to decent survival."

ON THIS LAST point, the California Tomorrow report reads:

"It requires that we change some of our ways of living and switch around some priorities of spending. It may require that we take certain risks — that to pay for a future of amenity, for example, we share the risk of reduced expenditures for war; or that to protect the bright land of California we risk inconvenience by foreswearing the use of certain machines or products or poisons.

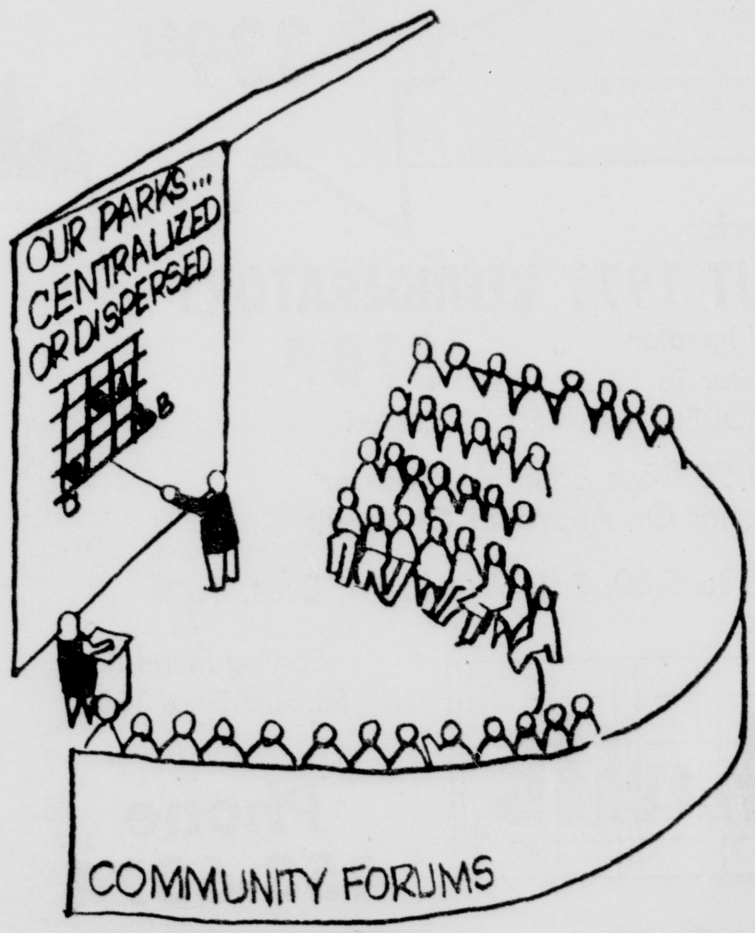
"But we can afford to take these risks and, to win the future, we will."

TO DATE, Alfred Heller feels, the reaction in Sacramento to the California Tomorrow "sketch plan" has been encouraging. The most hopeful and concrete response has come from Assemblyman Willie Brown who has promised to introduce legislation that would begin to move California along the path toward realization of at least two of the activators.

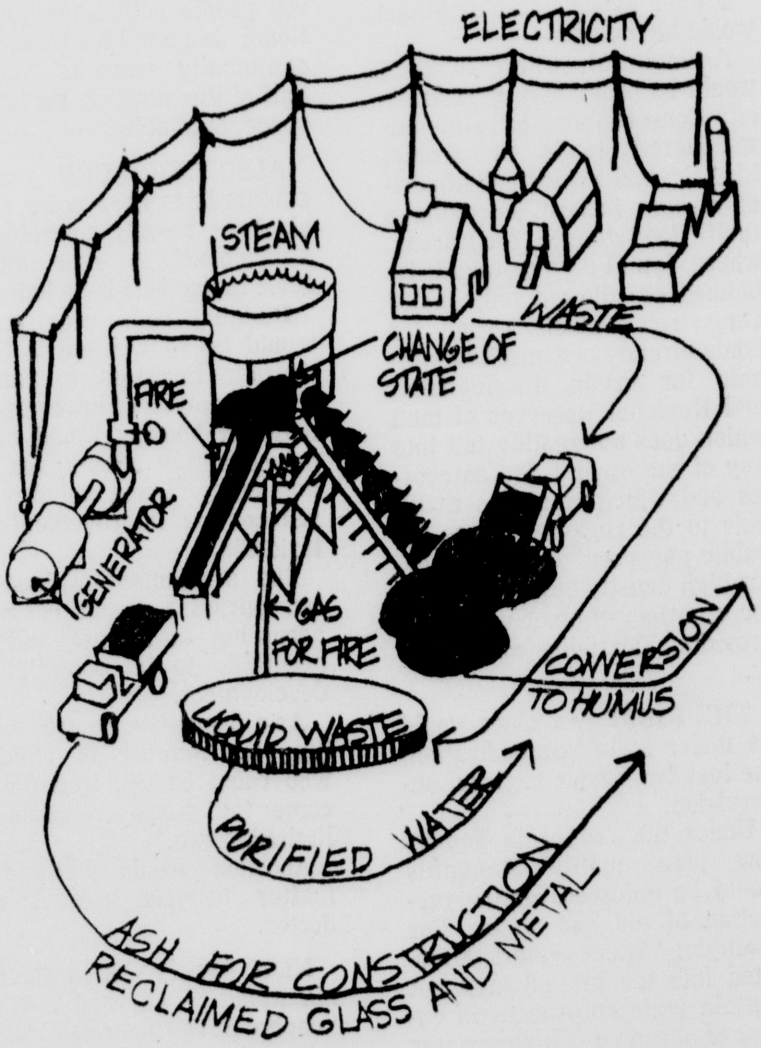
Heller acknowledges that a lot of work still lies ahead before California can be moved out of the bog in which it has become morassed.

But to those who term the ideas of California Tomorrow utopian, Helier replies that the alternative may well be a contemporary version of Dante's Inferno.

And the difference between even an imperfect Utopia and a Hades, he suggests, might well be worth a great deal of special effort and considerable sacrifice.



COMMUNITY councils would be assigned active roles under the California Tomorrow program in such matters as selecting the location and design of community facilities including local parks.



A TAX ON containers and packaging materials is proposed by California Tomorrow to promote streamlined, efficient regional solid waste disposal systems and to encourage the recycling of resources.

Training For Theater

Tamalpais District Drama Students Work With The Shakespeare Festival

Marin's Shakespeare Festival is celebrating its 11th season this year with a new "youth look."

When the 1971 season gets under way tonight at 8 o'clock with a performance of the modern musical in medieval dress, "Once Upon a Mattress," in the outdoor amphitheater at Dominican College's Forest Meadows, San Rafael, the vigorous presence of 90 selected drama students from the Tamalpais High School District will be very much felt.

They are the teen-agers from the drama classes of Sir Francis Drake, Redwood and Tamalpais high schools who are participating this summer in the Marin Shakespeare Festival's apprentice program.

They have been hammering on the sets, hanging and focusing lights, sewing on costumes, mailing brochures and taking reservations.

And they have been attending classes taught by their high school instructors, the professional staff of the festival and visiting lecturers and artists.

Now some of them will be seen on stage as well, or heard from the orchestra pit.

The apprentice program is the product of combined efforts of Dan Caldwell, drama instructor at Tamalpais High School; Dorthy Desrosiers, drama instructor at Drake High School; J. D. Nichols, music instructor at Redwood High School, and Scott Merrick, music professor at the College of Marin.

A pilot program was given a trial run last summer, with high school students enrolled in summer drama and music classes serving as volunteer apprentices in several capacities for a festival production of "Brigadoon."

This year the program is a recognized addition to the high schools' summer curriculum with students taking the theater classes and workshop for school credits.

The subjects offered are Acting; Oral Interpretation of Shakespeare; Mime, Dance and Body Movement; Props, Set and Costume Construction; Music Sight Reading; Voice Production; Theater Games; Improvisational Acting Techniques; House Management, and Techniques of Auditioning.

Class sessions are held at Tamalpais High School in Mill Valley and at the Forest Meadows Amphitheater, for approximately seven hours each day. In addition, the young apprentices serve on the working crews and rehearse for productions.

Fifteen units of high school credit are earned for their six weeks of efforts.

The founders of the summer project are enthusiastic about its opportunities and its results.

Dorthy Desrosiers, one of the prime movers, points out that potential young actors and technicians on the West Coast are generally deprived of the professional theater experience available on the East Coast because of its summer stock and repertory theater traditions.

"This means," she says, "that our students often have a limited view of the various elements involved in actually producing and mounting a show."

The opportunity the Marin Shakespeare Festival program has provided for students to relate to skilled actors and to discuss theater questions with successful designers and technicians has been of inestimable benefit to them, she adds.

"The idea of on-the-job training," she comments, "is the very best way to bridge the gap between the school, with its limited school productions and in-class training, and the real world of show business."

Dan Caldwell agrees that the festival apprenticeships are providing the teen-agers with invaluable experience in working with professional adults and in "learning how to get along with other people — a necessity in the theater."

Scott Merrick admits an initial disinterest in the summer program until he learned it would cover all facets of music-and-drama production. Then he accepted the task of gathering and training the orchestra, its core composed of Tamalpais

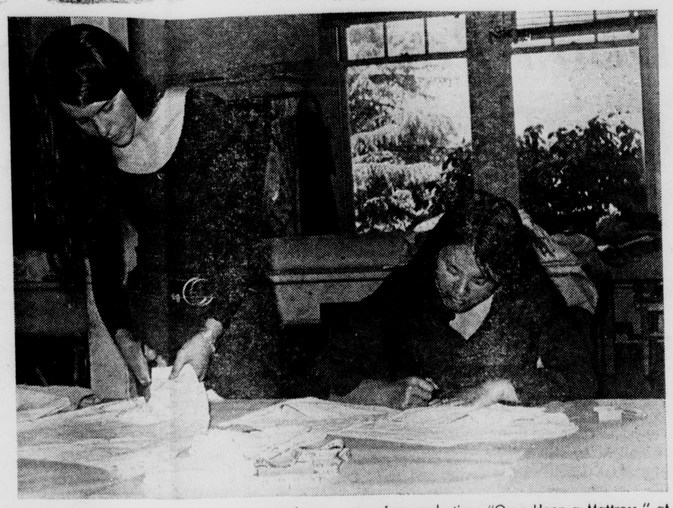
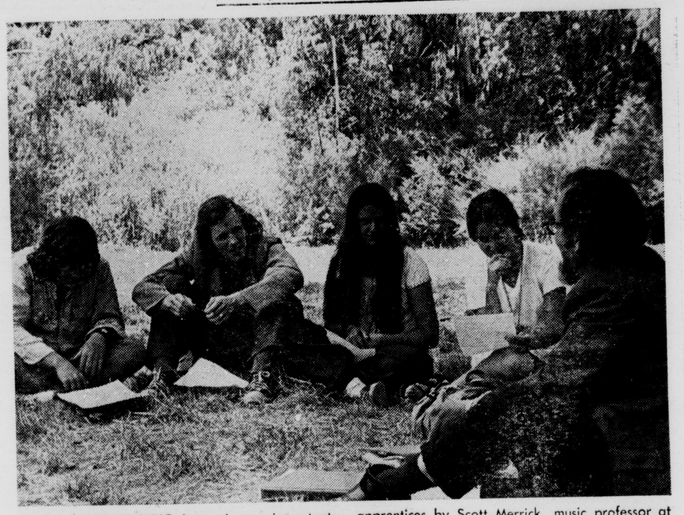
THE AMPHITHEATER in the beautiful setting of Dominican College's wooded Forest Meadows provides an idyllic location for the summer-time Marin County Shakespeare Festival. The festival moved there from the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross in 1967. The event has continued to grow steadily in Bay Area cultural importance so that it now attracts nearly 16,000 spectators during its 11-week season. The 1971 season, opening tonight at 8 o'clock with a performance of "Once Upon a Mattress" will also include productions of "Much Ado About Nothing," "As You Like It" and "Wind in the Willows," plus guest presentations by the Lamplighters and the American Conservatory Theater Summer Congress.

THE CONSTRUCTION of the basic set which will serve for all the Marin Shakespeare Festival productions this summer at the Forest Meadows Amphitheater has been a major part of the indoctrination of Tamalpais High School District teen-agers into the real world of the theater. Here the set, to be in use tonight for the premiere of "Once Upon a Mattress," begins to take shape.



TWO YOUNG Marin Shakespeare Festival apprentices, Jeanne O'Long and Jama Yim of Mill Valley, work on costumes for the 1971 season's opening production, "Once Upon a Mattress," at Tamalpais High School. Both girls are in their second season with the festival.



MUSIC SIGHT-READING instruction so important in musical play production was provided for the young Tamalpais High School District student-apprentices by Scott Merrick, music professor at College of Marin. The class is assembled here on the Forest Meadows grounds.

Merrick, who has also taught a course in rhythm reading, praises his young charges for "a fine job of mastering a long and not too simple score in a short amount of time," and also lauds the festival and the school district for its joint development of the program enabling so many young people to gain firsthand experience with the creative processes involved in putting together a musical show.

His rhythm reading course was designed, he points out, because "rhythm can be the biggest problem faced by drama students who want to sing in a musical show." His students, he adds, have demonstrated remarkable progress.

John Brebner, creative director of the Shakespeare festival which he co-founded in 1961, is proud that his group has been able to introduce thousands of youngsters to good theater during the past decade, as spectators, as backstage workers and even as performers.

Some, he notes, have returned year after year to labor without reward other than the satisfactions of their jobs.

Now, he says, the availability of school credits for their efforts represents a step forward and marks a new plateau for the Shakespeare Festival's relationship with Marin youth.

Brebner is hopeful the apprentice program will be continued and developed still further.

The reaction of adult actors and technicians to the participation of the high school students in the festival is illustrated by the impressions of Robert Egan.

Egan, back for his third year with the Marin festival, is completing his work for his Ph. D. in English at Stanford University, and teaches at Columbia University. He is serving as the Marin Shakespeare Festival's educational director and teaching the course in Oral Interpretation of Shakespeare.

"I confess that I was surprised, in view of the technical nature of the material I covered, by the enthusiasm of these young people," he says. "And I feel the group now has a practical sense of how to speak Shakespeare that is far in advance of what I possessed at their ages. This bodes well for the future of many American theaters and Shakespearean festivals."

Marlene Egan, director of the 1971 production of "As You Like It," taught the class in mime. Jack Degovia, set designer for the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco, conducted a class dealing with the problems in set design. Beverly Ross, recent graduate of the Julliard School in New York, introduced the Tam students to dance and body movement for the stage. Ernest Simard, associate general manager for ACT and general manager for the Marin Shakespeare Festival, was the instructor for the course on the basics of house management.

ACT actor Peter Donat has lectured on acting techniques, Standford University instructor Paul Willis has conducted classes in stage make-up techniques and Brebner presided over a seminar on techniques of auditioning.

The principal Tamalpais District workshop participation in the festival's 1971 season will be focussed upon the "Once Upon a Mattress" production that opens the outdoor series this evening.

But many of the students will continue their work throughout the summer, and have been given responsibilities and roles in upcoming productions of "Much Ado About Nothing," "As You Like It" and "The Wind in the Willows."

Clairellen "Cricket" Waldeck of Mill Valley is, for example, now the director of the Marin Shakespeare Festival Singers that performs not only at the Forest Meadows amphitheater but also throughout the Bay Area at various functions.

Daniel Birnbaum of Sausalito has been cast as the Toad in the children's production of "The Wind in the Willows," a musical adaptation of "Toad of Toad Hall." Gary Berg of Kentfield plays Alfred the singing and dancing horse in the same play.

Lynn Phillips of Corte Madera will be seen in the lead role of Winnefred (Fred) in "Once Upon a Mattress."

Bob Herrmann of Kentfield has roles in "Once Upon a Mattress," "Much Ado About Nothing" and "The Wind and the Willows," and also appears with the Festival Singers.

Sydney Erskine of Sausalito has been cast in "Once Upon a Mattress," "As You Like It" and "Much Ado About Nothing," and also serves as an assistant to the production manager.

Many of the students will be cast as set pieces and fixtures in "Much Ado About Nothing."

And the costume shop has been the scene of a special volume of student activity. Among the teen-agers working there, Jana Yim and Jeanne O'Long are putting in their second summer with the festival.

How do the students feel about this opportunity?

Sandy West, a 15-year-old Redwood High School sophomore, sums it up: "For me, this is the chance of a lifetime. And although it means a lot of hard work, I am determined to take full advantage of it."

The full measure of the vitality and the dedication that these Marin youths have brought to what has become one of the Bay Area's theatrical traditions will become evidence tonight at 8 o'clock when the curtain goes up on yet another festival season among the big trees of Forest Meadows.

LONG BEACH on the west coast of Vancouver Island offers an 11-mile stretch of hard-packed sand over which the breakers roll in, almost far enough to touch the green of the coastal forests.

Vancouver Island — Big Enough For Many Days Of Wandering

The Travel Pages

By BARRY BROADFOOT

There's something about an island, but what?

Can it be that one can, or feels one can, get away from the rush and the race, the push and the pace of mainland living, and that there is a greater sense of freedom on an island, a stronger feeling of being one's own self?

Ask a Vancouver Islander why he lives on his island and he'll usually say, "Because I like being on an island."

POINT OUT that Vancouver Island is huge — from the southern tip at Victoria to the northern point at Cape Scott, is about 280 miles, and its 12,408 square miles put it into the giant class of islands — and he'll say, "Sure, but there is still something about living on an island."

Okay. Come island wandering with us.

The swift and modern British Columbia Government ferry, after leaving the mainland behind and threading through the quiet and lovely Gulf Islands, has landed you at the Swartz Bay terminal. Instead of speeding into Victoria, take the first turn to your right, Wain Road, and drive through the green and farmy Saanich Peninsula countryside to Butchart Gardens.

Many tourist spots say they are world-famous, but this 30 acres of floral wonderland in an old quarry by the sea really is famous. Kings and queens, princes and presidents have visited here, among the more than quarter million persons who have admired it through the many years. It has six gardens, and during the summer when the gardens are softly illuminated, a one-hour revue of singers, dancers, chorus and orchestra entertains for the price of admission.

VICTORIA. A bit of Olde England? Not really, and even the chamber of commerce has dropped that line. But it is still the place to follow the birds to. The province's main museum, a house of wonder for the kids, is filled with Indian relics, birds, animals and historical objects. Don't miss.

Or the maritime museum, or lake-studded Beacon Hill Park with its views of the snow-mantled Olmpics across the Strait of Juan de Fuca. And be sure and take a guided tour through the Parliament Buildings sitting dowagerish and solidly on its green sward.

After a day's shopping in the fine shops — specialty English woollens and china — tour Marine Drive, and drop in at historic Helmcken House and pop in at turretted Craigdarroch Castle, as real a castle as you'll find around.

If there's a bit of adventure in your soul, from Victoria drive westward, on a good highway to Sooke, a small and flowery fishing village on the strait, and then on to Jordan River and you'll pass dozens of empty small beaches perfect for a picnic.

The pavement ends at Jordan River, and the gravelled road gets twisty and watch for logging trucks but the trip of 25-miles to Port San Juan can be made easily, and new vistas face you at every corner. At Port San Juan, cut left and cross the old log bridge and you're in back country, logging country, which twists and turns up and down for miles. Watch for deer. Good fishing in the small streams.

At the fork, unmarked, the right road leads to Shawnigan Lake and back to Victoria. The other road, in better condition, leads through more logging country to Cowichan Lake, Cowichan and then blacktop to Duncan. This short trip, taking about four hours, is what is called getting off the beaten track.

AT DUNCAN, follow the Island Highway to Nanaimo. In spring, your best chance for fish is in the district's many trout streams. Don't forget to buy that license.

NORTH FROM Nanaimo, 80 miles to Comox, are a succession of soft-sand beaches ideal for swimming and clam digging at low tide and, it you like oysters, the kind that grow wild are the best kind.

Don't miss Long Beach, where the giant breakers roll in from a thousand miles away and if a storm is due, you can see the cloud masses moving up a hundred miles or more away. In summer, Long Beach, 11 miles of hard-packed sand so smooth that bombers landed on it during the last war, thousands of tourists now visit.

Don't Pack Yet For That Trip To Red China

By MURRAY J. BROWN

Communist China no longer is off limits to the American traveler.

But don't start packing your ping-pong paddles — Peking has given no indication yet that it is ready to roll out the red carpet for visitors from the United States.

The Nixon administration opened the road for the American tourist to Communist China after about 20 years by dropping all travel restrictions earlier this year.

Although a number of more optimistic U.S. tour operators immediately began making plans, no U.S. official would even speculate on when Peking would decide to lift the Bamboo Curtain and let Americans in.

PAN AMERICAN World Airways and Trans World Airlines, in the meantime, have expressed hopes of reinstituting their routes to China and the American President Lines has declared readiness to resume ship passenger services.

In addition, United Air Lines petitioned the Civil Aeronautics Board for permission to operate flights from the United States to Peking, Shanghai and Canton.

The ink was hardly dry on the State Department announcement dropping the ban on travel before American wholesale and retail operators began promoting tours to China.

Advertisements appeared in a West Coast newspaper while a major wholesaler distributed thousands of fliers to travel agents on tours which "will begin the moment we have permission from the People's Republic of China . . . which is now pending applied for."

ONE AGENCY EVEN began offering 22-day tours for $2,500 with a departure date of next May 5 if visas are granted by Peking.

Travel to Communist China by American citizens was banned by the U.S. State Department shortly after Mao Tse-tung's Red armies forced Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and his Nationalist regime to retreat to the island of Taiwan in 1949. Only a handful of U.S. nations are known to have visited the mainland since.

Passports with imprinted with warnings that "travel to, in or through the Communist controlled portions of China, Korea and Vietnam, or to, in or through Cuba" was forbidden without special authorization from the U.S. secretary of state.

LAST MARCH Washington announced that the special validation of passports for travel by U.S. citizens to Communist China would no longer be required. The curbs on travel to Communist North Vietnam, North Korea and Cuba remained in effect.

The following month Peking surprised everyone by inviting the U.S. table tennis team which took part in the world championships in Japan to visit China. At the same time, it granted visas to a small number of American newsmen who accompanied the players. The tour included visits to Peking, Canton, Shanghai and the Great Wall of China.

The Bamboo Curtain was slammed down again until mid-June when Peking admitted 13 students associated with the Committee of Concerned Asian Scholars in Stanford, Calif. The committee favors normalization of political, economic and cultural relations between the United States and Communist China.

IN THE PAST Peking granted visas to Americans only in what it considered were very special cases and there were no signs that it was about to change its policy in the near future.

In its announcement last March, the State Department noted that in the preceding 20 months — after a previous easing of restrictions by Washington — special permission to visit Red China had been granted to about 1,000 Americans. But only three were given visas by Peking.

The U.S. moves were in line with the pledge by President Richard M. Nixon last February "to create broader opportunities for contacts between the Chinese and American peoples."

THE PEKING authorities appear in no hurry to reciprocate.

The feeling here is that Peking could not be expected to open its borders to American visitors until the end of U.S. military involvement in Vietnam, at the very least.

Desert Beckons Summer Tourists

Palm Springs Plans Events

PALM SPRINGS — By local definition, an optimist is someone who tries to sell travelers on the idea of visiting the desert in summer.

Which by actual count means that there are 21,500 optimists in Palm Springs. That's the latest census figure for this desert resort, and includes residents who live, work, play and otherwise enjoy life here the year around — including those once infamous summer months.

This year the local population has united behind a strong summer promotion campaign, spearheaded by the city's hoteliers. The purpose is to snare some of the millions of travelers vacationing in nearby Disneyland, San Diego, Hollywood and the beaches, as well as those who live in Southern California.

No one expects any crush of incoming traffic, but there may be a surprising number who discover that the desert in summer can be quite livable and enjoyable.

AMONG THE special summer attractions:

Reduced hotel rates.

A sure-lure weekend package that includes half-price Sunday night rooms (for those staying Friday and Saturday); and two-for-one Sunday night tickets at three first-run movie houses and the in-city drive-in.

A Sunday-through-Friday night line-up of dinner, entertainment, dancing, movies — for the entire summer, and at modest prices.

A full sports schedule, including golf at championship courses (early in the morning is best); tennis, also early in the morning or at night-lighted courst; bicycling along 10 miles of in-city bikeways; swimming, sunning and fishing.

A mid-summer "Some Like It Hot" festival. Although still in the blueprint stage, the program would be hosted by city officials in co-operation with local merchants, civic organizations, hotels and restaurants, and designed as a fun-for-the-entire-family weekend.

Actually, the city's Convention and Visitors Bureau has always undertaken a summer promotion, but this year's campaign is unique.

For one thing, the summer ghost-town image has virtually disappeared, and much more of Palm Springs is remaining open. That includes all but two of the major hotels, most first class restaurants and the established branches of Beverly Hills' best-known stores.

Then too, the city's hotel industry has taken an exceptionally spirited attitude toward increasing summer traffic. The most vigorous supporter of the summer promotion is the newly activated Hotel Association, which has been instrumental in getting individual members to contribute to a round-robin of week-night activity.

The result is a complete summer program of dinner and/or entertainment at a different hotel each Monday through Friday.

THE SPECIAL week-night dinner evenings will be a boon to the small hotel operators, few of whom have their own dining facilities. The program includes Variety Night on Mondays at the Ocotillo Lodge; French Cuisine at the Riviera Hotel and Country Club on Tuesdays; Margaritas and a Mexican menu at the Gene Autry Hotel on Wednesday; an outdoor Western barbecue at the new Palm Springs International Hotel on Thursdays; and a Hawaiian luau every Friday at the Sheraton Oasis.

Prices range from $2.50 to $6.50 per person plus drinks and tips.

ADMITTEDLY, summer months in the Southern California desert take some getting use to. No one denies that it's hot.

But it's a different kind of heat, they claim, thanks to an unusually low humidity that averages 20 and 22 per cent respectively during July and August. That's the lowest for any resort or major city in the United States.

To stress this "hot but dry" theme among the broadcast media, whose weather forecasts exert formidable influence over weekend travelers, the visitors bureau will expand last year's "Weatherman's weekend" program. That event brought radio and television weathercasters here from San Diego, Los Angeles, San Jose and San Francisco to sample the "no smog, no gunk-in-theair" climate.

The weathermen brought their wives, and after a weekend of swimming, shopping, golfing and sunning, went home assuring their hosts that they did indeed have a legitimate cause for promoting Palm Springs in the summer.

"A lot of people like our kind of warm," observes a local real estate broker, who also notes that the desert is a last refuge from the congestion of cities and heavily traveled routes.

FOR LOCAL mobility, there are 10 miles of city bicycle routes that have become regular thoroughfares for the pedal set. Adult cyclists, including those who might be more at home in chaffeured limousines, are a familiar sight.

Standard two-wheel models, three-wheelers, tandems and other styles, including those with strap-in seats for tots, can be rented for modest fees.

FOR FISHERMEN (yes, in the desert!), Whitewater Mountain Trout Farm is less than 30 minutes from the center of Palm Springs. There you can catch trout from eight to 20 inches long.

For a small fee, Whitewater Farm will clean your fish, pack it in ice, and let you take it to your hotel chef to cook, or to your home to barbecue.

It also has a special summer schedule: the 80-passenger cable cars operate Thursday through Monday between 10 a.m. and 9 p.m., and continue to offer one of the most exciting rides in the American West, traveling from the Valley Station at 2,500 feet to the Mountain Station at 8,500.

A HAWAIIAN BUFFET served at the poolside of the Sheraton-Oasis in Palm Springs every Friday evening is one of the special events with which that desert resort is attempting to attract tourists during the off-season summer months. The Palm Springs Convention and Visitors Bureau has launched a promotion campaign stressing the area's dry humidity and its relaxed atmosphere during the warm weather period.

Guides For The Angler

For these anglers, Chronicle Books, 54 Mint Street, San Francisco, has put together "The Fisherman's Library," a boxed set of five softcover "tackle-box" guides by San Francisco Chronicle outdoors writer Jim Freeman.

The illustrated books cover fishing on the Trinity and Klamath rivers and in Shasta Lake, plus "California Trout Fishing" and "California Steelhead Fishing."

The books sell separately at $1.95, but purchased as a set, they will make a special impression as a gift.

Freeman's information on fishing sites, techniques and facilities are complete, down to choices of flies and baits, and the availability of campsites. And Freeman's expertise enables him to drop in those little extra tips now and then that enable the fisherman to improve his luck considerably. D.K.

The Spy Who Was For Real: Eli Cohen, An Israeli Martyr

THE SHATTERED SILENCE by Zwy Aldouby and Jerrold Ballinger; Coward, McCann & Geoghegan, 453 pages, $7.95.

By DON KEOWN

Fiction has made such heavy use of spies among its characters that one tends to forget there are men and women actually living and practicing that dangerous profession.

Certainly no creation of Ian Fleming, John LeCarre or Len Deighton ever ran greater risks with more fortitude than Eli Cohen, the Israeli agent who lived six years in Damascus and who infiltrated the highest echelons of Syria's ruling Baathite Party.

He was friend and confidant of Syria's highest government officials including its president and its premier. And at the time of his arrest he was under consideration for two cabinet posts.

Daily, each morning from his apartment in the very heart of Damascus, he transmitted by radio information to Israeli intelligence that proved invaluable.

Ultimately, it was this daily transmission that was to lead to his downfall.

Unaware that a radio silence for all government and diplomatic channels had been ordered to permit a test of newly-received sophitisticated electronic equipment received from Russia, Cohen went onto the air as usual. His "solo" transmission, uncovered by the clatter of other traffic, was detected and traced to his apartment.

After withstanding torture and undergoing a clumsily rigged trial, Cohen died bravely upon the Damascus gallows in May of 1965. And thus became a martyr.

It is the story of "The Eli Cohen Affair" that co-authors Zwy Aldouby, an Israeli journalist and former Haganah member, and Jerrold Ballinger, an American reporter, tell, in their book "The Shattered Silence."

This is a heavily documented report of the most astonishing and most successful espionage undertaking since Sorge and Cicero, told in fact in such minute detail that the reading sometimes becomes a bit difficult. The multitude of bewildering Arabic names adds to the confusion.

And yet it is a fascinating account whose narrators, like their subject, are deserving of our admiration for a most difficult job well-done. Needless to say, they researched and wrote without the cooperation of the Syrians and the other Arab states who wound up as embarrassed by Cohen's courage and the world reaction to his sham trial and execution as by the ease with which he had infiltrated the Syrian governmental and military structures and learned that country's supposedly most-guarded secrets.

It is not only the story of the courage and ingenuity of Cohen, or Kamal Amin Taabet the rabid Arab nationalist as he was known in Damascus, but it is also a book that makes a number of other revelations about the Mideast that help to clear away from some of the clouds that hover over that chaotic area.

It is revealing of the virulence of the anti-Semitism, above and beyond the to-be-expected anti-Zionism practiced in the Arab states and especially in Syria. It is revealing of the instability of Arab governments, outside of Egypt, with Syria especially the scene of inter-party and intra-party factional strife and duplicity It is revealing of the jealousy and the suspicion that poisons relationships among the Arab states. It is revealing of the extent to which the Mideast has served as a haven to the most despicable of the Hazi war criminals. And it is revealing of the corruption of officialdom and the poverty of the masses in Syria and its neighbors.

At least outwardly Eli Cohen was the quiet, methodical man in the pattern of the LeCarre and Deighton agent, and not the flamboyant spy of the James Bond ilk. But in one respect, the Eli Cohen story differs sharply from the fiction of LeCarre and Deighton.

Whereas in the novels the government invariably regards its agents as expendable and is cynical toward their fate, Israel went to extraordinary lengths in its attempts to save Cohen from the gallows. It offered a tremendous ransom plus hostages. And it mounted a vigorous world opinion campaign to bring pressure upon the Syrians to show a brave man mercy.

When the effort to save Cohen failed, and the Syrians turned his hanging into a televised circus spectacle, the international reaction was one of horror and disgust.

So that even as he died, the patriot Cohen contributed yet again to the efforts of his small country to survive in a hostile region. For world opinion and public support, as well as personal heroism and inspired national, determination and dedication have played major roles in Israel's survival against heavy odds.

ELI COHEN, Israel's master spy and martyr, was under consideration as Syria's deputy minister of defense when that country arrested him for espionage. His stranger-than-fiction career ending May 19, 1965, with his execution in Damascus, is told by Zwy Aldouby and Jerrold Ballinger in their book, "The Shattered Silence."

THE THREE DAY ALLIANCE by Howard R. Simpson; Doubleday, 184 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This is strictly formula spy fiction, but well done formula.

George MacLeod, a veteran British agent, is none too happy when he is assigned to work with a Soviet counterpart in Marseille to thwart a Chinese plan to use the opium crops of Northern Laos and North Vietnam to raise a fortune and finance a power ploy. His pain is eased considerably when the Russian agent proves to be a beautiful, and capable, French woman.

To foil the Chinese, one of their key men — and a dangerous one — must be put out of action, permanently. And the Marseille waterfronte is inhabited by other equally sinister characters who also have a stake in the project.

The action is tough and fast-paced. But author Simpson, a foreign service officer whose experience has included duty in Marseille, does forego the temptation to give us the now expected cynical conclusion in favor of a happier ending.

THE JAPANESE used to do ornate, miniature sculptures that they used for dangling from their sashes such personal items as purses and tobacco pouches. These exquisite little pieces, usually one to four inches long, were called netsuke.

And that is what "An Introduction to Netsuke" (Tuttle, $3.50) by Raymond Bushell, connoisseur and collector, is all about.

It is intended for the unitiated as an introduction to one of the most treasured of all Oriental art objects. Bushell tells how the netsuke originated, and then gives detailed analyses of some especially beautiful or significant pieces that are pictured in black and white. Ivory, coral, wood, porcelain and metals were all used and are shown. And the special entusiasm that netsuke arouses in scholars and students of Eastern arts and crafts becomes not only understandable to the reader but contagious.

"THE COMPLETE Beginner's Guide to Sailing" (Doubleday, $5.95) by Ainslie H. Drummond Jr., the editor-in-chief of the Elhi Division of D. C. Heath and Co., a publishing subsidiary of Raytheon Co., is a well-illustrated and well-written manual that discusses every aspect of ailing. There are 240 pages and 17 chapters, from nautical terminology to reading the weather. And while the book is published by Doubleday's "Young Readers" division, it is a useful text for anyone just taking up the sport that is so deservedly popular with Marinites.

The 'Pirate Ship' Sailed By Slaves

On Aug. 26, 1839, a black-painted "pirate ship" was boarded by the U.S. Coast Guard off Long Island, and taken in tow to New London, Conn., seeing off a remarkable sequence of events.

The ship was the Amistad, Spanish-owned, from Cuba. It had started from one Cuban port to another with a cargo of newly purchased black slaves. En route, the slaves had risen and seized the vessel.

Spain claimed the ship. So did the U.S. Coast Guard. So did two American ship captains who had been preparing to board it when a Coast Guard vessel appeared.

Two Spaniards still aboard the Amistad claimed the slaves. But the slave trade had been outlawed by the U.S., and ostensibly by Spain as well.

While courts fumbled, President Martin Van Buren temporized, and the Spanish ambassador fumed, New York abolitionists took over the education and Christianizing of the erstwhile slaves, who were found to be from Sierra Leone where they had been sold initially to a Portuguese slaver.

The case dragged out for years, and as the story is told by Mary Cable in "Black Odyssey," it offers in miniature much of the confusion, many of the tensions that surrounded the status of blacks from Africa in the decades preceding the Civil War.

All turned out well for the slaves freed from the Amistad — in the view of the abolitionists. They were thoroughly instructed in Christianity; some of them learned to read English; then they were returned to Sierra Leone, accompanied by a few dedicated missionaries.

Yet in this denouement is the most poignant aspect of the plight of these Africans who rose to seize the ship on which they were being hauled as human cargo. The abolitionists, with supreme dedication, never questioned that converting these people to Christianity and returning them to their native land would serve to spread civilization (European-American style) to the Dark Continent.

It didn't, of course, quite turn out that way.

ADLER VS. THE 'PHILOSOPHICAL ANARCHISTS'

THE COMMON SENSE OF POLITICS by Mortimer J. Adler; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 265 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Revolutionary pressures are not new to man, but what is new today is a schism within the movement, giving us revolutionaries who are not only dedicated to changing our institutions but also revolutionaries bent upon their destruction.

So announces philosopher Mortimer J. Adler at the outset of his book "The Common Sense of Politics," whose purpose he pronounces to be the refutation of these "philosophical anarchists" who have despaired of institutional change and have turned to non-institutional means of striving for their goal of a better society.

Politics remain a viable instrument for mankind's betterment, he argues, and if formulated with "common sense" need not be the disreputable institution it has become for many today.

The goal, as seen by Adler, must be government that truly assures liberty, equality and "a good life" for everyone on earth.

To attain this idealistic objective, Adler enumerates three achievements that must be accomplished:

1. Our technology must be controlled, so as to eliminate, not contribute to, poverty and pollution.

2. A world government must be initiated if peace and tranquility are to be insured.

3. Universal liberal schooling for all, into and through adulthood, to equip man fully for his citizenship and to reap more fully the fruits of his leisure.

Some evidence to the contrary, Adler nonetheless argues that man's history shows a continuing record of progress, so that we have reached the point where the ideal of a truly just state is "genuinely achievable" today.

The form he sees for it is a world-wide union of socialist, democratic republics.

Present governments, he admits, are by their nature defective and unable to provide the classless society man requires if he is to achieve a society devoid of racial and ethnic divisions, of economic injustices and of conflict. But rather than destroy those governments and their institutions, Adler recommends that we work for their democratization — the elimination of the obstacles between ruling and ruled classes — and for their socialization — the eradication of the division of the population into haves and have-nots.

Thus, he argues, his world union of socialist, democratic republics would accomplish. "World-wide justice and world-wide peace are not embellishments of the ideal; they are of its essence."

Conversely, Adler admits that the achievement of this ideal may require revolutionary action as well as peaceful, civil means.

But once attained, he argues, then there will be no further justification for revolution "because no injustices will remain to be rectified and no deprivations will remain to be remedied."

Mankind, having perfected his institutions, might then, Adler suggests, turn his attention to his own progress as an individual — "toward fulfilling (his) capacities for understanding and wisdom, for friendship and love, that are the distinctive powers of the human mind and spirit."

Mortimer Adler is not a thinker and writer who tolerates casual reading. His books demand the total involvement and commitment of his reader. And always there lurks in the back of the mind this question: "Does political philosophy really have anything to do with existing conditions?"

Practical philosophy, be it ethics or political, is inadequate to solve the difficult practical problems confronting man in a particular society and under the specific circumstances of a given historic time and place. This Adler admits. But such wisdom, he adds, is indispensible for the formulation of a framework, a broad outline or plan, by which solutions can be developed for the future. "They point us in the right direction."

"Hence," writes Adler, "when we confess that political wisdom is by itself inadequate for practical purposes, we should be quick to add that it is also practically indispensable."

It is heartening to have a reasoning man of Adler's eminence argue that man, silly creature that he is, has nonetheless stumbled part way down the path of progress and reached a point where a whole, wide, bright new road to a better future may now lie just ahead. If only he doesn't despair and dynamite the access.

An Actor Turns Novelist

THE OTHER by Thomas Tryon; Knopf, 280 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown

Tom Tryon, best known as an actor, and not very good one, demonstrates herein that he has a considerably greater talent as a novelist.

Certainly there is none of the wooden quality of his acting in such pictures as "The Cardinal" to be found in his writing of this strange and eerie tale.

He builds his psychological horror tale around the relationship between two young twin brothers, both secretive boys, one gentle and mystical, the other of a more dominating and darker nature. From their boyhood games grows a sense of doom and disaster, for one or both of them, and for others in their family.

Tryon sets his book in a rural Connecticut town of the 1930s, makes the terrors of madness and the mysteries of death parts of his plot, and keeps a good grip on the reader's curiosity until the final revelation that still leaves much to the reader's imagination.

It is not a cheerful book but it is a compelling one, in the uneasy mood of Ira Levi.s bestselling "Rosemary's Baby." Tom Tryon has tackled a particularly difficult kind of novel for his first undertaking as a writer, and has executed it remarkably well — so well that it leaves the reader with a haunted and uneasy feeling. The story of Niles and Holland Perry is not easily forgotten.

Black Humor On Majorca

That the possession of talent, and the use to which these special gifts are put, are two separate and distinct matters is illustrated strikingly by writer George Fox and his first novel "Without Music."

After an advance reading of the manuscript, Mario Puzo of "The Godfather" fame quite properly described Fox as "a brilliantly, witty writer who has mastered his craft superbly."

But Puzo also wrote of "Without Music":

"I love the book . . . 'Without Music' is as haunting a story as it is a solidly satisfying piece of entertainment."

Haunting? Yes. Solidly satisfying? Hardly. As for loving the book, there is little if anything in "Without Music" to inspire affection from the reader.

It is black humor at its bleakest — a novel of adventure, suspense and psychology done with wit and a high degree of style. But it employs the writer's talents to spotlight mercilessly the worst in the human character and the most sordid in his society — and is a novel utterly devoid of hope or inspiration.

Thankfully the publisher has spared us in the jacket blurb the usual hypocritical claim that accompanies such a novel that it is actually a book of great compassion or charity.

Forthrightly, we are forewarned: "This intense story of character and the darker sides of human behavior is perfectly shaded by eerie and violent secondary characters — mangled war veterans, an escaped Nazi war criminal, a former wiretapper for the Mafia, and his grim coterie of assassins, revolutionaries and expatriates — and by the grim Majorcan landscape itself." To say nothing of a child murderess.

Merle Kraft, hack journalist and uninvolved, finds himself compelled to return to Majorca where years earlier he had an affair with a strange young woman. The woman has a child which Merle is certain he fathered. And he is haunted by the knowledge that this woman was once accused of killing two earlier children.

He detects signs of a relapse into madness on the part of the woman. But the habits of years of indecision are strong. And so he spends his time in the company of the colony of grotesquely crippled war veterans who drink and carouse their damaged lives away in Majorca's benign climate, and in making love to a varied assortment of women that include his ex-wife, the presumably madwoman and an eccentric English travel writer.

Merle drifts, as he always has drifted, while the danger grows for the small child. And finally, when action is taken, it is not Merle who is the activist.

Fox's writing is admirable, laced with flashes and episodes of sardonic humor and with considerable insight. It is too bad that his bizarre story is so totally a tale of despair and of pathos. And that sex scenes intended no doubt to lend earthiness often descend to dirtiness.

But to return to Mario Puzo's evaluation of "Without Music": While puzzled by his exuberant assessment of the depressing novel, one can nonetheless agree completely with him that in Fox "there's little doubt that a powerful, new talent has arrived permanently on the scene."

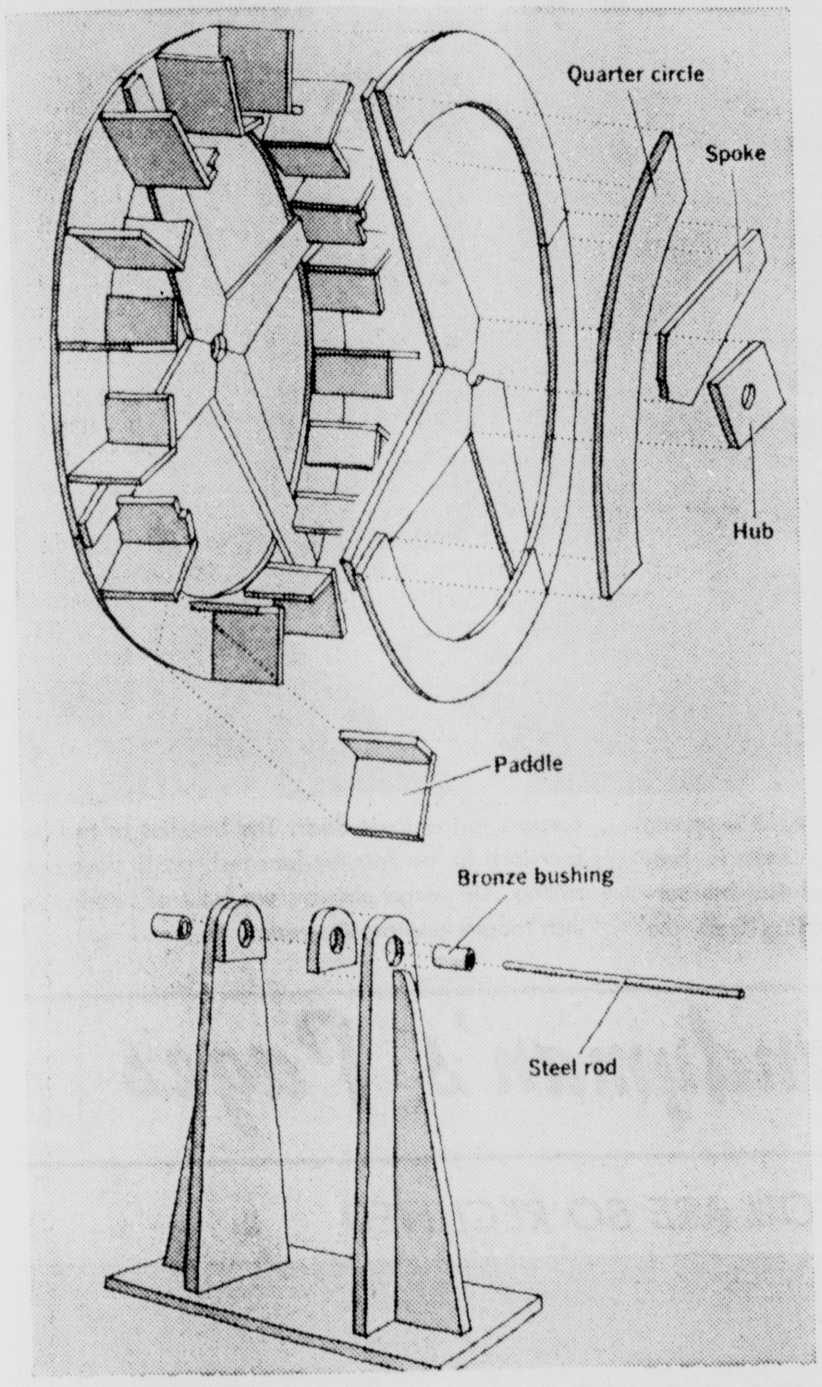
Water In The Garden



THESE DIAGRAMS show the basic pieces you will need if you decide to build a waterwheel for the waterfall in your backyard. You can, of course, modify the size and proportions to fit your own landscape needs and your water supply.

Shut your eyes and listen to a humming creek, a singing waterwheel, a shouting waterfall or just a steady little drip-drop.

Nothing cools off your thoughts more quickly, and nothing cools off the garden more efficiently during those warm summer and early autumn spells.

ANY WAY TO bring water into the garden is a good way. But there are hard and easy ways. To simplify the project, make use of a simple inexpensive (from $20) recirculating pump available at almost every garden store.

These compact little pumps can sit unnoticed at the bottom of a pool and silently send water through a tube up to the top of a waterfall or fountainhead. The pumps use the same water over and over — and that's good for plants and fish.

THE PUMPS are completely watertight and submersible. And they come in a wide range of sizes. There is no need to oil the parts,since lubricant is sealed inside.

According to information published by Ortho Garden Products Division of Chevron Chemical Co., when installing one of these pumps, here are some things to keep in mind:

Put the pump where it will have to move water for as short a way as possible; use pipes and fittings of galvanized iron, brass, or plastic (rubber tubes are all right for smaller pumps), and always use pipes at least as big as the pump fitting. A smaller pipe adds to the friction.

THE INSTALLATION of a backyard waterfall complete with a small pump that recirculates and reuses the water is a relatively simple project, as shown in this drawing. The constant circulation of the water aerates it and keeps it fresh. And the pumps, costing from $20, are completely watertight. They come in a wide range of sizes. A pump that will move 90 gallons of water an hour to a height of three feet will give you only a trickle down your waterfall. The next size, lifting 170 gallons an hour to three feet, will give you a stream in which you can wash your hands. To complete your setting you can add a waterwheel, the proper plantings and perhaps some free-swinging flower baskets inside the wheel. And fish are a possibility for the pond.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the following week:

✔ Primroses may be divided now or next month.

✔ Since lawns now require extensive watering, they also need regular feedings. The water leeches the nutrients from the soil, and these must be replaced.

✔ Disbud dahlias and chrysanthemums if you want large, show-type flowers. Pinch off the side buds to channel all growing energy into the terminal or tip buds.

✔ Keep fuchsias and begonias in full bloom by feeding frequently. Every other week is not too often.

A View Of The Valley

Difficult Building Site May Prove Opportunity

As choice land in the Bay Area becomes scarcer, more families are turning to sites previously thought "impossible."

After the initial challenges to designers or builders are overcome, owners often discover they've come out of the situation with a bonus panorama.

John Carden Campbell, a San Francisco designer and director of the California School of Design, did just that for a family with a site in the hills near San Jose overlooking the Santa Clara Valley.

The house was built on two levels out over the steep slope, with open space below the lower level, so the house could face out to the valley with minimal disturbance of the land.

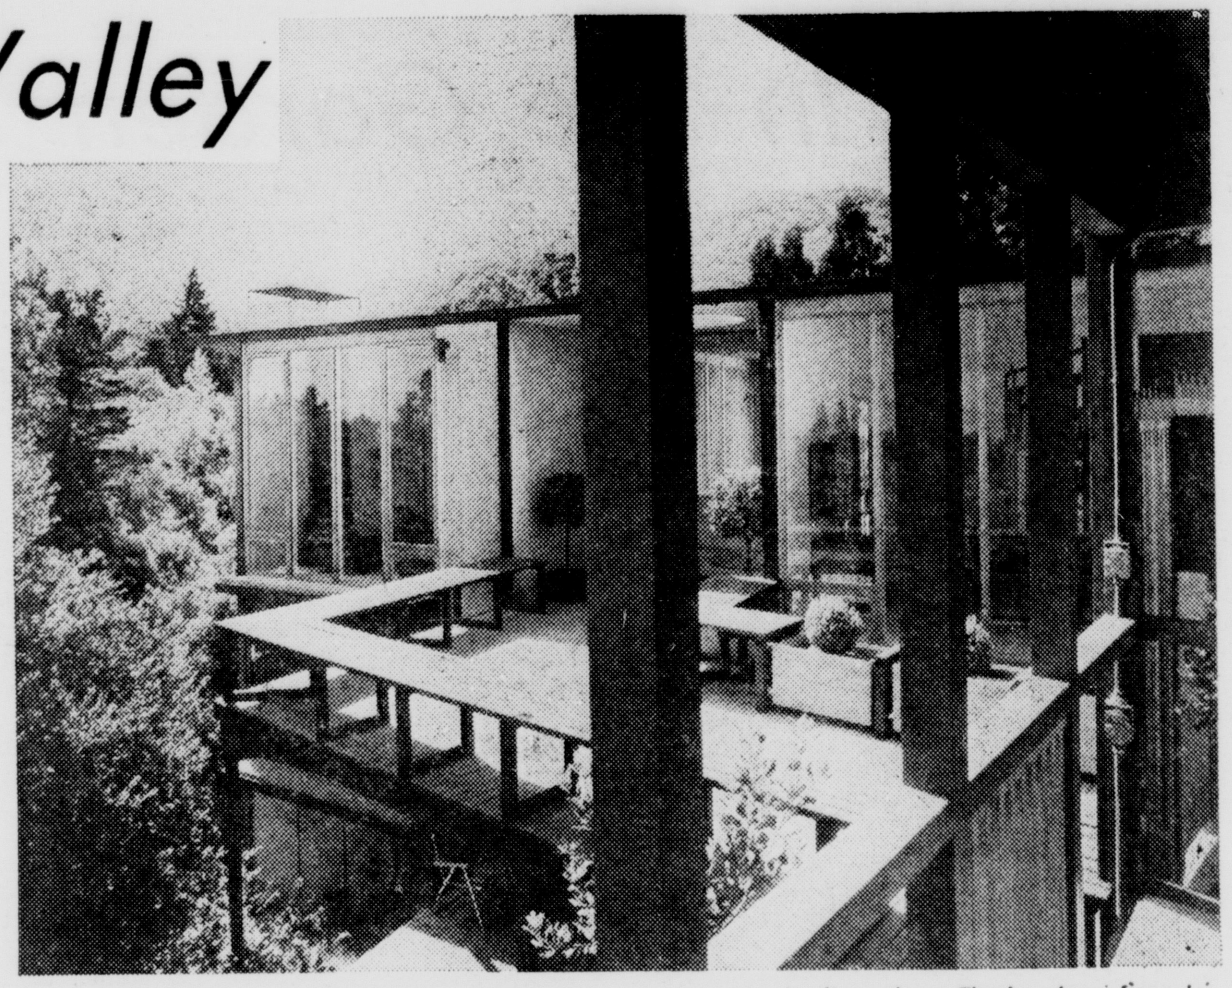
The deck off the main floor shades the paved area below, and there is another deck off the lower floor. Walkway decking is two-by-four-inch Douglas fir laid flat; planter boxes are built of two-by-six-inch tongue and groove western cedar.

Wide railings along the walkway, of seven two-by-fours laid flat on a frame of four-by-four-inch posts, actually are designed as benches and for displaying plant boxes and pots.

Many two-story houses or those built on more gradual slopes neglected in their original design to fully utilize view possibilities.

OLDER HOMES built before decks became generally popular may be naturals for opening up a room by replacing a window or smaller door with sliding glass doors, then adding a small or large deck, depending on use and space.

The line of sight from a deck added off a second-floor master bedroom, for example, should be pleasingly different from that below, and it's just the place for sewing, reading, or just relaxing.



THIS HOME BUILT on a steep site has a sweeping view of the Santa Clara Valley that is best enjoyed from the walkway-deck of two-by-four-inch Douglas fir laid flat and leading from the carport to the front door. The benches of two-by-four-inch fir on four-by-four-inch posts double as railing. The large planters are built of two-by-six-inch tongue-and-groove cedar.

Kicking Is The Last Resort In Repair Of Appliances

Repairing home appliances is difficult and discouraging, but not impossible, reports Dereck Williamson in "The Complete Book of Pitfalls," published by McCall Books.

He offers some trouble-shooting "how-to" tips:

"Electrical appliances don't work when they're not plugged in. If you have an appliance that keeps running after you pull the plug," the author advises, "get out of the house fast."

"When a plugged-in appliance won't work, check the outlet. It does no good to peer into the socket. You can't see electricity."

The author cautions, at this point, on the futility of having someone explain the mysteries of direct and alternating current: "It's easier on your nerves if you just think of electricity as Magic, and go on from there. The electricity is either in the socket or it isn't."

THE PROPER way to check the outlet is by plugging in something you know works, like a lamp. If the lamp lights, the socket is "good" and the appliance is "bad."

The author explains this is better than dragging the appliance to another outlet. Especially if the appliance is a refrigerator.

Check the cord on the appliance. If it is frayed, cut out the bad section and splice it together again. Williamson points out there are limits to the number of times you can do this: "A cord only an inch or two long is impractical especially for things like electric spavers."

CHECK THE switch. Sometimes cleaning the switching mechanisms will correct the problem. Says the author: "They tend to get gummed up, especially in toasters where the crumbs from last year's English muffins eventually find their way into the control room."

"An ailing appliance sometimes can be cured without actually fixing anything," Williamson confides, "which adds to the mystique of electricity. Turning a noisy electric clock upside down and letting it run that way a few days often silences it. Motor-driven devices can often be hit or kicked to life."

If all your efforts have thus far failed to revive the appliance, Williamson offers this final major piece of advice: "Remember that a wornout appliance is worth less than nothing. Make sure it is taken away—trade in or not—when you replace the one you couldn't fix. Make it part of the deal before hand."

One bench that can be built for lounging as well as storage combines good looks, utility value and ease of construction.

Its 12-foot length and two-foot width, combined with a built-on five-foot western wood screen, make it unusually useful as a yard divider.

JUST A FEW other possible uses include:

A sundeck, with foam rubber cushions; potting shelf; buffet or snack serving table, and as a game and garden gear cabinet, with two hinged lids.

Building the bench requires only moderate handyman skills, using sturdy outdoor lumber. Favored softwoods for this type construction include Douglas fir and western pines, hemlock or cedar.

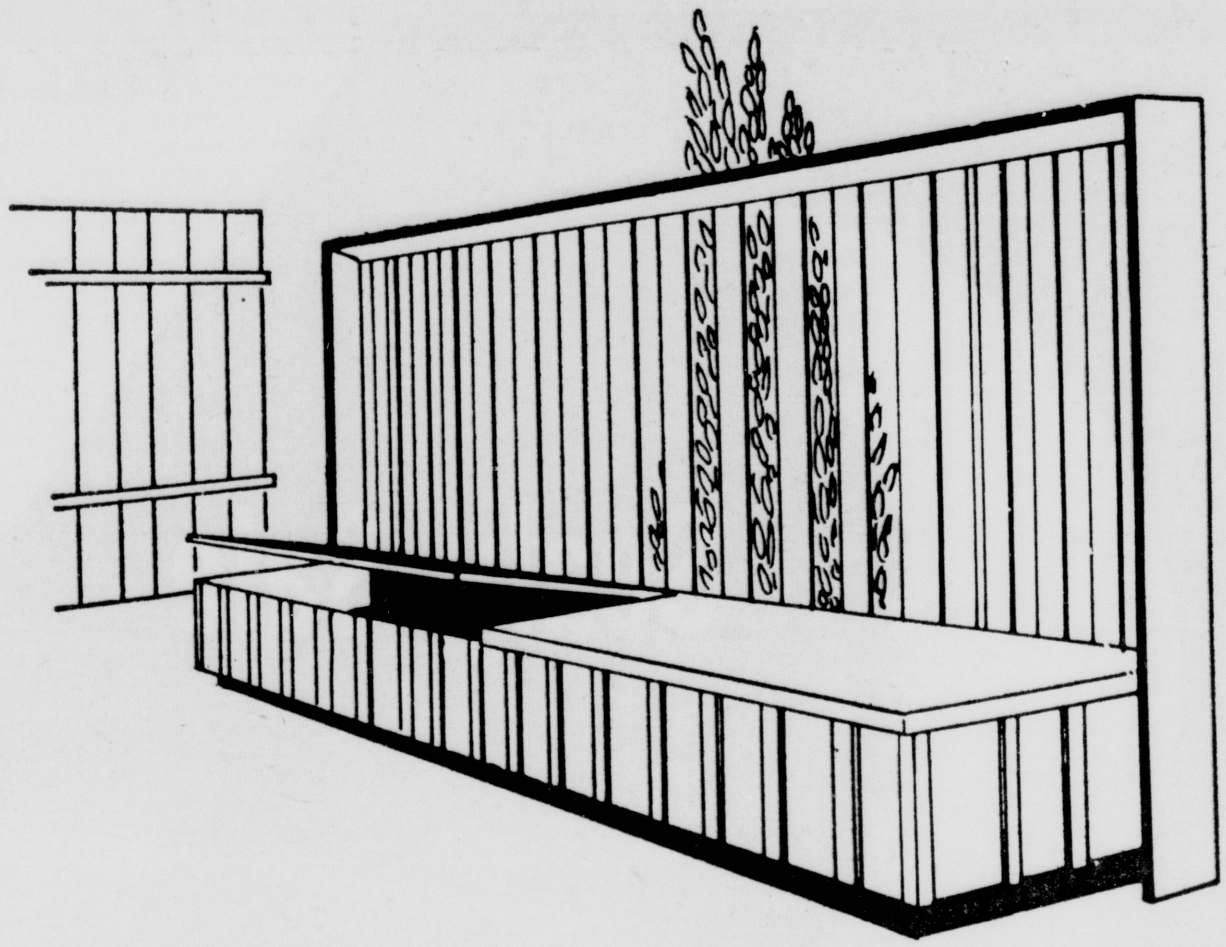
The 12-foot length adapts to the average-sized outdoor living area and is suited to stretched-out relaxation for two persons. The same structural system can apply to a shorter, longer or wider bench.

THE FRAME OF two-by-four-inch lumber is supported by at least three legs on each side. The legs also are two-by-fours, notched into the frame and secured with flat-head stove bolts.

Facing for the bench is optional and can match the house siding, such as board and batten. Height of the screen and spacing of the slats are builder's options.

Another quite simple, but distinctive bench can be built by setting 18-inch sections of four-by-four-inch posts into the ground, with 16-inch cross pieces of four-by-fours notched in and fastened with wood screws, about four inches from the top of the posts.

TWO SETS OF these post-legs, about six feet apart, support a seat of two two-by-eight-inch planks secured to the cross pieces.



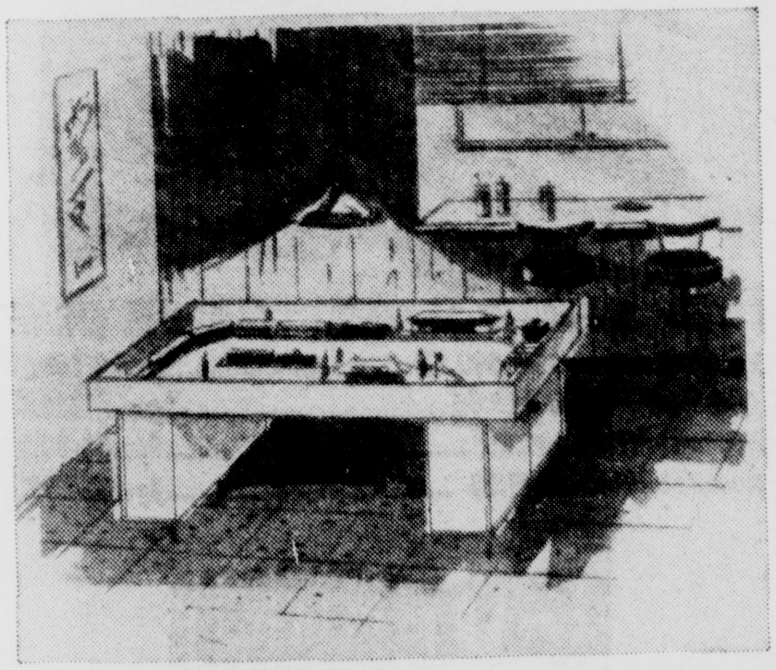
A LOUNGING BENCH for sun-worshipers also serves as a storage area for garden or play equipment, and as a service table for buffets and snacks. The bench has been built on a frame of two-by-four-inch western wood. The facing and screen can blend with the house siding and the fence. The seat consists of two hinged lids, and its 12-foot length allows room for two to relax.

Treated western red cedar is ideal for this type of permanent outdoor furniture, subjected as it may be to continued dampness or ground contract.

Set against a house, fence or wood divider screen, this type of simple, artful bench makes an attractive display area for bonsai trees or other potted plants and bushes.

More likely, though you will want to put it to its originally intended purpose.

FOR TRAINS AND TENNIS



FOR THE HANDYMAN with one or more young sons and some extra space in the recreation room, this combination table tennis and train board is well worth the little time it takes for building. Model railroading trackage and scenery can be permanently fastened to the board which can be tucked away neatly under a tournament-size table tennis top that completes the 30-inch-high table. Only track equipment more than six inches tall has to be removed in order to set the top in place for table tennis. The compact table requires only two and a half panels of three-quarter-inch and half a panel of quarter-inch interior DFPA A-D plywood, and it also provides storage cabinets for extra rail and ping pong equipment. For the plans to build it, send 25 cents to the American Plywood Association, 1110 A Street, Tacoma, Wash., 98401, and ask for Handy Plan No. 55-410.

Second Homes Now Play Larger Role In Our Lives

Longer weekends and vacations, better highways, and increased population pressures are several reasons for the dramatic changes in the function of second homes.

What used to be considered a weekend cabin or a vacation homeoften serves now as a primary residence, with a smaller townouse or apartment used as a week day home.

Hollywood Slips, Says Magazine

The main reasons are greatly increased foreign competition, high costs and the departure of many of its skilled craftsmen because of lack of job opportunities. The magazine noted that the same day (April 15) the movie industry was presenting its Oscar awards an estimated 85 per cent of the members of International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, Electrical Technicians Local 728 were out of work.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

This week let's look at several releases from the Everest label.

The first is a not-too-well-known Rachmaninoff score, "The Bells," for soloists, chorus and orchestra. The composer was inspired by the Russian version of Edgar Allan Poe's poem of the same name and attempted to capture the different textures of sound of the silver, gold, brass and iron bells of the four poems dealing with birth, marriage, terror and death.

Kiril Kondrashin conducts the Moscow State Philharmonic Orchestra and Chorus on this album and complete reprint of the poem is included.

Although Angel Records is supposed to have first pick of stereo performances coming from the Soviet Union, Everest seems to have obtained the identical tape to that released on Melodiya/Angel in this country. At the bargain price Everest discs sell for in most locations, the collector will find EV 3251 the best buy.

FIVE COMPOSITIONS by the American David van Vactor are conducted by the composer on Everest 3236 with the Hessian Symphony Orchestra. Van Vactor is conductor of the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra and has created a variety of works in many forms, most of them modern in sound while not avant-garde. Dates of composition range from 1932 to 1963, with the "Quintet for Flute and Strings" being of major length.

There is an interesting set of variations, "Variazione Solenne for Orchestra" and a march-influenced "Octet for Brass."

EVEREST HAS released many musically first-rate LP's in their continuing "Archive of Folk and Jazz Music" series. Among them is one of clarinetist Sidney Bechet with Lionel Hampton on several tracks (FS-228).

Highlights include a lengthy "Sweet Lorraine" and an epic 11½-minute "Night and Day" that really gets it on.
that really gets it on.

ANOTHER OF interest is Volume II of a series on Django Reinhardt, the fabulous French gypsy guitarist to whom so many of today's jazz guitarists owe so much.

On FS-230 one will find some prime tracks I haven't seen on the many other re-issues of Django's considerable recording career — "Moppin' the Bride," and "Heavy Artillery" among them. Jazz violinist Stephane Grapelly, who adds much to the quintet's sound, is present on several of the tracks.

Both this and the aforementioned album are re-channeled for stereo effect from the original 78's without too much distortion.

THE PEE WEE Russell LP in this series (FS-233), presents another fine jazz clarinet artist, who died only recently, in true stereo performances with such jazzmen as trumpeter Ruby Braff and tenorman Bud Freeman. Pianist Joe Bushkin dubbed Russell "the Donovan or Dylan of the clarinet."

The nine tracks are mostly old jazz standards, but they take life with Pee Wee's unique sound.

A NEW LABEL with headquarters in Germany recently began distribution in the U.S.—Polydor. One of their best pop releases is "Trip in the Country," featuring a group of Nashville back-up musicians on country recording sessions known as Area Code 615. (Polydor 24-4025).

This is some of the most listenable city-slicked-up instrumentals of country music I have ever heard. The musicians are obviously all virtuosi in their own right and many of the group of eleven are represented as composers of the eleven tracks.

There is even a sophisticated string sextet heard on three tunes, including one of local interest which is misspelled "Sausilito."

TONY WILLIAMS is the Miles Davis drummer who not many years ago was barred from performing with Miles in San Francisco because he was underage. Well, some time has passed and Tony now has his own trio called "The Tony Williams Lifetime."

Their Polydor album is 24-4021 and it is in the same unclassifiable area of music as Miles' recent efforts. Most people would probably pigeon-hole it as jazz but that would be too narrow a designation. This is hard-driving music with predominate percussion but a far cry from the primitive efforts of many rock drummers.

Another Polydor album which might be placed in a folk-rock category is John Mayall's "Empty Rooms" (24-4010.) The ballads, all by Mayall, are blessed with tender and sensitive lyrics dealing mainly with loneliness. The list of instruments Mayall plays on the LP in addition to his vocals is almost endless: several different keyboards, lead guitar, 12-string guitar, bass, harmonica and Moog.

"Lying in my Bed" was above par in its very realistic sentiments and language.

Don Galloway Shuns Crowds

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Don Galloway is seen by some 30 million viewers each week as Sergeant Ed Brown in "Ironside," but fewer than 30 individuals see Galloway each week off-screen.

The tall, muscular actor is an introverted man who suffers a phobia about crowds.

He avoids parties, sports events and even Disneyland to escape the press of people in large numbers. For the same reason he and his wife, Linda, seldom entertain at home or visit restaurants.

A NATIVE OF Brooksville, Ky., where his father is city engineer, Galloway is that rare actor: a private person.

For that reason he doesn't appear on talk shows, game shows or on television panel programs. He doesn't knock actors who seek publicity and wide public exposure, but it is simply not for him.

"I don't like the term 'public appearance,'" Galloway says. "It sounds pretentious to me."

Don and Linda live in a comfortable three-bedroom home in the San Fernando valley with their daughters Tracy, 5, and Jennifer, 3, both of whom attend a private school.

WHEN GALLOWAY bought the house four years ago there was a fish pond in the back yard. Tracy's first step was smack into the pond.

Her father drained the pool and filled it in. He hopes one day to install a swimming pool but not until both little girls are ready to swim the English Channel.

Linda has decorated the house with comfortable, contemporary furniture. But Don is happiest in a small cottage on the back of the property which he uses as a den and work room.

He sits there at a typewriter working on scripts. Thus far he has sold a teleplay to his own NBC-TV series.

THE COTTAGE IS unusual in one respect. Galloway has constructed a small aviary outside one window which is occupied by a pair of canaries, Monique and Tommy. He looks forward to a batch of young canaries, but so far there hasn't been a single egg produced.

Don cheerfully agrees that his life is not unlike that of any wage-earner except that he works in a glamorous industry — television.

He works 40 weeks a year in the series, leaving 12 weeks of hiatus for his writing and a two or three-week vacation.

On Friday or Saturday nights he and Linda can usually be found playing poker with another couple who have been friends for many years.

DON DOESN'T PLAY golf, tennis or laze on the beach. He resists personal interviews, saying: "I haven't got anything startling to say."

Last year he and Linda enrolled in a course in karate, paying tuition in advance. They attended a single lesson and decided it was not for them.

Galloway counts among his friends Raymond Burr who plays the title role in "Ironsides." They lunch together often when the show is in progress, and sometimes, have dinner when night shooting is scheduled. Otherwise Don sticks to himself.

Marin Poets' Corner

THE BROKEN FLOWER POT

Bits of clay in disarray 'round the dormant flower laying,
In quietness and emptiness on the winding road of going,
And the wind blew petals far from hope on the naked concrete straying,
Yet the quivering flower in quiet despair its inner petals showing,
Bloomed again within itself and kissed its concrete harbor.
The soil in clumps and scattered, crying to dust then slowly turning
The stem yet straight, proud, stretching up to meet the mystical arbor,
Spirited softness under the gray . . . life within still burning,
Feeling the broken flower pot with a cheek on the cold and hard
Where it is, is warm and sweet the rose before not knowing,
But the concrete lover embraces freely in blatant disregard,
For love of where the rose had been or sorrow in where it's going.

SAN RAFAEL — TERRY L. THOMPSON

THE SONNET WITHIN

While laying low beneath the mask of hate,
Despising life and loathing all that's in it,
I saw myself through eyes deep piercing straight,
An empty room with candles all unlit.
And bloodless daggers pierce through skin of steel,
Knowing ashes lie within my being.
Then silent sweat in blood starts to congeal
Within the veins that twist through limbs unseeing,
Content to passive lie throughout the days
Accepting life and doing naught to change,
And sucking milk from falsely given praise
Do once again my ordered life arrange;
Then soft within a voice emerging saith —
A better name for life like this is death.

NIXON'S CHINA PLANS

'Small' Story In Peking

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

Communist China's news media gave only routine treatment today to the joint Peking-Washington announcement that President Nixon will visit the Chinese mainland.

The Nationalist Chinese regime of Chiang Kai-shek on Taiwan reacted with dismay, the Russians with suspicion, but most other countries in Asia, Europe and elsewhere welcomed the news.

The official Communist party newspaper Peking Daily, which has the largest circulation in the country, carried the three-paragraph text of the announcement, as reported by the New China News Agency (NCNA), without additional information or editorial comment.

Peking Radio carried the announcement uring its main, nationwide broadcast Friday night. The announcement was fifth in the newscast's nine items and was not mentioned in subsequent broadcast Friday night or this morning. The radio customarily repeats important news items several times.

In what may have been a bureaucratic lag—or a sign that things really have not changed yet—NCNA followed up its Nixon announcement several hours later with the text of a party functionary's denunciation of "U.S. imperialism" as an "arch rival."

In Hong Kong, Communist newspapers, which take their editorial cue from Peking, gave the Nixon announcement prominent, front-page play. There was no editorial comment.

In Taipei, the Nationalist Chinese government lodged a "strong protest' with U.S. Ambassador Walter P. McConaughy. Diplomatic sources in the capital predicted the move would force on Chiang a "two Chinas" United Nations policy, which both the Nationalists and the Communists have been rejecting.

"We are very disturbed," said Foreign Minister Chow Su-kai, speaking for the vacationing president. The Nationalists have broken relations with every country that has recognized Peking.

The Kremlin, which has viewed the quickening of the U.S.-Chinese thaw with consternation reacted with distinct coolness. Tass, the official news agency, reported the invitation tersely and without comment.

The North Vietnamese delegates to the peace talks in Paris were as equinanimous, but diplomatic sources said the new Sino-American contacts may break the conference stalemate.

In Warsaw, sources predicted the secret ambassadorial talks between Peking and Washington, begun in Geneva in 1954, would close as new channels of communications open up.

Prime Minister Eisaku Sato of Japan said the new development "will contribute to the easing of tensions, especially in Asia, and is to be welcomed." He said Japan would continue its "friendly and amicable" relations with South Korea and Nationalist China.

South Vietnam, Cambodia, Thailand and Malaysia expressed hope the Nixon-Mao reapproachment would hasten an end to the Indochina war. Denmark and Sweden expressed a similar hope.

The news was equally welcomed by Great Britain, France, West Germany, Belgium, Norway and the Vatican.

In Cairo, where the U.S. has been promoting an Arab-Israeli settlement, the Middle East News Agency said "the natural road to any positive effort to solve the Indochina problem should pass through Peking."

Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said in Jerusalem the Middle East was the only tension-spot in the world where there is no direct contact between the opposing sides and hoped one would come about soon.

The press in Pakistan—from which Nixon's foreign adviser Henry Kissinger slipped out during last week to visit Peking and accept Chairman Mao's invitation for Nixon—praised the event.

The reporters also confessed they were baffled how they could have missed the year's greatest scoop.

Viet Peace Likely Key Peking Issue

Nixon's Policy Hinted

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—President Nixon will discuss peace in Vietnam as one of the "foremost, immediate" topics he will take up with Red Chinese leaders in Peking, White House officials confirm.

Mainland China is a main war arsenal for North Vietnam and the recent moves toward better Sino-American relations obviously open new diplomatic avenues for ending the war.

A ranking White House aide, talking to newsmen Friday, refused to speculate on what impact Nixon's visit would have on the Vietnam War. But he said the main purpose of the visit is to seek a more peaceful world, and added:

"FOREMOST OBJECT"

"In a quest for peace in the world, peace in Southeast Asia has to be a foremost, immediate objective." The Peking visit is expected to take place some time early next year, well before the May 1 date mentioned by Nixon in his announcement, the White House said.

The President, elated over his diplomatic coup in arranging the first visit by an American President to mainland China, winds up a 12-day stay at his Pacific Ocean front villa Sunday and will fly back to Washington.

He scheduled separate meetings with congressional leaders of both parties and his cabinet Monday morning to amplify his China policy.

After opening remarks, Nixon was expected to turn the briefing over to his national security affairs adviser, Henry A. Kissinger, who made the secret trip to Peking that arranged the invitation.

JAFFEE REPORT

Today, he awaited a report from Dr. Jerome K. Jaffee, his anti-drug abuse adviser, who toured Vietnam, and other Asian countries, to survey the extent of heroin addiction among U.S. troops there.

The Chief Executive held a national security council meeting for one hour Friday, apparently on Vietnam, China and the Middle East.

The White House refused to disclose any of the substantative talks covered in the Kissinger sessions with Red Chinese premier Chou En-lai during his 49 hours on the mainland.

But when asked whether Chou had brought up the question of a new Geneva conference to settle the war in Indochina, a White House official, who declined to be identified, said he did not want to talk about specifics. "We will have to let events speak for thenselves."

The official also insisted that the U.S. sincerely hopes to end the war at the Paris peace table.

He flared up when asked why Kissinger had not contacted Le Duc Tho, North Vietnam's special delegate, or Madame Nguyen Thi Binh, the Viet Cong foreign minister while he was in Paris. Both Communist delegates had said they would be willing to meet with Nixon's foreign policy adviser.

The official told reporters that Kissinger has "insisted through all periods ... that the surest most reliable and most desirable way of ending the war in Vietnam was through negotiations."

Furthermore, he said, Kissinger maintained this position "when it was being ridiculed and when people said that there was absolutely no possibility of negotiations."

Bagley Says No Welfare Program Yet

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly Welfare Committee has reached "conceptual agreement" on a welfare reform plan, but its chairman says "We don't have the program yet."

Chairman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, said Friday the panel, composed of five Democrats and four Republicans, has reviewed many areas of reform during a series of closed sessions.

"We have agreed on a number of them," Bagley said. "It's a conceptual agreement and not agreement on language or on an actual bill. We're not taking any hard votes. We're simply going through the components of the various proposals."

He said if a welfare reform plan pending in the Senate should fail passage, then his committee could draft another attempt by the end of next week.

A proposal by Sen. Anthony C. Beilenson, D-Beverly Hills, that includes several components of the governor's defeated welfare "reform" program is scheduled for a final vote early next week.

Beilenson's bill is projected to save $23 million this fiscal year. The governor's program would have saved $89 million.

Bagley said his committee is considering the concept of "expanding job finding and job training and expanded child care centers, not job creation."

"The governor touts the 'work ethic' but he doesn't do anything to provide the work," Bagley said. "If the 'work ethic' is worthwhile, and all the governor's speeches say it is, then obviously the legislature has to do something.

Rail, Labor Leaders In Talks To Settle Walkout

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Rail management and labor negotiators got together today with government mediators in an effort to settle a long dispute that resulted in strikes Friday against two railroads and imposition of tough work rules on those operating.

The United Transportation Union (UTU) and the rail management were attempting to break an impasse over work rules which led to walkout against the Southern Railroad and the Union Pacific idling nearly 49,000 employees. The UTU has threatened to strike three more lines next Friday.

George Ives, chairman of the National Mediation Board, and a Labor Department representative headed the mediation efforts today.

Pickets went up at 6 a. m. local time Friday 25 minutes before a 12-hour all-night marathon bargaining session broke down. UTU President Charles Luna, wearing a gray-stripe shirt and puffing a cigar, stalked out of the Labor Department declaring, "The strike is on."

As pickets appeared at major terminals of the two lines, other railroads began implementing changes in work rules which they said would greatly increase efficiency, but eliminate thousands of rail jobs and reduce thousands of pay cecks.

Despite the rules changes, a spokesman for the Association of American Railroads said no wildcat strikes had hit the other lines. "The men seem to be working under the rules," the spokesman said.

Luna said the workers would have to tighten their belts and keep struggling to eliminate the rules that will "wipe out over a hundred years of collective bargaining benefits."

The policy followed by the railroads, as a means of counteracting the effects of the selective strike that recently won Supreme Court support, "abolished all rules that pertain to rates of pay, rules covering seniority, provisions for lunch periods, conditions governing vacations and all arbitraries and rules pertaining to work assignments," the UTU said.

Despite a statement by Acting Labor Secretary Laurence H. Silberman that both sides are eager to resume talks and that the differences have been narrowed in the past 48 hours, Luna said, "far from bringing the men to their knees —this action (abolishing rules) just throws another roadblock in the way of eventual settlement of the dispute."

Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe said the effect of the strike can be contained, if the walkout can be limited to the Southern and Union Pacific —and can be ended soon. But Volpe indicated that no immediate end to the strike was in sight. "Talks will continue over the weekend," he said.

The most serious consequences today were in the upper midwest where farmers are harvesting a bumper wheat crop. They faced a shortage of boxcars before the walkout.

Southern and Union Pacific account for about nine per cent of the tracks in the United States and haul about 25 per cent of the nation's farm produce moved by rail.

Bullet Halts West Marin Phone Calls

Telephone service to 36 customers at Point Reyes Station was disrupted late Thursday and yesterday when a bullet was fired into a Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. relay station.

The shooting, apparently related to the four-day-old strike by communications workers, occurred at about 10 p.m. Thursday, phone company officials said. The station was unmanned.

Franklin Rudolph, manager of the company's Mill Valley office, said phone service was restored at 1 a.m. yesterday.

The bullet tore through lines and fuses, he said.

Jack Eddy, district manager for the company, said acts of vandalism have occurred throughout the country since the strike began.

About 500,000 telephone workers, including 550 in Marin, are striking the company nationwide in a salary dispute. Workers are asking for a 25 per cent wage increase in a three-year contract with cost-of-living provisions. Bell Telephone, Pacific Telephone's parent company, has countered with an 11 per cent raise offer.

Meanwhile, automated equipment and supervisory personnel are continuing to provide service. However, equipment breakdowns and lack of workers to install phones has delayed service in some areas.

TYPHOON'S PART

Heavy Fighting In Central Highlands

SAIGON (UPI)—The South Vietnamese command today reported heavy fighting Friday in the Central Highlands and northern parts of the country.

The northern front was still today as Typhoon Jean, the worst July weather in 20 years, swung in from the Tonkin Bay and headed for Hanoi.

A military spokesman said allied troops killed 141 Communist soldiers in battles scattered across the country Friday. The only allied casualty reported was an American helicopter crewman, wounded when his OH6 "Loach" was shot down.

A U.S. military spokesman said the observation craft, the 1,978th lost in Vietnam since 1961, was brought down Friday in the A Shau Valley, four miles northwest of A Luoi. The valley is a major Communist route into the northern provinces.

The big new typhoon dropped six to nine inches of rain along the coastal plains and mountains in the northern sector and brought air and ground operations to a halt. Weathermen said it was about 130 miles east of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) separating North and South Vietnam and was expected to hit Hanoi Sunday.

Spokesman said South Vietnamese killed 30 Communists in three scattered fights in the north, and another 15 in the vicinity of Firebases 5 and 6, opposite the junction of the Lao, Cambodian and Vietnamese borders in the Central Highlands.

They also killed 14 in a fight south of Pleiku City and just west of the old special forces camp at Plei Me, on a main Communist infiltration route. Eighteen other guerrillas were killed in the Mekong Delta.

Session On Successor To Bruce

The Marin County Board of Supervisors, in its quest for a replacement for former County Administrator Alan Bruce, held an unannounced dinner meeting in Sausalito July 8 with a committee that had been appointed to screen applicants, it was learned yesterday.

Board Chairman Louis H. Baar said the screening committee was authorized at the session to hire a professional consulting firm to help recruit and screen candidates nationwide, at a cost of not more than $4,000.

The firm selected was Griffenhagen-Kroeger, Inc. of Berkeley, Baar reported.

No public notices of the meeting was issued in advance because the county counsel's office advised that none was needed due to personnel discussions involved, according to Fran Warner, clerk to the supervisors.

All five board members met over dinner at the Alta Mira Hotel, Mrs. Warner said. The supervisors then departed to let the screening panel — headed by Ignacio Vella, chairman of the Sonoma County Board of Supervisors — continue its discussions.

Four-Nation Parley On Jordan Warring

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and leaders from Libya, Syria and Sudan met today at the Mediterranean summer resort of Mersa Matruh to discuss the renewed fighting in Jordan between troops and guerrillas and the Middle East crisis in general, political sources in Cairo said.

The sources said the talks in Mersa Matruh, about 155 miles west of Alexandria, began Thursday. Meeting with Sadat were Premier Col. Moammar el-Khadafy of Libya, Vice President Mahmoud el-Ayyoubi of Syria and Revolution Command Council member Zein el-Abedeen Abdel Kader of the Sudan.

The semi-official Middle East News Agency said the meeting today lasted 75 minutes but gave no details of what was discussed. Nor was any information available on the earlier talks.

In Israel, Foreign Minister Abba Eban said Friday night he believed the United States has "decided in principle" to give Prime Minister Golda Meir the additional warplanes requested in June.

Eban said in a military radio broadcast from Jerusalem that Israel needs the F4 Phantom jet fighter-bomber to keep pace with Egypt's rapid arms build-up and is waiting anxiously for word from Washington on when the planes will arrive.

In Amman, UPI Correspondent John Bonar reported King Hussein's army is forcing the remnants of the Palestinian guerrilla movement in Jordan into a narrow strip of land. There, he said, the army will be able to control the commandos' movements and supplies shipments.

Eban said he believes the Nixon Administration still favors a balance of arms between Israel and the Arabs.

Bomb Scare At Apartments

About 20 San Rafael residents, some still in their pajamas, were routed from their Canal Street apartment house today after a device which appeared to be a bomb was found in a utility room in the building.

The device — four road flares and an alarm clock connection with wires — was discovered at about 8:30 a.m. by a garbageman making his rounds at 220 Canal Street.

Police evacuated the apartment house and cordoned off the street. Two Army bomb disposal experts from the Presidio of San Francisco, summoned by police, declared the bomb a fake.

Senate To Print DAR Proceedings

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Senate has voted to spend $3,097 to print the proceedings of the annual convention of the Daughters of the American Revoltion as a Senate document.

There was no discussion and no opposition when the measure passed on a voice vote Friday.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Emergency

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—Secretary of Agriculture Clifford M. Hardin declared a national emergency Friday, authorizing a release of "such sums as may be necessary....to control and eradicate" a horse sleeping sickness epidemic spreading northward through Texas and threatening other states.

The disease, Venezuelan equine encephalomyelitis (Vee), has already killed up to 6,000 horses in Texas and Mexico and made hundreds of humans ill.

Doctors reported Friday a 6-year-old San Antonio girl died of some form of encephalomyelitis, possibly the Vee strain. But it was emphasized that Vee, though fatal to horses, almost never kills humans.

The girl was identified only as the daughter of an Air Force enlisted man.

Representatives of states bordering Texas clamored for vaccine to protect themselves before the epidemic spreads further, but what short supplies of vaccine the government has on hand are being used exclusively in Texas.

Roving Report

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—President Nixon got a report Friday from David M. Kennedy, the roving ambassador who toured the world asking foreign nations to voluntarily limit certain exports to the United States.

Kennedy spent six weeks overseas, as part of the administration's effort to get foreign nations to limit their penetration of the U.S. market and head off passage of trade quotas by Congress.

Kennedy spent most of his time in tthe Far East, urging voluntary export limits on textiles, shoes and steel.

A Similarity?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The attorney for mass murder suspect Juan V. Corona said Friday there were similarities between this week's sickle slayings in the Sierra foothills and the 25 killings his client is charged with.

Richard Hawk also said he plans to file false arrest damage suits next week on behalf of Corona, 37, a farm labor contractor, against Sutter County and its officials.

Corona was indicted Monday on 25 counts of murder in the slayings of itinerant farm workers whose bodies, hacked by a cleaver or machete, were found in graves along the Feather River near Yuba City.

Rain Deaths

SEOUL (UPI)—More than five inches of rain fell on much of Central Korea today with 30 persons reported killed, 13 injured and 10 missing in flooding and mudslides.

Police said more than 800 homes were flooded and nearly 3,000 persons were homeless. Several passengers were missing in the capsizing of a ferry in the rain-swollen Han River at Seoul.

Spain Is Next

KINSHASA, The Congo (UPI) —Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, in the backstretch of his round-the-world diplomatic mission, ended his tour of blak Africa today and set off for a business and pleasure visit to Spain.

Agnew was departing today for the eight-hour flight across much of Africa and was to arrive in Madrid barely in time for a formal dinner.

He has scheduled meetings Sunday and Monday both with Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the Spanish head of state and his heir apparent, Prince Juan Carlos.

After three days in Madrid, Agnew and his entourage will fly to an undisclosed location on th Costa Del Sol where he will be joined by his wife, Judy, his two daughters and close friends for four days of rest and relaxation.

Agnew wound up a seven-day, three-nation trip across black Africa Friday with a lengthy discussion — which included President Nixon's proected trip to China — with President Joseph Mobutu of the Democratic Republic of The Congo.

MOTHERS APPLAUD

Princess Grace's Solution To Child's Blissful Life

CHICAGO (UPI) — Princess Grace of Monaco told applauding mothers Friday that breast-feeding could help encourage family unity and thereby help fight "this current wave of public indecency."

The blonde former movie star criticized films, television commercials, magazines and other media for "debasing" values and urged renewed emphasis on the mother-child relationship to combat such influences.

Her Serene Highness was speaking about her own experiences in nursing her children to 1,200 members of La Leche League International. The organization founded 15 years ago in Franklin, Ill., by mothers who wanted to encourage others to try breastfeeding.

Princess Grace told the women, many of them nursing their own children or obviously expecting new offspring, that affairs of state were not allowed to interfere with feeding when her children were newborn.

The princess said she nursed each of her children for two months and wished she could have continued longer.

One of the ways in which all of us can help to combat this current wave of public indecency which is threatening to undermine and destroy western civilization, is to concentrate upon and increase the solidity of the family," she said. "This solidity begins with the child at the mother's breast."

At a press conference earlier, she told reporters she had trouble deciding what films her own children should see and was also concerned about "television commericials, some of the songs being sung, magazines, films, everything."

"It seems to me, nothing's sacred anymore. It's kind of difficult, I think, in bringing up children to try to give them a sense of values with all this exposure to everything being debased and being made ridiculous," Princess Grace said.

"When other children in a family can watch a mother breastfeeding a little baby and being able to do this without embarrassment, to realize the wholesomeness of sex and the naturalness of it, this helps prepare them for what they are exposed to outside the home," she said. "And they don't get the wrong ideas and put sex in the wrong proportions."

Head-On Crash Kills Nine; A Lone Survivor

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (UPI) —Nine young persons were killed early today when two cars collided head-on, molding into a single mass of wreckage, police said.

There was one survivor, who was listed in critical condition at a Flint, Mich., hospital.

Eight of the victims were in the same car, along with the survivor. The ninth victim was the driver of a car which, traveling north in the southbound lane of Interstate 75 just south of Grand Blanc, forced another vehicle off the road before crashing head-on into the vehicle with the nine occupants.

The occupants of the car which was forced off the road prior to the fatal accident escaped injury.

Three of the victims, all from the Detroit suburb of Troy, were identified as: William Douglas Nance, 19; Louis Beall Jr., 21; and David Klepetsanis, 18.

The names of the others, including the two drivers, were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Three Die In Collapse Of Mine

ASHERS FORK, Ky. (UPI)— Rescue workers early today found the bodies of three coal miners trapped and killed by a slate fall in a small mine in this southeastern Kentucky community.

The bodies of Oscar Sayler, 22, Hima, Ky., and Frank Gibson, 21, and Ernest Harris, 26, both of Manchester, Ky., were seen through cracks, buried under five feet of slate in a shaft of the Halmar Coal Co. mine.

Sayler and Gibson, both single, had been hired the day before the accident, while Harris, married and the father of two, was hired only last week.

About 50 workers, many of them coal miners living in neighboring towns who volunteered their services, worked in shifts, five at a time, to bring out the bodies. They were not expected to cut through the rock to the bodies until this afternoon.

Officials said there were at least three separate cave-ins. Gibson and Sayler were trapped in the first, about 150 feet from the opening of the mine and only eight feet from the face, where the coal is cut.

U.C. Regents Ask Budget Slash Veto

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— University of California regents have asked the State Legislature to override Gov. Ronald Reagan's veto of $13 million in funds from the university budget.

The governor, who was present and voted against the resolution Friday, said a vote for the budget "is a vote to increase the taxes of the people of California."

Regents voted 12-6 in favor of the resolution by Regent William M. Roth of San Francisco after approving by a 16-1 vote a "more polite" resolution saying the board reaffirmed its earlier stand on the budget. Reagan cast the only "no" vote on the resolution introduced by Regent Dean A. Watkins.

The university originally requested $375 million for the 1971-72 budget and the legislature voted to appropriate $350 million, enough for a 10 per cent raise for all faculty members. Reagan cut this back to $337 million.

The governor and regents favoring Roth's resolution clashed heatedly during debate.

Hearing Ordered For Nude Dancer

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—A exotic dancer who says her nightclub act "climaxes in complete nudity" has won a court hearing Monday on the constitutionality of Portland's new nude dance ban.

The dancer, who performs under the name Casey Champagne, asked Circuit Court Judge Phillip Roth for a temporary injunction against enforcement of the ordinance. The judge denied the request, but ordered a hearing next week.

Hospital Releases Snakebite Victim

SAN GABRIEL, Calif. (UPI)—Barry Sone, 11, who was bitten by a dead rattlesnake, was released from the hospital in good condition Friday.

The boy touched the rattler after his mother had chopped it in two with a spade, and was bitten by the still-functioning reflex muscle action. Snake experts said the biting reflex continues active for some time after the snake's death.

Venue Change Is Asked For Bennett

An attorney for William O. Bennett of Kentfield, state Board of Equalization member, asked yesterday for a change of venue of Bennett's scheduled Marin trial on a drunk in public charge.

The attorney, William O. Weissich of San Rafael, said in his motion filed in Marin Municipal Court that an impartial and unbiased jury could not be obtained in Marin County for the case.

He blamed a "deluge of publicity" stemming from Bennett's trial last month on a drunken driving charge. In that case, a Marin Municipal Court jury's guilty verdict was thrown out by Judge Robert A. Smallman.

The drunken driving charge stemmed from Bennett's arrest in Sausalito April 25. The drunk in public charge is in connection with his arrest March 4, also in Sausalito.

He said he had been told the I-J is seen by about 172,000 of an estimated 200,000 persons living in Marin.

A hearing on the motion has been set in municipal court for July 29.

Death Ruled Accidental

The death of a 57-year-old Sleepy Hollow man June 17 was apparently accidental, the Marin County coroner's office said yesterday.

Benjamin Masten Perkins of 200 Deer Hollow Road died when his pick-up truck careened down a grassy slope in his front yard and crashed into the side of a barn.

An autopsy was performed to determine if cause of death was the accident or whether Perkins suffered a seizure just before the accident.

Coroner's investigator Keith C. Craig said today there was no indication of a seizure.

Attorney For Magee Will Seek Removal

The attorney for Ruchell Magee said yesterday he plans to ask to be removed from the case Monday because of remarks made by a San Francisco federal court judge.

Ernest L. Graves of Los Angeles, the court-appointed lawyer for Magee, earlier had said that comments about his fees made by Judge Samuel Conti of U.S. District Court had made it difficult for him to continue in the case.

Conti had remarked about the $8,500 paid by Marin County to Graves recently for his services. The judge made his comments July 9 during a hearing on a bid by Magee's codefendant, Angela Davis, to have their case transferred to federal court. The pair is charged in connection with last August's shoot-out at the Marin Civic Center that left Judge Harold J. Haley and three others dead.

Conti, rejecting the bid, returned the case to Marin County, where pretrial hearings are due to resume Monday.

Graves also told the Independent-Journal yesterday that "accident will happen" in connection with publicizing of secret grand jury testimony through a motion by Miss Davis's attorneys.

The lawyer said it was probably accidental that the entire transcript of grand jury proceedings — some of which previously was sealed — was attached to a motion made to an appellate court in San Francisco.

The portion made public for the first time is testimony by Asst. Dist. Atty. Gary W. Thomas which said that Magee fired the shotgun blast that killed Judge Haley.

Graves reiterated a statement made earlier in court that he did not consider the testimony particularly damaging to his client but that "having been once sealed, it assumed a special emphasis."

Costs Of Sewer Line To Be Told

San Rafael City Council will learn the actual cost of the first stage of the city's $1.4 million sewer modernization program, at its meeting at 8 p.m. Monday in the city hall.

Public Works Director Norris M. Rawles is to report on contractors' bids due to be opened at 10 a.m. Monday. The bids must be reviewed by the federal department of Housing and Urban Development before contracts can be awarded formally by the council. Rawles will ask the council to adopt a resolution of intent to award the contract, at Monday's meeting.

The council also will hear landowner Ed Dulin's appeal against planning commission denial of his request to place fill on a 1.38-acre lot at 1955 Francisco Boulevard.

Wallace K. Shepherd, executive director of the Marin County Housing Authority, will appear before the council. He will ask the city to eliminate two-year residency requirements for eligibility in the leased housing program, discuss closer liaison between the city and the authority, and propose that the authority act for the city to build 40 low-rent units authorized in a 1964 referendum.

A joint powers agreement accepting $10,000 in county funds to support the city's senior citizen program also will be considered by the council.

Wrong District

In yesterday's Independent-Journal an error in a headline had the Dixie School District trustees approving a $1,200 expenditure for employees' health insurance. It should have read the Nicasio School District.

killed nine guerrillas deep in the U Minh Forest, along the southwestern tip of Vietnam, while supporting South Vietnamese 21st Infantry Division troops ona sweep of the swamp and jungle area.

South Korean forces reported killing a total of 55 guerrillas in scattered clashes in the central coast provinces of Binh Dinh, Phu Yen and Khanh Hoa.

The South Vietnamese also reported clashes to the west and southwest of Hue and 50 miles south of Da Nang. Spokesmen said 14 Viet Cong and North Vietnamese were killed and one prisoner taken.

The U.S. command issued no morning war communique today for the 13th time this month, indicating no significant contact involving American troops.

Field reports from Phnom Penh said Communist forces bombarded Lompong Chamlong 15 miles east of the capital. The government said the mortar attack caused no casualties or damage but kept Cambodian troops pinned down.

Cambodian forces have been trying to force North Vietnamese troops out of the marshes east of the capital since June 1, lest the Communists get close enough to fire rockets into the center of the city.

Theft-Burglary Case Bound Over

John Norman McMurphy, 18, of Corte Madera, was bound over to Marin Superior Court yesterday on charges of car theft and burglary.

He is to be arraigned in superior court Wednesday.

McMurphy was arrested July 7 by Marin County sheriff's deputies on Highway 101.

The car he was driving had been stolen from a Corte Madera man earlier that day and money and property found in the car had been taken from a Bel Marin Keys residence that had just been burglarized, deputies said.

Rec Panel Likes School For Center

The Sausalito Recreation Commission wants the city council to limit study for a municipal center to the Central School site.

The city is considering sending $14,000 for a study on the possible use of the Central School property and the city's waterfront property as a municipal center.

According to James E. Muldoon, the commission Thursday night did not say it favored the school as the municipal center's site, only that the proposed study should be limited to that area. The city planning commission, meeting the same night, declared itself in favor of buying the school site for a municipal center.

The commission will meet at 4 p.m., Tuesday to walk through the school to study possible uses for recreation commission needs.

In other business, Muldoon said, Chairman Thomas Rogers submitted an eight-page proposal concerning modifications to the proposed Park Plaza Plan, including public access to the waterfront in that area and a commercial development in the area of the Bank of America.

He said the commission did not consider at the meeting, but will study it for discussion at a later date.

Wrong Figure In 'Food Conspiracy'

The story said that a $223 bill would have been run up at a regular market for an identical list of items purchased through the food conspiracy for $2.25. Actually, the store figure was $3.23.

BRUCE

sors, requires that 24 hours written notice be provided for all special meetings, even those legally closed to the public.

The Independent-Journal was unable today to reach any spokesmen for the county counsel's office for comment or explanation.

Supervisor Michael Wornum said today the meeting was closed to the public because the board and the screening committee discussed qualifications of specific county employees for the post.

At the July 8 meeting, the supervisors limited advertising in the recruiting effort so that total cost would not exceed $4,000 for the hiring process, said Baar.

About 14 applications and queries have been turned over to Vella and his committee.

On the screening committee are Vella, Thomas J. Mellon, San Francisco city administrator; Jack M. Merelman, general counsel for the County Supervisors Association of California; and M. D. Tarshes, San Mateo County administrator.

Salary for the administrator's job is set at between $26,000 and $30,000. Bruce was drawing $29,410 per year when he quit on July 1.

Condition Good From Accident

Two San Francisco men were reported in good condition today at two Sonoma County hospitals after a car-truck accident yesterday on Highway 101, south of Sierra Avenue, Cotati.

Ralph Acuna, 30, suffered head injuries in the accident and was admitted to Santa Rosa Memorial Hospital. His passenger, Anthony Boyadzis, 29, was in Hillcrest Hospital in Petaluma. He suffered face cuts and broken ribs.

The California Highway Patrol said their car, southbound at 2:05 a.m. yesterday, struck the rear of a slow-moving truck driven by Frank Montgomery, 55, of Fortuna.

Gallagher Will Lead School Panel

Leroy R. Erickson of Valley Ford was elected vice president; N. Louis Passalacqua of Bodega Bay, clerk, and Roy A. Parks of Tomales, trustee representative, at an organizational meeting Thursday night.

Supt. Charles A. McCully said trustees adopted a publication budget of $1,155,325, and will have a public hearing on it at 2 p.m. Aug. 6 at the district office, Tomales.

McCully said if legislation is passed to reimburse the district for tax loss because of the Point Reyes National Seashore being taken off the rolls and agricultural preserves paying a reduced rate, the budget would be increased. Trustees accepted the resignations of Jay Armstrong, teacher, Tomales High School; Wanda Madson, cook, Tomales High; and Regina Pozzi, teacher aide, Tomales Elementary.

The board hired Michael Maloney as an intern teacher at Tomales High at a salary of $6,342 a year.

The Bastille was destroyed July 14, 1789.

UC Senate Gives Educator Award

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—The University of California Academic Senate has given the Clark Kerr award to outgoing Chancellor Roger Heyns.

Members unanimously voted for a resolution praising Hayns as a "patient, courageous and wise educational leader in a period of turbulence and of much hostility to higher education."

Heyns is leaving to take a post at the University of Michigan. He will be succeeded by Albert H. Bowker, who now heeds the City University of New York. The award is named for former university president Clark Kerr.

Playboy Bunny Helps Run Show

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—When disc jockey Terry Lee became honorary mayor of Los Angeles Thursday he promptly appointed his own city council — a Playboy Bunny, two actresses, an actor and a former football player.

Lee, of KREL in Corona, decided he could play mayor because Mayor Sam Yorty had played disc jockey last week, substituting for vacationing Dick Whittinghill on KMPC.

With permission from Yorty, Lee broadcast from City Hall for three hours after being sworn in by City Clerk Rex E. Layton.

CAMERINO FASHIONS

Marco Polo Look On Italian Front

VENICE, Italy (UPI)—A tall beige camel regarded us with a jaundiced eye, stamped a cloven hoof and shrugged the foremost of his two humps.

He wore the same look of disdain his ancestors once gave Marco Polo. This surly fellow was introducing the Marco Polo-inspired line of Roberta di Camerino in the first of the Italian fall and winter fashion shows Thursday night.

As such they were typical of the simple dress with fancy look the jet set buys in quantity from Roberta, queen of the expensive little nothing.

All Italy's top designers have announced a return to the classic look for fall in the Rome collections opening tonight, with emphasis on suits and coats with hems somewhere in the vicinity of the knee.

Roberta chose the Chanel length, just below the knee, for daytime and for evening dropped those wool and silk jersey pullovers to the ankle, sometimes slitting them up the thigh.

Most women buy a purse to match a dress. Roberta's collection gave one the idea the wearer bought a purse and then needed a dress to match —and a hat and scarf and coat and boots and luggage. The carryover of the same print sometimes made it difficult to see where clothes left off and accessories began.

THE SHOW setting was as exclusive as the clientele for whom the merchandise is destined.

The camel, two shetland ponies and a baby elephant joined models in parading through the white washed interior of a long brick building Napoleon once used as a powder storehouse. The building stands alone on Roberta's private wooded island in the Venetian lagoon not far from Marco Polo Airport.

Guests arriving by motor launch were greeted by gondoliers in three ceremonial barges owned by the city of Venice — replicas of a dragon boat, a Viking ship and of the Doge's barge with its gilded lion up front.

ITALIAN DESIGNERS are unveiling their creations for fall and winter in Rome through next week, and these two versions from the Fontana Sisters collection were previews of the Fontana showing to be held next week. They are turquoise and yellow Montgomery-style long coats, designed to be worn over cocktail dresses. (UPI Cablephoto)

INSIDE RUSSIA

Children Are The Privileged Class

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Children are Russia's privileged class.

Soviet educators accept the theory that the most important period in life for physical, mental and moral development is from birth to age 7. A majority of Russian parents apparently agree. The result is a huge and growing network of nurseries and kindergartens throughout the country.

Mrs. Kitty Weaver, world traveler and student, offers a detailed description of the Soviet's little-known pre-school centers in her book, "Lenin's Grandchildren."

IT WAS LENIN who, immediately after the 1917 revolution, called for the widest possible expansion of public- pre-school education. The Russian government set to work and, by 1960, 3,115,000 pupils were enrolled. The number of children in nurseries and kindergartens is now nearing 12 million.

The service is largely paid for by the government. It permits mothers to work and still know their children are being well cared for, and in the company of other children.

"We love our children," the director of a center told Mrs. Weaver. "We call them our privileged class because we try to give them the best of what we have.

"We haven't always had so much —we lost 20 million people and many of our cities in the last war alone. The children are our future, and we want that future to be a happy one."

Mrs. Weaver's report drew warm praise from Alexander V. Zaporozhets, director of preschool education in the Russian Academy of Education. He took exception to some critical statements, but said even a long list of the book's "shortcomings" could not detract from its indisputable overall merits.

THE SOVIET nurseries and kindergartens, which can accommodate children three months old through age 6, are not compulsory or free. Any city family may send children to them at any time, and about 80 per cent of these children are enrolled. the supply of institutions in small towns and rural areas cannot yet meet demand. the Soviet government now is opening more preschools in these areas.

The state bears 75 to 80 per cent of the school cost. The parents' share is determined on the basis of a family's income and number of children. It usually ranges from three to 12 rubles ($3.30 to $13.20) a month.

The school buildings generally are two-story brick or stucco with big windows and large, pleasant rooms. An institution may be strictly a day school or a five-day live-in school with the children spending only weekends at home.

THE NURSERIES accommodate infants from two months to age 3. Kindergartens are for 3 to 6 year olds.

A program of instruction outlines methods to be used in rearing the children, and a "Handbook of pre-school Education" defines details of buildings, equipment and personnel.

The nursery school and kindergarten are pocket-sized collectives, where small Soviet citizens are taught they must put the welfare of the community ahead of personal preference.

"We want the children not only to learn to play, but to play together," a school director said. "This is the beginning of collectivism, which is the basis of our system."

Mrs. Weaver saw the premise put to work when an 18-month baby received a guest of approximately the same age in his playpen. They stared at one another for a while until finally the visitor smiled and said something in Russian baby talk that sounded like 'goo.'"

THE NURSERY staff was pleased by the babies' first meeting.

The Russian attitude toward treatment of toys is typical of Soviet ideology, Mrs. Weaver said, and is one of the basic differences between Russian and American children.

"Look, Milan, how you have spoiled this toy," a Russian child may be told. "Do you know how much work it took in the factory to make such a pretty autobus? And you have broken it so quickly. All of the children loved this autobus, and now they will not have a bus."

In America, Mrs. Weaver said, a teacher is more apt to say, "Now you won't get another toy, since you don't know how to take care of it." The American child is not made to feel he has betrayed his country by breaking a toy.

HELEN HELP US!

DEAR HELEN:

My girl has five pairs of hot pants. I don't complain.

But when I picked her up and I was wearing a pair of hot pants that weren't as short as hers, she threw a fit. After all, they're sold in men's stores. She says they look obscene, men having hairy legs and muscles. And she wouldn't go out with me until I went home and changed.

Should a man be dictated to-like this? — GUY

DEAR GUY:

It depends on who wears the pants in this twosome. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

The other night several of us kids were swimming in our pool and this neighbor yelled over that if we didn't stop making so much noise he'd call the cops. We stopped.

So the next night, he and his wife had a big fight that lasted until after midnight, and kept everybody awake.

Did we call the cops? No! We didn't even call up and tell them to pipe down. — IS THIS FAIR?

DEAR ITF:

No. But I'll bet it was interesting. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

About the girl who worried over her big feet: She should cheer up — it could be worse: I not only have a size 10 foot, I also have a size 10½ foot. I have the choice of either swimming in my left shoe or folding up accordion style in my right. Please only use my initials. I'm still senstive about my tootsies. The only time I don't hurt is when I laugh. — J.C.

DEAR HELEN:

When I read the letter from "Tired of Playing Footsie" I was reminded about my sensitivity over big feet when I was a teenager.

Now, at 24, I envy her because you see, when I look down, there is only one size 11 foot there. I was in a dune buggy accident a year ago, and lost the other.

My fiance (we were to be married in September) was driving the buggy. He wasn't hurt. I saw him only once after that, when he came to say he had been transferred and "would write soon." He never did, but people say he's still around town.

Tell "Tired" to count her blessings. Both of them. — ONE FOOT IN THE GRAVE

DEAR HELEN:

I'd like to tell "Nadine" the "six foot giant" that she is short by my standards. Wonder who's giving her this height complex?

If she is afraid to ask a guy to go to her queen's ball then she is going to be too shy to stand up in front of the audience and receive her crown. To think that in this day, when fashions are being made for tall girls, there is a person left who is ashamed of being tall! Tell Nadine to walk proud. She isn't tall — everyone else is short! — SIX-FOOT-TWO, FEMALE AND PROUD

DEAR HELEN:

Our daughter, age 14, is six-feet-five-inches and wears a size 14 shoe. Because I let my height bother me as a youngster, I've taken special precautions to help her be proud of hers: She isn't bothered by it nearly as much as the people who ogle her. Why must we all be the same to be accepted! — MRS. T.

DEAR MRS. T.:

Only small people (in spirit, not stature) ostracize the different. — H.

Day In Santa Rosa Is Planned Friday

A day in Santa Rosa is planned for Friday by residents of the Tamalpais Retirement Residence in Greenbrae. Leaving by bus at 9:30 a.m. they will first view the garden show and art exhibits at the Sonoma County Fair.

Lunch at the Marshall House will follow and a tour of gift shops and the Gallery of Flowers, where Santa Rosa artists' works are on display, is planned.

Protein Need

One-half cup of creamed cottage cheese fills about one-fourth of a girl's daily protein need, while being low in calories and in cost. Cottage cheese does not replace milk but adds essential protein to keep muscles firm and agile, say Dairy Council of California nutrition consultants.

Engagement Of Couple Announced

The engagement of Elizabeth Ann Vallor to Michael T. Naughton of San Francisco has been announced by her parents, Lt. Col. (ret.) and Mrs. John C. Vallor of Martinez.

The future bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Naughton of Terra Linda.

Elizabeth is a graduate of College Park High School in Pleasant Hill and San Francisco State College.

Michael was graduated from Terra Linda High School and attended the College of Marin and is employed in the data processing department of the Bank of America.

The pair have set a Nov. 6 wedding date.

Streamlined Style

The "unstructured" suit is due to capture male interest this summer, the Men's Fashion Association of America says. These skeletonized suits eliminate much interior construction, making them lighter, softer, more comfortable to wear. The "unstructureds" include both knits and woens in a host of colors, patterns and styles.

SEW SIMPLE

The Fabric's Wrong Side Could Just Be Right One

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

Seems that there is so much emphasis about the right or wrong side of fabric. I have seen a satin-back crepe or a new crepe back satin, and I would like to combine these two sides for a contrast in my garment. They would be exactly the same color, and it would be so simple if I knew this were possible. Also, while I'm on the subject, I have often seen fabric I loved, only to be told that I liked the "wrong" side. Is there a set rule that we must use the right side?

MRS. M.M.W.

DEAR MRS. M.M.W.,

Wools, especially, often have loose threads where the yarns have been joined, showing on the wrong side. Examine your fabric carefully, if the coloring and weaving is the same on both sides, there is no reason they can't be reversed if you prefer.

As to reversing the satin and crepe; here again, the finish side is the approved side because special care is used to assure perfection of weave. If you have examined the fabric carefully, and it looks the same on both sides, by all means use them in a contrast for your design detailing instead of another color. Rules are made to be broken. There comes a decision we must all make ourselves and this can usually be guided by good judgment.

"When constructing any kind of pants from knits, when you will be using the elastic waist, it's easy to have a smooth bulk-free finish. If your fabric has a tendency to ravel, overcast the raw edges first. Press seams open and machine stitch close to the outer edge, twice the width of the hem, if you have a one-inch turnover, stitch for two inches. This eliminates any obstructing when inserting the elastic."

DEAR EUNICE,

Your name is quoted with almost the same reverence as the Bible among our friends. You have helped so many of us, hope you have one more answer for me. My daughter is being married this fall and since the event will be in the evening, she prefers me to wear a long gown. My older girl was married just two years ago, and I bought a very expensive beaded chiffon dress and am not able to buy another at this time.

As you can imagine, my dress is too short and is also sleeveless and somehow it just doesn't look new but the dress is in perfect condition. Any suggestions you can give me so I won't have a "patched" look will be more than appreciated.

MRS. G. S.

DEAR MRS. G. S.,

I think it will be relatively simple for you to use your dress, and with some imagination, make it look perfect this fall. One of the newest looks for fall is the separates look in a one-piece dress, in other words, using a combination of two to three fabrics in the same dress.

I would suggest you remove the skirt from the bodice and cut long sleeves from the beaded skirt fabric. Next, combine the beaded chiffon with a skirt of velvet, satin, crepe, etc. that will complement the bodice fabric. If you need a slimming line, try to carry out the same color. If you have a small waistline, the belt could be another contrast, otherwise apply a bias fold of the skirt fabric to cover the seam where the skirt joins the bodice.

Martha Heartily Approves Of Nixon Plan To Visit Peking

LONDON (UPI) — Martha Mitchell says she heartily approves of President Nixon's plan to visit Communist China because people should live as brothers and sisters, whatever their politics. Anyhow, she said, there are some people in the United States worse than the Communists.

She spoke her mind on a variety of matters, including the Pentagon papers, American youth and her own fondness for speaking out, during a tea Friday with newsmen.

"We have become one world now," she told the newsmen. "With the weapons we have, it's no longer one country against another. We should live together as brother and sister, Communists and non-Communists."

Besides, she said, "There are elements worse than the Communists in our own nation."

Mrs. Mitchell, smoothing her bright emerald taffeta dress, said she thought the American undergrounds, both black and white, were "trying to overthrow the government by force."

As for the younger generation, Mrs. Mitchell said many of them were "a bunch of spoiled brats, they've had too much of everything."

Mrs. Mitchell said she thought government leaders were deceiving the people in not telling them what they were really thinking and doing and and that was why she talked so frankly to the press.

In one way, the publication of the Pentagon papers was justified, she said, because "the citizens have a right to know."

"But, on the other hand, I don't approve of publishing stolen goods and the government had to take the stand they did," she said.

She complained that American newspapers were always misquoting her.

"For instance, I always try to return calls to newsmen, and when I do, the headlines read 'Martha calls again' as though I instigated it," she said.

Mistrial In Protest Trial

Trial of 10 persons arrested at a May 5 sit-in at the San Rafael office of the U.S. Selective Service ended yesterday in a mistrial.

After almost six hours of deliberation, a Marin Municipal Court jury indicated it was unable to reach a verdict on misdemeanor charges of failing to disperse and wilfully obstructing a public place.

Four persons found guilty June 17 of the two misdemeanor charges were sentenced by Judge Peter Allen Smith and five persons found guilty and sentenced July 8 had their jail terms cut short by Judge Baty.

Judge Smith gave the four persons found guilty by a jury in his court a choice of $200 fines each or 20 days work for the Marin County Parks and Recreation Department.

Ordered to return to court Monday to tell the judge their choice were Thomas Louis Oleari, 22, and Bryan Thomas Geddy, 23, both of Fairfax; Willam Gaston Begelow, 19, of Tiburon, and Lillian Lee Cunningham, 19, of San Rafael.

Five persons sentenced to 10 days in Marin County Jail were released three days early yesterday by Judge Baty at the request of their attorney, Robert Della Valle of San Rafael.

Released were William Griffin Zane, 26, of Fairfax; Robert Nelson Wall, 24, of Novato; James Kimo Campbell, 24, of San Rafael, and Randy Clifton Patterson, 22, and Mary Blair Willard, 22, both of Kentfield.

In lieu of serving the remaining three days in jail, Judge Baty ordered them to work three days with the county parks and recreation department.

"If they haven't gotten my point by now, they aren't going to get it by Monday," the judge said in granting Della Valle's motion.

The five were released from the jail while the jury in the trial of the 10 was still deliberating, and they joined in the cheers and smiles when jury foreman Ione L. Wilson of Ross reported the jury had made no progress since its first ballot.

On trial were Kenneth William Bott, 19, of Mill Valley; Robert Alan Le Blanc, 23, Gregory Carlton Fearon, 22, Carol Marie Ouellet, 20, Deborah Lee Neil, 18, and Daryl Kent Grossman, 23, all of San Rafael; Michele Tormanen, 19, and James Russell Allen, 23, both of Fairfax; Mark Nolen Werner, 22, of Sausalito, and Debbie Webb, 20, of Kentfield.

The jury began its deliberations at noon and was called back to the courtroom at 5:45 p.m.

Because of security regulations at the Hall of Justice, Marin juries which have not reached a verdict usually are sent home at 6 p.m. and allowed to return to the Hall of Justice to continue deliberation in the morning, or in the case of a Friday jury, on Monday morning.

When the jury returned to court yesterday evening, Mrs. Wilson reported that it was split, 8-4, but did not indicate whether the majority favored acquittal or conviction.

When asked by Judge Baty for a show of hands as to which jurors thought further deliberation would be fruitful, no juror raised his hand.

The 10 defendants in the case had acted as their own attorneys through the seven-day trial. They argued — as had the defenses in the two previous sit-in trials — that their opposition to the Vietnam War and the Selective Service system justified their protest.

Four of 37 persons arrested at the sit-in were juveniles and were booked at Marin Juvenile Hall, the trial of a final group of nine who were charged with the two misdemeanors is set to begin Thursday. Five others arrested have pleaded guilty to failing to disperse and are to be sentenced Sept. 10.

New Vote On Alliance Is Sought

The Sonoma County Mayors and Councilmens Association has called for a new vote on whether the county should withdraw from the Association of Bay Area Governments in favor of a new alliance of northern counties.

Association president Thomas Miller, a Sebastopol councilman, wrote Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, this week stating the group's opposition to the bill he has authored which would set up the north coast planning and development commission. Under the bill, Sonoma would withdraw from ABAG and join Mendocino, Humboldt, Lake and Del Norte counties in the new alliance.

"We believe that persons residing in the cities of Sonoma county will not be fairly represented . . . " Miller said, because they would have only one vote on the governing board regardless of population.

"We feel further that the cities of Sonoma County are being discriminated against in terms of the costs of the new organization," he said. Because of higher assessed valuations in Sonoma County, the cities would pay nearly half the costs of organization operations. He said the association also feared the proposed organization would be an erosion of home rule and local control.

"We believe any regional organization authorized by the state Legislature should be put to a vote of the people in the effected area before it is imposed," Miller said.

In April, Sonoma voters elected to withdraw from ABAG membership. City officials have said that residents had no knowledge of what the new organization would entail and may have changed their minds.

Woman Hurt In Two-Car Crash

A Belvedere woman suffered minor injuries Wednesday in a two-car accident on Fifth Street, San Rafael, police reported yesterday.

Harriet Burns Sherwin, 41, of 30 Windward Road, was to be treated by her own doctor for neck and back pains she suffered when her car and a second car driven by Maurice Patrick Angland, 51, of 10 Millay Place, Mill Valley, collided, police said.

According to police, Mrs. Sherwin was making a left turn onto E Street when the two vehicles collided.

Lovelorn Army Guard Turns Gun On Four, Then Kills

TIJUANA, Mexico (UPI)—A lovelorn Army guard killed four fellow soldiers and wounded two others with an automatic rifle Friday before he was shot to death at a federal garrison, Mexican authorities reported.

Col. Alfonso V. Ballesteros Pelayo, commanding officer of the fifth infantry batallion, said the soldier opened fire on his companions for no apparent reason.

But, he added, Pvt. Ezequiel Ocegura Gomez, 21, was the victim of a "love deception" by his girl griend, who had apparently left him for another man.

The shooting took place at a motor pool in this border city where Gomez was on guard duty. Tijuana is located on the U.S.-Mexica border about 15 miles south of San Diego, Calif.

The dead were Cpl. Juan Contreras Leija, Cpl. Jose de Jesus Madrigal, Pvt. Manuel Avila Lopez and Pvt. Marcos Luvano.

Two of the victims were dead at the scene while two others died at hospitals. Gomez also was pronounced dead at the garrison.

Officer of the guard Javier Herrera fired the death shot at Gomez.

The two wounded soldiers were identified only as Cpl. Sanchez and Pvt. Cuevas Gradilla. Both were listed in satisfactory condition at the hospital. Gomez got his weapon from a gun locker, Pelayo said in a press statement.

Witnesses said several other soldiers grabbed rifles and shot at Gomez in an effort to halt his shooting spree.

In explaining a delay of several hours in releasing information on the shooting, the commanding officer said:

"Our primary objective was to save the lives of the wounded. We were at their bedsides at all tines seeing to it they received the best care available. Therefore, we were not able to communicate with the news media as soon as might have been desired."

Pair Hurt In Crash On Freeway

Two members of a Novato family have been treated at Marin General hospital for injuries suffered in a three-car mishap on northbound Highway 101, north of Lucky Drive in Greenbrae.

Georgie A. Wallace, 48, of 87 Santa Maria Drive, suffered a cut lip, and scrapes and bruises. John Wallace, 57, was treated for a bruised chest.

The California Highway Patrol said yesterday that the accident occurred at 10:40 p.m. Thursday when a car driven by Arlene J Millard, 30, of 194 Knollwood Drive, San Rafael, swerved to avoid another car and struck the center divider.

Officers said the Millard car was struck by the Wallace vehicle and then by another car driven by Harold D. Millard Jr., 32, also of 194 Knollwood Drive, San Rafael.

Innocent Pleas In Grass Case

Kurt Edward Benedict, 23, and Beverly Ann Benedict, 22, both of Redwood City, have pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to misdemeanor charges stemming from their arrest July 3.

A pretrail conference was set for Aug. 18.

The pair was arrested on suspicion of possessing dangerous drugs and marijuana by a California Highway Patrol officer who had stopped them for motorcycle equipment violations on Highway 101.

Mrs. Benedict was charged only with a misdemeanor count of possessing pot, and Benedict was charged with a misdemeanor count of possessing marijuana paraphernalia.

Interesting Study: Moons Of Jupiter

By SHERMAN WALKER

The 12 moons of Jupiter that have so far been discovered are an interesting study in their own right.

The moons are numbered not according to their distance from the planet, but according to their order of discovery. The four larger moons were discovered by Galileo with his homemade telescope. For a while these four were the only ones known. Later, seven very small ones were found outside the orbits of the four large ones and finally a very small one inside their orbits.

The four outer moons are going in retrograde direction opposite the others. There is a possibility that they may be former asteroids, captured by Jupiter's strong gravity.

The first two large satellites, I and II, are about the size of earth's moon; the other large ones are considerably larger, even larger than planet Mercury.

The first four satellites (the big four) were originally given the poetic names of Io, Europa, Ganymede and Callisto but these have been found cumbersome and also hard to remember. The numbered sequence is now almost universally used.

The large moons of Jupiter have figured in other investigations that are far afield from earlier investigations. Before accurate chronometers were made it was a problem for sailors to obtain their correct longitude at sea. It was suggested that the motions of these moons, since they could be predicted, could be used for computing longitudes. These were also used to obtain the speed of light.

Residency Policy Will Be Discussed

A Marin County Economic Opportunity Council subcommittee has urged San Rafael residents concerned about residency requirements to attend the San Rafael City Council meeting Monday at 8 p.m.

Adelaide P. Wilson, chairman of the council's newly formed health, food, housing and transportation committee, said the committee agreed to contact people who have called EOC about residency requirements to qualify for Marin County leased housing in San Rafael. Mrs. Wilson said the San Rafael City Council will discuss these requirements at its meeting.

Mrs. Wilson said EOC has recently formed the six-man committee she chairs to combine several smaller committees into one. She said a larger committee makes it easier to comply with federal law to have equal representation from members appointed by a public body, nonprofit private group members and poor people before a committee can take any action.

West Marin Fill Plea To Be Studied Thursday

Henry H. Wilkins, who owns 11.5 acres of tidelands on the west shore of Bolinas Lagoon, wants to put five feet of fill — about 45,000 cubic yards — on his property across the road from Bolinas School.

His request will come before the Marin County Fill Committee at 3 p.m. Thursday in Room 308 of the Civic Center.

Irving L. Schwartz, executive officer for the fill committee, said Wilkins gave no reason other than that he wants to use it for some recreational purpose.

The fill committee will get two other requests.

Businessmen Eye Revision Of Square

The Village Square Association of Corte Madera has started a spruce-up of the area aimed at reviving the early 20th-century charm of the businesses there.

"The character of the buildings is there but it's been 'painted out' during the years," President Robert D. Satterthwaite said.

The businesmen have obtained a plan and color guide from the San Francisco architectural firm of Cope-Peterson, Satterthwaite said.

In addition to the refurbishing of the stores and businesses on the square, which Satterthwaite compared to a project in Mill Valley a few years ago, the association members plan a "community project day" next month.

At that time they will paint and repair bus stops and other public areas.

Innocent Plea To Grand Theft

Barbara Ann Fisher, 31, of no known address, pleaded innocent Thursday in Marin Municipal Court to felony charges of grand theft and embezzlement.

Preliminary hearing was set for Aug. 10.

She is a former seasonal employee in the State Department of Parks and Recreation and was arrested Monday. The parks department declined to divulge details of the arrest or charges.

Cartoonist Said To Be Seeking Site For Center

Novato Chamber of Commerce directors have announced they will try to get Schulz to put the proposed center in the Deer Island area, northeast of highway 101 and 37.

Robert Anderson, chairman of the Economic Development Committee, reported that Schulz and television producer Lee Mendelson, who has produced Snoopy TV shows, are seeking an 800-acre site in California for a center that would open in 1975.

The chamber on Thursday also endorsed the campaign by the Novato Boy's Club for $100,000 to construct a clubhouse in Novato and adopted a budget of $24,818 for 1970-71, up $2,245 from expenditures last year.

Starvation Rate Of Babies In Hospital

HOUSTON, Tex. (UPI)—An average of one baby a month each year dies of starvation in Houston hospitals and uncounted others die of malnutrition at home, a Baylor College of Medicine physician estimates.

Dr. Buford Nichols, also chief of gastroenterology at the Junior League Clinic of Texas Children's Hospital, said by the time most starving infants reach the hospital they are literally skin and bones because their mothers do not understand what is happening to them.

Patriots May Lose Kapp On Contract Technicality

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

When the New England Patriots go looking for help in the next college draft, perhaps they'd be wise to select a lawyer.

Just a few days after they lost lineman Phil Olsen because of a loophole in his contract, the Patriots were informed Friday by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle that quarterback Joe Kapp had not signed a regulation contract and was ineligible to practice with the squad.

Although Rozelle emphasized that Kapp was not a free agent, the 6-foot-2, 215-pound quarterback said after returning to his home in Milton, Mass., that he wanted to make some telephone calls. Team President Billy Sullivan, asked if it was possible that Kapp had played his last game for the Patriots, replied, "It is."

Earlier, a spokesman for the New England team said that Kapp "is fully satisfied with the money and he's fully satisfied with the contract. He's just refusing to sign it and he's acting on the advice of his attorney."

Olsen, who never played with the Patriots because of an injured right knee, was declared a free agent by Rozelle because of the faulty paperwork involved and earlier this week the former All-America lineman at Utah State signed with the Los Angeles Rams, joining his brother Merlin.

In the case of Kapp, who came to the Patriots last year after playing out his option at Minnesota, a spokesman for Rozelle's office in New York said it was "normal" for teams to submit a temporary agreement to the commissioner. However, this must be followed by a standard player contract.

"We asked the Patriots to have him sign the standard contract and when he declined, the Commissioner ruled that he would not be permitted to practice until it was signed," the spokesman said.

Another big name in the NFL figured in the early season news Friday when the Chicago Bears announced that nine-year veteran Ronnie Bull has been placed on waivers. Bull, a running back who was the league's Rookie of the Year in 1962, ranks fifth among the Bears in all-time rushing with 2,871 yards in 787 carries.

Linebacker Chuck Howley, a 13-year veteran with the Cowboys, failed to report to the Dallas camp at Thousand Oaks, Calif., and there was speculation he would retire from football. Running back Duane Thomas, embroiled in a salary dispute, also failed to report.

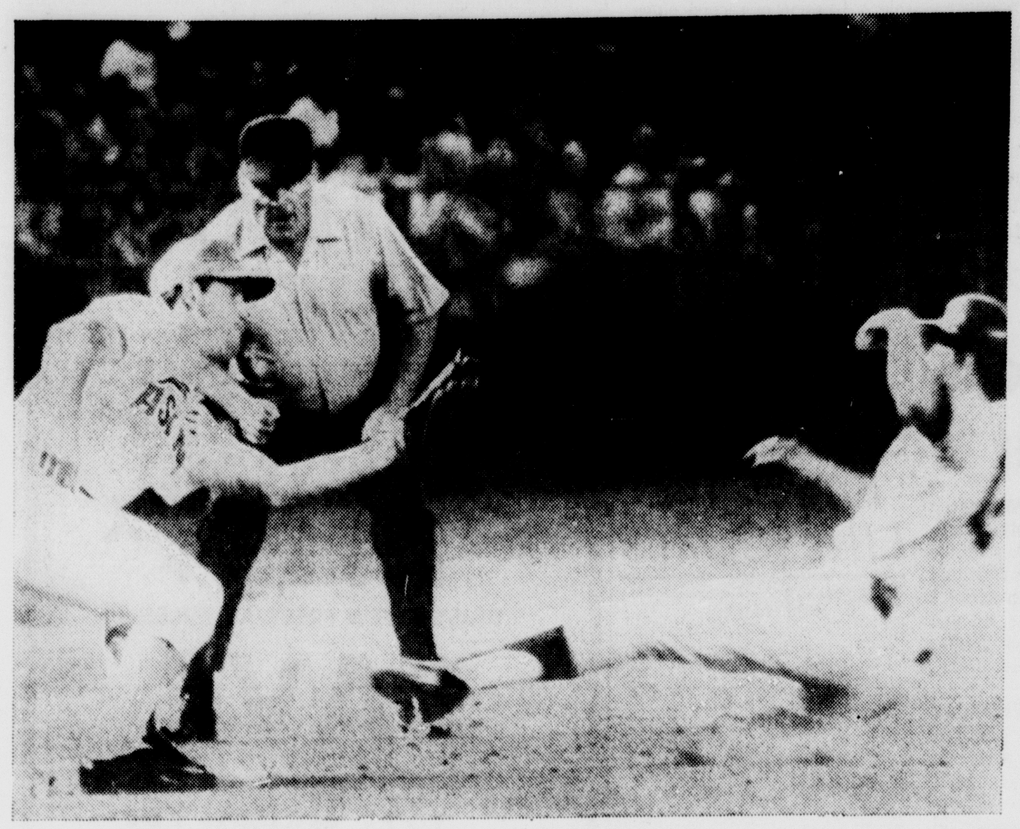
"I talked to Chuck yesterday," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He was still up in the air as to whether he was going to play or retire."

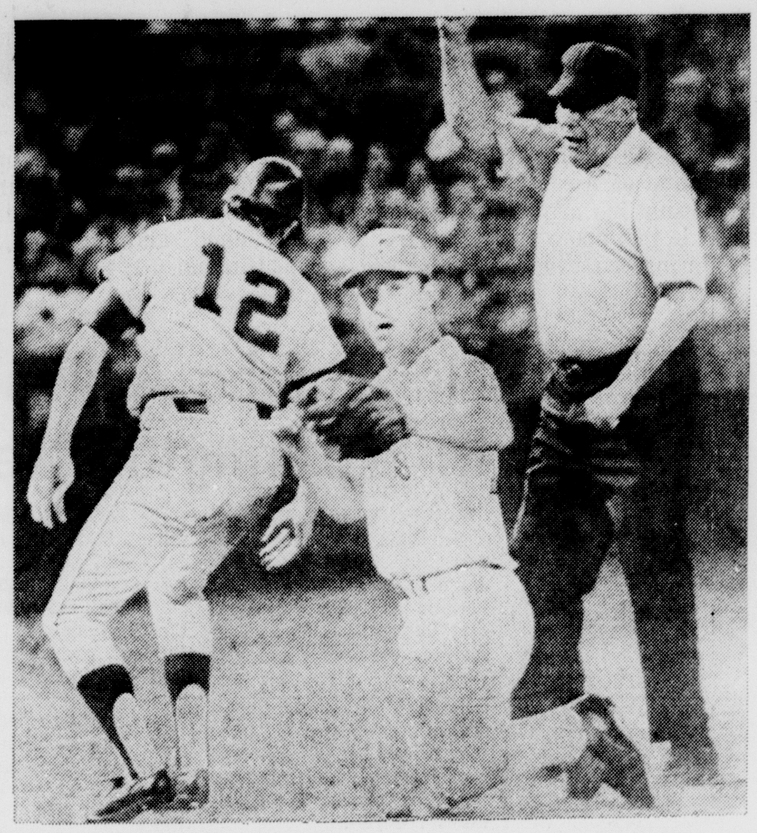
In other news from the training camps:

—All-Pro defensive end Bubba Smith reported to the Baltimore Colts camp in Westminster, Md., after losing an argument over whether he could renegotiate his contract.

—The Cleveland Browns released three rookie players — quarterback Mike Cilek of Iowa, cornerback Willie Green of Western Kentucky and free agent Joe William of Maryland State.

—Bart Starr limbered up his arm on the sidelines while three other Green Bay quarterbacks —Zeke Bratkowski, Rick Norton and Frank Patrick — threw pass patterns to rookies.





A RARE AND BEAUTIFUL PLAY

Houston Astros third baseman Doug Radar waited, ball in glove, as Ken Boswell of the New York Mets slid into him in the third inning last night in the Astrodome. As umpire Al Barlick called Boswell out, Radar's face expressed disbelief. He had just completed a triple play. Shortstop Roger Metzger began the plan by snaring a line drive on one bounce near second base. He stepped on the bag to force Tommy Agee, and threw to first to get Cleon Jones. First baseman Denis Menke then fired to Radar, who nailed Boswell. (UPI Telephoto)

Vida's 18th: One-Hitter

OAKLAND (UPI) —Fairly soon, lefthanded pitcher Vida Blue will be able to spend the two dimes that have been bobbing in his trousers all season.

The phenomenal lefthanded pitcher for the Oakland Athletics allowed only one hit—a leadoff single by Tony Taylor in the fourth inning—to shut out Detroit 4-0 before 24,434 appreciative fans in the Coliseum Friday night.

That gave the 21-year-old hurler from Mansfield, La., his 18th win of the season, tops in the big leagues. It also was his first one-hitter this year. It also extended his string of scoreless innings to 26, including 11 against California in a game the A's eventually won in the 20th last Friday.

Before the season started, Blue put two dimes in the pocket of his baseball trousers as a constant reminder he wanted to win 20 games.

"I was just coasting ... trying to keep in the groove and maintain my rhythm," added Blue, who has lost three games. "It wasn't my best game but it was all right.

"But really, I don't care if I give up on hit, no hits, five hits or 10 hits. Winning the ballgame, that's all that counts."

Blue then put on his Joe Namath sweatshirt and went out to a party with rookie leftfielder George Hendrick, who is three months younger than Blue and provided the big bat for Oakland Friday night.

Hendrick drilled a double with the bases loaded off starter and loser Les Cain of Richmond, now 5-4, to highlight a four-run first inning for the A's. That gave Hendrick six hits in his last 11 at-bats and boosted his batting average to .364.

"Hendrick will be with us the rest of the year," said A's manager Dick Williams. "He's going to be a good one. He's solid and he certainly produced tonight."

Another Save For Johnson

CINCINNATI (UPI) —Jerry Johnson made sure lightning didn't strike twice in the same place.

The San Francisco Giants' ace reliever came on for the fading Gaylord Perry Friday night to quench a ninth-inning Cincinnati threat and save a 4-3 win for the Giants.

On Thursday, Johnson wasn't as fortunate as he threw a home run ball to Tony Perez with two-out in the bottom of the ninth to give the Reds a 2-1 win.

Perry was sailing along with a 4-1 lead Friday night when he walked Lee May, then Perez tripled and Tommy Helms singled to pull the Reds to within one run.

The Giants jumped on Reds' starter Gary Nolan for three runs in the first inning. Chris Speier doubled. Willie Mays singled, Willie McCovey reached base on an intentional walk and Dick Dietz poked a two-run double.

Mays, who may have pulled out of a long slump with his three hits for the night, doubled in the fourth and scored on a two-bagger by Ken Henderson.

The Reds' George Foster, a former Giant, homered in the fourth.

San Francisco will wind up the series with the Reds today and then move on to Atlanta for a doubleheader Sunday.

Nichols, Lotz In Deadlock

CHICAGO (UPI)—Bobby Nichols, who couldn't hold a lead predicted half in jest today that he'll be the winner of the $150,000 Western Open on Sunday.

Nichols headed into the third round today in a deadlock with Dick Lotz for the lead, each four under par with 138. But Nichols could have been alone in front, had he been able to par his last hole.

Lotz was in the clubhouse, after his second straight 69, when Nichols headed down the fairway on the last hole, five under par, and needing only another par for the lead. He knew he could be in front if he parred.

"I wasn't concerned about the scoreboard today," he said. "That's for Sunday. I noticed the board and I knew somebody was four under, but I didn't know who.

"I'll certainly look at the board Sunday," he added. "And I'll see you all Sunday night. This is my second time here, and I like it."

Nichols, who was 13th on the money winning list last year with more than $103,000, said he bogied the last hole because "it was the toughest today. I think these are the narrowest fairways I ever played in my life."

He got a poor drive on the last hole and his second shot went into a trap. His explosion was short and he two putted from 30 feet to fall into the tie with Lotz. Still Nichols had the best round of the day, a 67.

Lotz, 6th in earnings last year with $125,000, said he felt "I lost my timing the last six or seven holes. I did some scrambling but I guess that's the way to win a tournament and it might as well be me."

Lotz and Nichols held only a one stroke lead on Bruce Crampton, the first day leader, and Jerry Heard, both at 139, while Babe Hiskey, Dale Douglass and Phil Rodgers were tied at 140, Tommy Aaron and Bert Greene at 141 and Frank Beard, Larry White and Mac McLendon at 142.

Seventy-three players qualified to play the final two rounds, shooting 148 and under. Among those who just made the cut at 148 were Lee Hrevino, who won the U.S. Canadian, and British Opens in his last four tournaments, defending champion Hugh Royer, and Miller Barber, who finished second the last time the Western Open was held on Olympia Fields' north course, a par 71 6,749 yard layout. Billy Casper also made the cut at 145.

ROOKIES LOSE

49ers Fail On And Off Field

GOLETA, Calif. (UPI) — While the San Francisco 49er rookies were getting their first test of the summer training camp, 49er general manager Jack White was trying to settle the contract dispute with San Francisco's top draft choice.

Both the rookies and White failed.

In a scrimmage Friday against the Dallas Cowboys rookies, the 49er rookies, along with a few veterans and taxi squad personnel, were whipped, 34-7.

White returned from Dayton, Ohio, without former Ohio State star Tim Anderson's signature on a contract.

"It's up to them now," White said after five hours of talks with the defensive back and his agent, Tony Razzano.

Dallas quarterbacks Steve Goepel, a 12th round choice from Colgate, and Frank Holmes, a free agent from Grambling, combined to complete 16 of 20 passes for 334 yards and three touchdowns in the scrimmage.

The only bright spot for the 49ers was second round choice Joe Orduna of Nebraska. Orduna scored San Francisco's only touchdown on an eight-yard pass from quarterback Buster O'Brien

Huge Field For Marin Jr. Tennis

The largest field in its history, more than 325 entries, will compete beginning Monday at four San Rafael locations in the 18th annual Marin Junior Tennis Tournament.

Albert Park, San Rafael High School, Boyd Park and Gerstle Park will be the scenes of action for the tourney, which is being sponsored by the San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department and the Independent-Journal. Singles and doubles events will be played throughout the week, culminating with finals on Saturday.

More than 200 singles entries had been received by the registration deadline Wednesday afternoon, according to the park and rec department. The field will include such season Northern California tournament veterans as Gary Walters of Tiburon, John and Lisa Beritzhoff of Mill Valley and Steve and Diane DeMartini of Greenbrae.

Beritzhoff and DeMartini, both playing in boys 16, should face each other in the best matchup of the tourney. Walters, who led Redwood High School to a perfect season last year, is expected to coast to the boys 18 championship.

On the distaff side, Miss DeMartini is the player to watch as she tries, at age 13, to win the girls 16 singles crown. Last year she beat Miss Beritzhoff for the girls 14 title, and then teamed with her for the doubles championship in that age group. They should have no trouble repeating that victory.

Miss Beritzhoff will remain in girls 14 for singles play, and should be unbeatable.

Other players of consequence in the field include John Baroni of Mill Valley in boys 14, and Mike O'Neill of Mill Valley and Jim Isaacs of San Geronimo in boys 12, highly regarded girls include Meredith Mills of San Rafael and Robin Dix of Kentfield in girls 18, Debbie O'Neill of Mill Valley and Lisa Sockolov of San Rafael in girls 16, and Carmelita De Urioste of Mill Valley in girls 14.

A Sweep Of Honors In TransPac

It's Windward Passage the first to finish the 2,225 mile race, and it's undoubtedly Windward Passage the winner of the overall fleet standings.

The apparent clean sweep of all three categories in the 26th biennial race is the first ever by a Class "A" yacht, and the first by any one boat in 35 years.

Only two of the 54 yachts still at sea have any kind of a chance to win the overall handicap honors.

The 40-foot sloop Argonaut out of Santa Barbara and the 36-foot L'Allegro from the Richmond Yacht Club could conceivably still make it, but the odds are against them.

Argonaut must cross the Diamond Head finish line by 5 a.m. HST today, and the latest estimate of her arrival by Transpac officials here is 8:48 tonight.

L'Allegro has until 1 p.m. to make it, but the best Transpac estimates put her across the finish line at 8 p.m.

Raider Rookies 'Prepared'

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (UPI) — After two days of summer training camp, Oakland Raider coach John Madden already has high praise for the rookies who are battling for spots on his team.

"This group of rookies is the most prepared that we've ever had for the opening of camp," Madden said.

Madden attributed much of the preparation to four rookie camps held during the spring by the Raiders.

"In other years the rookies were ill at ease, uncomfortable in their surroundings," he said, "But this group has four camps under their belt, and I think they're ready."

The veterans report to camp Sunday. Quarterback Daryle Lamonica, however, may not report since he is having contract difficulties.

Leahy's Condition Remains Critical

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)— Former Notre Dame football coach Frank Leahy remained in critical condition under intensive care Friday at St. Vincent Hospital.

Leahy, 62, underwent abdominal surgery Thursday. A hospital spokesman said Leahy's condition was "unchanged" from earlier reports.

BLOWUP OVER FINE

Wynn Threatens Houston Writer

HOUSTON (UPI)—Jim Wynn, the Houston Astros' controversial "toy cannon," and manager Harry Walker cursed each other in the clubhouse Friday night after Walker fined Wynn $100 for swining at a three-balls, no-strikes pitch in the first inning.

Wynn then threatened to beat up Houston sports editor John Wilson, standing nearby, if reports of the shouting match appeared in the newspapers.

The cursing began when Walker called Wynn into his clubhouse office and fined hm for swinging at the pitch with bases loaded, no one out and the score tied 1-1.

Wynn popped out to second base.

New York Mets pitcher Nolan Ryan had walked three men in the inning, and then threw three straight balls to Wynn.

"I called him in to try to talk to him, and he wouldn't listen," Walker said afterward. He said Wynn blew up, started cursing and stalked out of the office.

Walker followed him out, shouting, "I'm not going to take that stuff off you or anyone else."

"Why can't you shut up," Wynn answered, and both men hurled simultaneous obscenities at each other.

Wynn, who makes about $70,000 a year, is in a season-long slump, hitting .221 with only four home runs.

The Astros' won the game 9-4.

Wilson, a veteran sports writer for the Houston Chronicle, was standing in a corner of the clubhouse while Wynn and Walker fussed.

Wynn turned to Wilson, saying, "I better not see anything about this in the paper or I'll beat the — out of you."

"It will be in the paper," Wilson said.

"Then I'll beat the ——out of you if you ever come back in this clubhouse," Wynn said.

"I'll be back," Wilson said.

Wynn's teammate and personal friend, Joe Morgan, gave Wynn's account of what happened in Walker's office.

"He said Walker called him in and told him he was fining him $100," Morgan said. "He then said Walker told him "I don't want to hear a wod out of you." Harry can blow up awfully quick, and he started cursing and ranting.

"That's when Wynn blew up. That's the way Jim says it happened," Morgan said.

Ali Goes 20 Rounds In Workout

HOUSTON (UPI) — Former peavyweight champ Muhammid Ali put in what he figured was his hardest working day in five years Friday and said even he himself was surprised at his good condition.

"I'm surprised and happy to see myself in this good of shape," he said after boxing 20 rounds in preparation for his July 26 bout with Jimmy Ellis.

"I thought maybe after 12 rounds I'd quit and say that all that talk about going 20 rounds was for publicity, but I felt so good after 12 that I wanted to go on."

Ali went five rounds on a heavy bag and speed bag and then boxed five rounds each with two spar mates.

"I worked enough to take tomorrow off," Ali said. "I'm in better shape now than I was for (Joe) Frazier. See my belly. It's disappearing.

Ellis, meanwhile, worked eight rounds Friday.

"I was in shape when I came here," Ellis said. "I'm not trying to get in shape. I've got it together now. Maybe he (Ali) is still trying to get it together."

Trans-Miss Defender Wins Again

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Allen Miller says it would "really be a thrill" to win the Trans-Mississippi Golf Championship three years in a row.

And the 22-year-old University of Georgia star seems to have a good shot at that third straight title as he goes into the semifinals today of the 65th annual event.

"I think my chances look a lot better for winning a third straight now than they did at the beginning of the week," Miller said Friday after he had won a third round and quarterfinal match.

Miller, the first two-time winner since Jack Nicklaus in 1958-59, took a narrow 1-up victory over Greg Trompas, San Diego, in third round action. He came back in the afternoon to defeat Bob Karlovich of Tulsa, Okla., 3 and 1, Friday afternoon.

Miller will play Artie McNickle of Sacramento, Calif., today in a semifinal match on the 6,795-yard par 72 Spyglass Hill course. In the other semifinal match, Barry Jaeckel of Los Angeles, who upset co-favorite Tom Kite, Jr., of Austin, Tex., Friday, meets Alan Tapie, Downey, Calif.

Jaeckel, the 22-year-old golfer who caddies for Dean Martin as a sideline, threw 1-under par golf at Kite — including birdies on the 16th and 17th holes — for a 2-1 win in the third round.

Bad Pitching Means More Double Plays

Cincinnati — Chris Speier and Tito Fuentes have been turning over double plays at an admirable clip this season. All Giant fans are aware of that although the precise team total of DPs at All-Star time might have escaped their attention.

It was 93 in 90 games. Fuentes at second base participated in 60 of them. Speier, the rookie shortstop, had a hand in 58.

However, neither Fuentes nor Speier is looking forward to setting any DP records this season. Now, that may seem incompatible with the natural ambitions of a couple of classy glove men. But it makes good sense.

DOUBLE PLAYS are unnecessary if pitchers are keeping traffic off the base paths. In other words, DPs are directly related to the traffic permitted by pitchers. For instance, last season the Montreal Expos wound up with a total of 193 DPs. Expo pitchers permitted an inordinate amount of traffic last year.

Thus, in not looking forward to any team DP records this year, Fuentes and Speier are hoping that pitching of the Giants improves during the second half of the season. The team pitching was beautiful at the outset of the 1971 campaign but between Memorial Day and July Fourth it left much to be desired, particularly that of Juan Marichal and Gaylord Perry.

Neither Fuentes nor Speier would be so crass as to relate ineffective team pitching to double plays. Both are diplomats, especially Fuentes who has a charming way about him and an easy way with words.

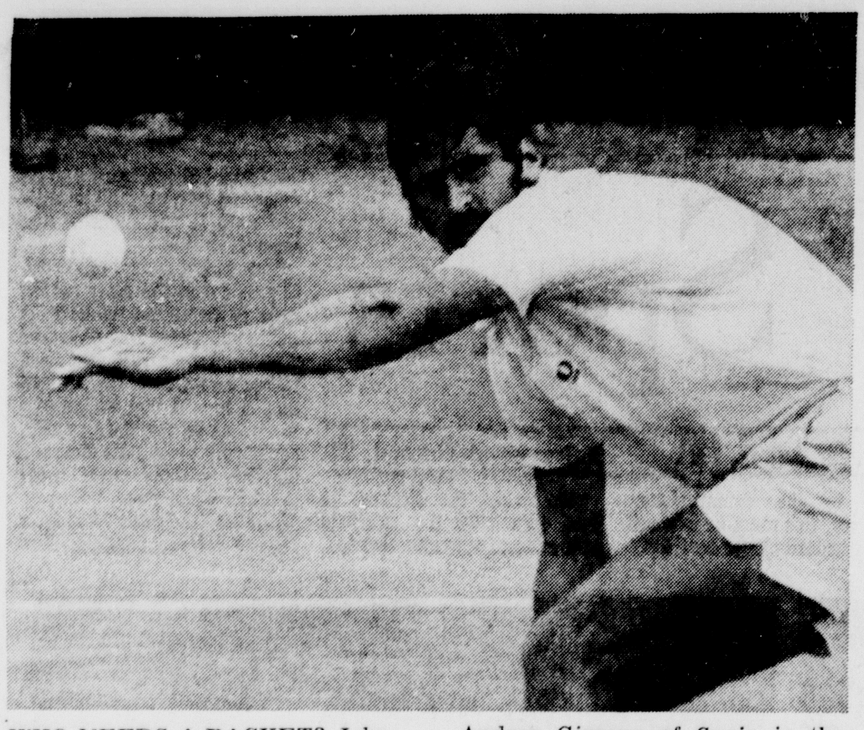
"I LIKE to be everybody's friend," said Tito. "Sure, I know all pitchers like DPs in sticky situations. The fellows that turn over the double plays for pitchers are their best friends. See what I mean? I like to be everybody's friend. I don't like to see my pitching teammates in trouble. But if they are in trouble I hope I can help them with a DP.

"Records? DP records? They mean nothing if you don't win a pennant. That's the kind of record I want — a pennant record."

Overlooked in Cincinnati's runaway with the 1970 National League pennant was the DP defense of the Reds. Johnny Bench, Tony Perez, Pete Rose, Lee May and Bobby Tolan grabbed the headlines with their big bats. They powered the Reds to the 1970 pennant. No matter how many runs Red pitchers gave up, Bench & Co. would get more.

Yet, the Red defense was a most important element in the Red runaway. The Reds turned over 173 double plays. Tommy Helms led all second basemen in the National League. He participated in 107 of Cincinnati's DPs. Woody Woodward and Dave Concepcion at shortstop had a hand in 137, Woodward 86, Concepcion 51.

So, even if the Giant pitching staff does have trouble in the 72 games during the second half of the 1971 baseball campaign, there still is the DP combo of Speier and Fuentes to keep things in perspective.



WHO NEEDS A RACKET? John Newcombe of Australia appears to be using his arm as a tennis racket in this photo taken yesterday during a match against Andres Gimeno of Spain in the Washington Star tournament. Newcombe's racket was in his other hand, and he used to to beat Gimeno, 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Red Hot Cubs Only Team With A Shot At The Bucs

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Chicago Cubs have emerged as the main challenger to the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League Eastern Division race, but they may not get close enough to force a showdown.

The Cubs, who finished second to the Pirates last season, scored their 14th triumph in their last 20 games Friday by downing the Philadelphia Phillies 11-2, and have moved into sole possession of second place in the NL East.

However, the Cubs still trail the Pirates by 10 games as Pittsburgh ran its winning streak to eight games Friday night by edging the San Diego Padres, 2-1, on Bob Robertson's home run in the eighth inning.

The New York Mets, who were expected to battle the Pirates for the division title, continued their downhill slide by losing to the Houston Astros 9-4 for their 12th setback in their last 14 games. The Mets trail the Pirates by 11 games.

In other NL action, San Francisco edged Cincinnati 4-3 to move six games ahead in the Western Division, Atlanta topped Los Angeles 3-1 and St. Louis blanked Montreal 6-0.

Ferguson Jenkins coasted to his 14th victory of the year on a seven-hitter and also hit a homer as the Cubs tagged four pitchers for 16 hits. Glenn Beckert led the Chicago assault with four singles and Ron Santo chipped in with a two-run homer. Willie Montanez hit his 18th homer for the Phillies.

Robertson's home run was a titanic smash off the concrete facade in front of the top left field deck at Three Rivers Stadium and broke up a pitcher's duel between the Pirates' Bob Johnson and the Padres' Steve Arlin. Johnson allowed only six hits in going the distance to even his record at 6-6. Nate Colbert accounted for San Diego's run with his 20th homer of the year.

The Astros collected 14 hits and also pulled off the first triple play in their history in defeating the Mets. Bob Watson and Roger Metzger each had three hits for the Astros.

Ralph Garr of the Braves was thrown out of his first big league game but it came too late to help the Dodgers.

Newcombe Advances In Washington Net

WASHINGTON (upi) —Top-seeded John Newcombe eased past Chile's Andre Gimeno Friday to gain a semi-final singles berth in the $50,000 Washington Star International tennis tournament.

Newcombe, of Australia, this year's men's champion at Wimbledon, was pushed to three sets before by Gimeno, who won a stormy match Thursday from Cliff Richey. The scores were 6-1, 4-6, 6-4.

Newcombe meets Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill., in one semi-final match Saturday. Riessen beat Ismail El Shafei of Egypt, 6-1, 6-7, 6-2, to gain a semi-final spot.

The other semi-final match will pit Stan Smith of Pasadena, Calif., against Australia's Ken Rosewall. In quarter-final play, Smith beat South Africa's Cliff Drysdale, 0-6, 7-6, 6-1 and Rosewall breezed past Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield, Calif., 61, 6-4.

In quarter finals doubles play, John Alexander and Phil Dent beat Pierre Barthes and Rod Laver, 6-3, 6-4; Bob Carmichael and Ray Ruffles defeated Bill Bowery and Owen Davidson, 6-3, 6-1; Newcombe and Ray Moore squeezed past Gimeno and Roger Taylor, 1-6, 7-5, 7-6, and Riessen and Tom Okker beat Bob Lutz and Charles Pasarell, 6-2, 6-4.

PETTY FAVORED

Qualifying Today For Trenton 300

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI)—Buddy Baker, having the most successful year of his career, attempts to take the pole today in a borrowed Dodge during qualifying for Sunday's Trenton 300, last of NASCAR's threerace Northern series.

However, since joining the Petty team this year, he has had little except success. Competing only on the super tracks, he has earned about $80,000 and won the Rebel 400 at Darlington. In eight races, he finished no worse than sixth and was runnerup in the Daytona 400 and Ontario 500.

Other drivers who will try to qualify today include Richard Petty, seeking his third victory on the Northern tour in his Plymouth; Bobby Allison, who was the hottest driver on the NASCAR circuit recently with four conescutive major speedway victories in his Holman-Moody Ford; Pete Hamilton in a Cotton Owens Dodge and James Hylton in a Ford.

Since the Dodge and Plymouth drivers turned to the wedge engine to thwart Ford's horsepower advantage, Baker says, "The racing is the most even it's been in three or four years."

For the Trenton race, Baker will be driving a Dodge borrowed from Neil Castles because his own car is being prepared for the Atlanta 500.

Known as a charger in the past, Baker credits the Petty team with changing his philosophy somewhat.

"I learned that the driver who leads the first half of the race usually isn't the winner," he explains. "I pick up now on what other drivers do who are leading. If they have to pit for tires, I watch to find out why and learn by what they're doing.

"The Pettys are the most professional team in racing," he adds. "They win because they've been doing it longer than anybody else. When another team might tighten a nut, they'll double nut. That's the difference."

Petty won the first two races of the Northern tour at Malta, N.Y., and Islip, N.Y., to gain his 11th and 12th victories of the season and run his earnings to $159,050 this year.

Two Tied For Lead In Publinks Golf

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)—Bob Blomberg was playing so well it scared him. Fred Haney didn't feel he was playing well at all. But the two ended up tied for the lead entering today's final round of the United States Golf Association National Public Links Tournament.

Blomberg, a "young 26," from Alameda, Calif., carded a one-under par 71 over the Papago golf course in Friday's third round for a 54-hole total of 220. Haney, 22, a University of Oregon graduate from Forest Grove, Ore., had a 75 to deadlock the lead at four-over par.

One stroke back were Lee Carter of Dallas, Tex., Archie Dadian of South Milwauke Wis., and Gary Balliet of Rochester, Mich. At 222 were Gary Navario of Wichita, Kan., Rodney Velasquez of Hayward, Calif., and Tom Olson of Phoenix.

Blomberg, the most talkative and colorful player on the course with his large straw hat, cigar in his mouth and wet towel flung across his back, said after his 71, "I'm just having a ball. My roommates and I filled out scorecards predicting our rounds before teeing off. I put down a 72. Maybe that helped."

He added, "My putting was so good it scared me. I shanked a wedge on the 12th, hit up from behind the trap and sank a 10-foot putt for my par—that's the kind of day it was."

Haney, aiming for a chance on the professional golfers association tour late this summer, was surprised to be tied for the lead. "I just don't think I've played that well. I had a lot of three putts. The wind was a little stronger, and the pin placements were especially tough."

The tall, slender Haney said he was anxious to see the pin positions for the final round. "They can make this course as hard as they want by the placements," he said. "If they're any more difficult than today (Friday), 74 might be a good score."

Blomberg and Fred Cook of Cypress, Calif., were the only players to break par Friday at 71, and Eddie Post of Fort Smith, Ark., was the only one to match it.

Balliet, the second round leader, and Dadian, who had been tied with Haney for second at the end of 18 holes, fell victims to inconsistency as they finished in the last twosome. Balliet came in in par to finish at 77 after going out in five-over 41. Dadian, who made the turn at 40, toured the back nine at even-par 36 for a 76.

Should today's round end with a tie, an 18-hole playoff will be held unday, to be followed by sudden death if necessary.

PANAFRICA - U.S. TRACK

Confusion Costs A Victory

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI)—Mirus Ifter knows only one language —Amharic—and it didn't help him much Friday in the 5,000 meter race at the Panafrica-United States International Track meet.

Ifter, assigned to the Ethopian Army contingent that guards Emperor Haile Selassie, was hoping that his coach would be able to shout insructions to him during the race. But Ifter didn't see his coach.

He misunderstood the signal for the beginning of the final lap, a gun shot, and that, combined with the roar of the crowd of 18,000, led him to believe he had defeated American record holder Steve Prefontaine in the 3.11-mile race.

When Ifter heard the gun, instead of the bell he is accustomed to in Ethiopia, he slowed down, stopped and then laid down on the infield grass.

Prefontaine, who was trailing Ifter by some 25-yards when the Ethiopian dropped out, went on to win in 13:57.6.

Meet officials conferred after the race and decided to give Ifter a watch in recognition for "a remarkable performance."

Following the race, Prefontaine said he thought Ifter's misfortune was "disheartening," and that he had anticipated a great duel with the Ethiopian in the final lap.

Only one African was able to place first Friday in a men's event as the American team built up a 54-30 point lead.

Robert Ouko of Kenya, who hopes to attend nearby North Carolina Central University, upset Juris Luzines of the U.S. Marines and American record holder Ken Swenson of the Army with a 1:46.7 time in the 800 meter run.

Stewart Favored At Silverstone

SILVERSTONE, England (UPI)—Scotsman Jackie Stewart, a winner at Silverstone in his last appearance here, hoped to move closer to his second world drivers' championship today in the $96,000 British Grand Prix.

However, the 32-year-old driver had to share the favorite's role with Switzerland's Clay Regazzoni, who won the pole position Friday while shattering Stewart's official lap record of one minute, 19.1 seconds with a clocking of 1:18.1. This averaged out to 134.92 miles per hour over the 2.92-mile airfield circuit.

Regazzoni, driving a 12cylinder Ferrari 312B2, achieved his record time in the first practice session of the day and although Stewart, in an eight-cylinder Tyrell-Ford, matched the low time in his final trial, the Swiss driver retained the pole position for registering it first.

The American wome, faring almost as well as the men, held a 49-32 lead over a team of female athletes from around the world.

In Friday's competition Rod Millburn of Southern University, who shaved two-tenths of a second off track's longest standing record last month with a 13.0 clocking in the 120-yard high hurdles ran a 13.39 in the equivalent 110 meter hurdles to beat Ron Draper of North Carolina Central.

John Smith, former UCLA student and holder of the pending world mark of 44.5 in the 440-yard dash, outsprinted Darwin Bond from the University of Tennessee in the 400 meters.

In field events, Oregon's Bouncy Moore took the long jump with a leap of 26-feet, one-quarter inch and shotputter Karl Salb won with a toss of 14-feet, 10 and 3-4 inches.

Heading today's action on Duke University's rubberized asphalt track was a match among Kipchoge Kieno of Kenya and Americans John Baker and Jim Crawford in the 1,500 meter event.

Kieno, who has turned in the year's fastest mile, garnered a gold medal in the 1968 Olympics by beating Jim Ryan.

Sid Sink, holder of the pending American record of 8:26.4 in the 3,000 meter steeple chase, was to battle Oregon's Mike Manly and Kenya's Ben Jipcho and Amos Biwott in the 1.87 mile race over hurdles and a water jump.

King Upsets Court

HOYLAKE, England (UPI)—Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., upset Margaret Court of Australia 6-2, 7-5 Friday to advance to the womens singles final of the Rothman's North of England tennis championships. Mrs. King will be opposed by Rosemary Casals of San Francisco in the finals. Miss Casals beat Patti Hogan of La Jolla, Calif., 3-6, 6-1, 6-4 in the other semi-final.

Lassle's 888 Tops Keg Week

Jim Lassle rolled an 888 four-game series and Dick Treadway a 656 three-gamer to feature the week of league bowling in Marin County.

Lassle fired his series at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael and Treadway shot his score at Greenbrae Lanes. Penny Tauscher rolled a 620 and Lu Sharp a 619, both at Greenbrae, to highlight women's scores.

In the Warriors match game eliminations going on at Castle Lanes in San Francisco, Ed Henry of San Rafael is in fifth place at the cutoff mark. The top 57 begin two more weeks of play before the cut to the top 16. Henry is averaging 206 after 28 games.

In the women's Warriors section, Marilyn Epidendio and Penny Tauscher, both of San Rafael, survived the cut to 28 women, Marilyn ninth with a 184 average and Penny 20 at 177.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, July 17, the 198th day of 1971.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Venus, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury and Jupiter. Those born on this day are under the sign of Cancer.

British clergyman Isaac Watts was born July 17, 1674.

On this day in history:

In 1948 southern Democrats from 13 states organized a states' rights party to oppose the Truman-Barkley ticket. The states' right party presidential ticket was headed by Strom Thurmond.

In 1955 Arco, Idaho, a town of some 1,300 people, became the first community in the world to receive all light and power from atomic energy.

In 1968 a National Airlines jetliner with 64 aboard was skyjacked to Cuba.

A thought for today: Marcus Tullius Cicero said, "If you aspire to the highest place, it is no disgrace to stop at the second or even the third."

Budget Planning Aid In Apparel Shopping

NEW YORK (UPI) —Family budget planning, careful shopping and buying at sales enable the family to be outfitted well without the creation of a financial disaster, say home economists.

The clothing bill is affected by the time of year the shopping is done. If a family member want a new outfit, it might be best to wait until a good price is announced before buying it.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Millions Of Players Could Use Reminders Of Game Principles

Bridge is played on many levels, and the play that is routine to one person may be brilliant to another. I would apologize for the simplicity of today's hand but for one fact: the actual declarer was an expert of some 20 years' experience. If he could make the blunder that cost him a grand slam, there may be millions of other players who could use a reminder of an important principle of play.

LEADS JACK

West led the jack of hearts as a feeble deceptive maneuver. I must confess that I made this witless but harmless lead, hoping my partner could ruff, wanting to make a safe lead in any case, but not wanting to reveal the true heart position.

Declarer, a very experienced player, won in dummy with the king of hearts and planned the play. He could eventually discard a diamond on the ace of hearts, but he would still have to ruff one diamond. That meant that he could not draw trumps.

TAKES DIAMONDS

With this thought in mind South took the top diamonds at once and led a third diamond, planning to ruff it in the dummy. Something funny happened to his hand on the way to dummy's nine of spades. I ruffed the third diamond with the ten of spades, and the grand slam was down.

DANGEROUS GENERALITY

South indulged in a dangerous generality when he decided that he could not afford to draw trumps. He could not afford to draw three rounds of trumps, since then dummy would not have a trump to ruff one diamond. But South could afford to draw two rounds of trumps.

LEAD ACE, KING

After winning the first trick with the king of hearts, declarer should lead out the ace and king of spades. Only then can he afford to tackle the diamonds. When South leads the third diamond, West is out of diamonds but is also out of trumps.

South safely ruffs the diamond in dummy, returns to his hand by ruffing a low heart with the queen of spades and then draws the last trump with the jack of spades. The rest is easy.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid only one spade.

Quebec Installs Nuclear Reactor

TROIS-RIVIERES, Quebec (UPI)—Quebec's first nuclear power station, whose nuclear reactor is the first in the world that can be fueled with natural uranium and cooled by ordinary water, is in operation.

The station, four years under construction, is located on the St. Lawrence River 10 miles east of here. It is expected to reach its full power output of 250,000 kilowatts by the end of 1971.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

THE EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

'Parent Power' Seen By Different Eyes

"WE WISH THE public would take more interest in what we are doing. We wish the public would make its views known on the questions before us."

So runs the litany of local elected office holders, especially school board members.

It is not surprising, then, that Elizabeth M. Deedy's valediction, after 17 years service on Marin school boards, was a plea to the citizenry to take more interest in what goes on in public education.

During her 13 years on the College of Marin board of trustees, she served as chairman more than half the time. Earlier, she served four years on the Mill Valley School District board.

During the combined periods of nearly two decades, she displayed an intense and continuing interest in public education problems and a dedication of time and energy seldom seen.

You might say she was a veritable pillar of the public education establishment.

Her farewell message was presented to the annual meeting of the Marin County Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau, which could probably be described as a bastion of the establishment.

SOCITY'S DROPOUTS would have the world believe that the establishment is quite well satisfied with itself. If such dropouts had listened to Mrs. Deedy they would know that its leaders are profuse in their criticism of the establishment. She had criticism, sometimes direct and sometimes implied, for the legislature, the press, and individual citizens for their shortcomings in dealing with public education.

In sum, the thrust of the comments was to urge greater citizen influence in the solution of problems of public education.

IN THE JULY issue of the Tamalpais High School District Alumni News, a Drake High School alumnus vows not to subject his newborn child to the established educational system.

The Alumni News reprints a lucubration by Michael Rossman, 1956 Drake graduate who subsequently was a participant in the so-called Free Speech Movement at Berkeley.

Upon the birth of his first child, Rossman wrote his rambling, sometimes diffuse, "declaration" of intent to provide for its own education. "Our parents were forced to abandon their children to the part-time uses of the state," wrote Rossman, vowing not to do the same to his own child.

"We ourselves must be directly involved in what and how our children learn," Rossman declared.

(That part sounds like a favorable, affirmative response to Mrs. Deedy's plea that citzens take more interest in their schools.)

ON THE ONE HAND, Rossman indicates that to accomplish his end, "We must grow our own;" i.e. provide personally for his child's education.

On the other hand, he acknowledges that "no couple can cope alone even with their own relation. We learn in a larger community. To free our young, many must come together. . ."

Thus Rossman implies that a "new school" is the solution.

"Learning Power to the People," he concludes.

THE PARALLELS between the comments of the establishment's Mrs. Deedy and the revolution's Mike Rossman are striking.

Mrs. Deedy's suggested course of action inevitably would tailor the schools to the wishes of the people.

To turn one's back on Mrs. Deedy's suggestions for reforming the system would be, in today's idiom, a copout.

The approach suggested by Rossman and his ilk is just that, a copout.

Fellow Raccoon Fans

Bit by bit we learn more about that fascinating creature, the raccoon. Fellow raccoon fans phone or write to us giving us the benefit of their observations, doubts and experiences. There must be thousands of people feeding raccoons in Marin today.

Several weeks ago, we wondered in writing what had happened to "our raccoons." The balance of the response was that this was not unusual. Expert opinion at the Louise Boyd Junior Museum and the Marin County Humane Society told us that such sudden disappearances are not unusual, that the raccoons often take to the hills in late spring and early summer. The dominant theme was that raccoons are individualists. They are subject to distemper, but their natural resistance is such that it seldom reaches epidemic proportions.

So, if we alarmed you about the disappearing raccoons, we're sorry. They are apt to operate on whim and fancy. Signs of their unique charm and high intelligence. Individualism is the raccoon way of life.

Jays, Crows & Squirrels

Few birds are as loudmouthed as the jay family and their cousins, the crows. Well, this year our Marin neighborhood has them all, California jays, Steller's jays and crows. The combination makes for raucous gatherings.

It also seems that we have more than our usual quota of squirrels in our backyard bay tree this season. When we see the branches of the tree shake and hear a loud churring sound, we know if we watch carefully we will catch a glimpse of bright eyes or a bushy gray tail through the foliage.

With all these alleged enemies about, one would think our vicinity would suffer from a shortage of songbirds. But, here too, we are well supplied. This leads us to conjecture about the strange ways of Nature.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to the Golden Gate Bridge District's Sausalito-to-San Francisco ferryboat for an almost incredible performance record for the first half of this year. The Golden Gate made almost 3,500 trips, and only one was cancelled for maintenance.

BOUQUET to Stanley H. Friese, Marin County assistant superintendent of schools, on his appointment as chancellor of the public schools of Alaska.

BRICKBATS to those jurisdictions that are raising tax rates while at the same time receiving windfalls from the old rates because of increase in the assessment ratio.

Supervisors Should Cut From The Top

I was away at the time of the recent budget hearings, and was shocked upon returning to learn that the board of supervisors had voted themselves a generous salary raise of $100, thus making their salary beginning August, 1971, in the amount of $1,100 per month, for part-time work. In addition to this, each board member has office staff to do much of the work. Does your conscience bother you in the fact that the home owners and other small property owners in Marin are being taxed and taxed — out of their homes — so you gentlemen can spend and spend — giving no heed to the fact that we are going through a recession, and the philosophy of public bodies should be to cut expenses, rather than to raise? Or don't you have a conscience? I think not, judging from the attitude "let the public be damned, and if they can't pay through the nose, let them move out of the county." This is exactly what many of our residents are doing.

The board members were receiving $800 per month for part-time work, in 1967 — and this was raised to $1,000 in November 1969 — and now another $100?

My practical suggestion is: Give a 20 per cent cut to all department heads. Then cut everyone else who makes $1,000 or more by 10 per cent. How's that for an idea?

Another gripe: The board seems to have plenty of money for such trivia as the Marin Ballet and EOC. They are breeding a complete tax revolt in this county. Either they will have to assume their responsibilities to make drastic cuts, no matter how it hurts (starting from "the top"), or the taxpayers will see to it that these gentlemen will be replaced by fiscally responsible board members.

Tax Deductible Week End You Have To Talk Business

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service has ruled a summer week end at a country home, or a resort, is tax deductible as entertainment, providing business is discussed during the period in question. The host must be able to prove that he has a logical business relationship with the person entertained, and the week end invitation was not just for pleasure.

While the IRS cited no example as to what would constitute a tax deductible week end, we believe the following would be acceptable:

"WELL, MISS GOODHEART, I guess you're wondering why I brought you out here to the Secret Valley Hotel for the week end."

"The idea did pass through my head, Mr. Rathbone."

"Drink?"

"Thank you. I'll have a teensy weensy double vodka on the rocks."

"Miss Goodheart, I was wondering if you had any ideas on how we could increase our sales on hydraulic turbine fluids."

"I'VE ONLY BEEN with the company two weeks, Mr. Rathbone, and being in the secretarial pool I really haven't had much chance to think about it."

"Would you care for another drink?"

"Just ask the bartender to freshen this one up with a little more vodka."

"Miss Goodheart, has anyone told you you're a very, very beautiful and warm person?"

"Oh, Mr. Rathbone! You do have a way with words."

"I'M GOING TO ASK you something personal now, Miss Goodheart, and you don't have to answer if you don't want to."

"Yes, Mr. Rathbone?"

"If we were going to set up a Midwest sales office for the company should we do it in Akron, Ohio, or Springfield, Ill?"

"Gosh, Mr. Rathbone, they both sound great to me."

"Forgive me if I take notes. Miss Goodheart, has anyone told you that you have lovely skin? Sitting here under the stars with the violins playing in the dining room you remind me of a Greek goddess."

"I'll admit it's better than typing."

"MISS GOODHEART, I knew when I first saw you that you had a head for business. Tell me something. If we merged with Cleary Plastics and spun off our interest in Alpha Containers do you think the Justice Department would give us any trouble?"

"I say do what you want as you only live once. My, Mr. Rathbone, your hands are warm."

"You do something to me, Miss Goodheart. I've never felt this way about a woman before."

"I don't want you to get any ideas, Mr. Rathbone, that just because I came to the Secret Valley Hotel with you for the week end, that I can be trifled with."

"And I respect you for it, Miss Goodheart. I want you to know I brought you out here because I see in you a person who can make a great contribution to the company. You're young and fresh and pink-cheeked and that's what the company needs.

"MR. RATHBONE, you're chewing on my earring."

"Sorry. What I'm trying to find out from you is a way we can cut costs, up production and still compete with the Japanese."

"That's a big question, Mr. Rathbone. Maybe we should sleep on it."

"Miss Goodheart, you have made me and my accountant the happiest men in this world."

MARQUIS CHILDS

Heroin Traffic By Officials Another Blot On Thieu Regime

WASHINGTON — It is no longer a question of whether the Nixon administration should insure the continuity of the shaky regime of Nguyen Van Thieu in Saigon but whether it can keep Thieu in power. With American support Thieu can probably come through the charade of the elections in October.

But the signs of his weakness multiply. He seems unable to make the changes that would give his government at least a face-lifting. Instead he sits tight at the center of a power structure made up of generals and political operators who are his dependents.

A NOTORIOUS example of the henchmen on whom he relies is Maj. Gen. NQGO Dzu, commander of II Corps, one of the four command regions. Rep. Robert H. Steele, R. Conn., testifying before a House foreign affairs subcommittee, identified Dzu as a chief heroin trafficker in Southeast Asea. He said that South Vietnamese officers deal in large quantities of heroin and transport it around South Vietnam in military aircraft and vehicles. Steele claimed that American military authorities gave Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker "hard intelligence" on Dzu's operation.

Two facts give this charge special credence despite Dzu's immediate denial. First, it was Steel who disclosed the high rate of heroin addiction among G.I.s in Vietnam. And, second, as a former agent in the CIA he had access to information that might not have been available to others.

Dzu has been for a long time a dubious figure in the military hierarchy that is both controlled by and controls President Thieu. On a visit to his headquarters in Vietnam two years ago I learned it was no secret that he was held in disregard by members of his staff. Rumors of corruption were rife. Members of his family were said to run a chain of restaurants largely supplied out of American military stores.

Time magazine recently reported a letter sent by 27 South Vietnamese majors and colonels to Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky accusing Dzu of a long list of corrupt practices and falsification of battle reports and casualties. The typical technique, the officers said, is to do badly but to report well. "We wonder whether we are fighting communism or supporting it," they wrote.

The letter may have been merely a shot in the political campaign that threatens to grow more violent as election day draws near. Ky, who accused the Thieu government in a fierce speech of a plague of military corruption, expressed doubt about the letter's authenticity and indicated he would do nothing about it. Dzu put it down to the work of his enemies in the army.

THE TRAFFIC in opium and its heroin derivative has for many years been a way of life in Southeast Asia. Opium is the chief cash crop for thousands of farmers in Laos, Burma, Thailand and Vietnam. With the American escalation and the infusion of vast amounts of dollars, a new market opened up that has been assiduously cultivated. There can be little doubt that from the peasants in the poppy fields to high officials, both military and civilian, in the four countries the enlarged traffic is extremely profitable.

The large and pressing question is what American officialdom in the region can do about this. The least that should be expected is not to resort to a cover-up. Until Congressman Steele came up with his estimate of 20 to 30 per cent of G.I.s hooked on heroin, the army had done little or nothing about this curse.

The military response following the disclosures was to order a urinalysis as the first step for every G.I. about to be shipped out. But, as the G.I.s quickly learned, it was only necessary to stay off the stuff for about three days for the test to turn up negative.

THOSE CUSTOMARY high military sources inspired a news story that addiction was far less than had been feared, perhaps as low as two per cent.

This may be true and, if so, it is remarkable good news. But in the first six months of this year 8,200 men turned themselves in under the Vietnam drug amnesty program. The figure for June was 1,500. Since clearly only a minority of heroin users take this step, it indicates a high addiction rate. To keep even a residue of a demoralized army in South Vietnam is to invite new disasters like the drug curse.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Black African Nations Again Unable To Agree

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Ever since the beginning of the Organization of African Unity in 1963, "unity" has been the element most lacking.

So, its division now on the issue of a dialogue between the black African states and the white supremacy regime of the Republic of South Africa comes as no great surprise.

When the OAU was founded in Addis Ababa, key principles included: respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of each state; noninterference in internal affairs of other states, peaceful settlement of disputes; nonalignment with world power blocs, and emancipation of African territories still not independent.

AN EARLY TROUBLE was the rivalry between the conservative and so-called progressive African states under the leadership of the then president of Ghana, Kwame Nkrumah, and Nkrumah's ambitions to lead a unified, socialist black African state.

Through the years there have been other sources of serious conflict, each of them in one way or another in violation of the organization's founding principles.

There was the question of the former Belgian Congo and the use of white mercenaries to bolster a black regime, as well as the controversial figure of Moishe Tshombe who established himself briefly as the Congo's ruler.

Another source of division was the civil war in Nigeria and the question of recognition of the break-away state of Biafra.

FRICTION ALSO arose on the matter of support for various liberation forces — against the Portuguese in Angola and Mozambique, against the wpite regime of Rhodesia and against South Africa.

To help finance these forces, the OAU set up special funds but only a few of the members paid their dues.

Adding to the frustration was the dawning knowledge that as an organization the OAU had neither the strength nor the will to enforce the harshly phrased resolutions it passed regularly condemning the white African regimes and those it accused of supporting them, including the United States.

And it was this that led the foreign minister of Ghana, alluding both to the organization's financial debts and to its lack of resolve, to declare that rather than OAU it might be called IOU.

AS FOREIGN MINISTERS met to prepare the way for the current summit meeting of the OAU, five walked out in protest against what they considered an attempt by the leadership to bury a proposal that conversations be opened with South Africa.

They were Ivory Coast, Dahomey, Togo, Upper Volta and Gabon. Other means having failed, they believed that talk might lead to an easing of South Africa's white supremacy laws.

Unfortunately, it was being proved again that the forces which divide Africa's new nations are stronger and more numerous than those that unite them.

'NOW' GENERATION

Youth Carry 'Jesus' Scene Into Montreal

By JANET CAWLEY

MONTREAL (UPI) — The long-haired youth stood on a downtown sidewalk, pointed his index finger to the sky and said: "Jesus Christ is the one way to salvation."

This scene is being replayed throughout North America today as increasing numbers of the "now" generation are putting down drugs and picking up Bibles, quoting Jesus instead of Mao, and leading a revolution of religion rather than violence.

Call them "Jesus Freaks" (not preferred by members), or "Jesus People" as they like to call themselves, the movement has converted thousands of youths with help of modern-day slogans like "Groove with Jesus" and "Turn on with God."

Rev. Ritchie Haward, assistant pastor and youth director at Montreal's Evangel Pentecostal Church, explained in an interview that he sees the new religious fervor as "the end of a search."

"These kids have tried various scenes and found they weren't lasting," he said. "So they turned to something more basic."

He rejected the idea that many will eventually tire of the movement, as they have of other lifestyles, and move on to something else.

"I'm not saying everyone is going to hang in —there's a dropout rate in everything — but most have found it's something very real," he said.

Chuck Smith, a member of the movement in Montreal, summed it up another way: "If they backslide, it's because they didn't slide forward in the first place."

Haward estimated the number of Jesus People in Montreal has increased tenfold over last year —to about 200 "hard core" members and up to 1,000 new converts, most in their late teens and early 20s.

This rise is due in great part to evangelizing by the young people themselves, they believe.

Haward explained they believe in a personal witness, an evangelism. They go out in the streets and talk to their friends, to communicate their faith and tell about the change in their lives.

"But the kids are very careful about whom they approach —they're led by the spirit of God to each individual —and they won't press the issue if the person isn't receptive," he said.

Most of the converts, Haward said, "were exposed to religion before, often as a child. They had at least some nominal acquaintance with churches and Sunday School. But most drifted away and few seemed really interested in religion at the time of their conversion."

Those who convert, Smith said, "come from different social and economic groups, even though they may not appear to. And there seem to be more men than women —perhaps because women are more interested in security and the home, and men are more adventurous."

Haward noted that "today men are more willing than they were to admit they need religion."

Once converted, the Jesus People do not necessarily affiliate themselves with any particular church or religion, but worship, instead, wherever they feel they best fit in.

Asked to comment on the dangers inherent in the movement, Haward noted the possibility of "becoming so heavenly minded you're no earthly good. That's why it's necessary to have teaching. Otherwise, people can become mystic and interpret scriptures their own way."

SISTER MARIE-JOSEPH VAN DEVEN
. . . have to be able to hope for the better'

ENTERS POLITICS

More Than 'Heart' Needed, Nun Says

TILBURG, Holland (UPI)— When Sister Marie-Joseph Van Deven decided to run for a seat in The Hague City Council a little over a year ago, City Alderman Geert Hylkema told her she was too emotional to be in politics.

"If you contribute your brains," she told Hylkema, "and I add my heart, we will go a long way together."

Having been a city councilman for a year now, Sister Marie-Joseph is not so sure.

"The wall I used to run into is still there," she said in an interview at the Sisters of Love convent, which is her home. "The worst discovery I made was that everything moves so slowly—and cannot move any faster."

When the 58-year-old nun first campaigned for election in a working class area of The Hague, she was greeted by hecklers shouting, "What use have we got for a holy hag?"

A year later her constituents say, "Sister, you're our secret weapon."

"It is a fact that many doors open because I am a Council member,' she said. "With the aid of the authorities, I have been able to relieve some of the misery. It was not much, but if a hundred people are in danger of drowning and I can save one of them, I do so."

Sister Marie Joseph, who spent 27 years as a schoolteacher, admits to not knowing and not caring much about politics.

"My only motive for agreeing to run was my hope I could do more for my people," she said.

"Throughout the day people are asking for help," Sister Marie Joseph said "When I get home I realize I've left the people behind and couldn't doing anything about it.

"If you help one person, others think of you as God Almighty. How can I make them realize this is not so?"

The nun said the Council job sometimes troubles her conscience.

"Recently I voted along with the party in favor of a proposal to curb parking excesses. But I was still bothered by the thought of the man in the working class district who is happy working under his small car in front of his door because inside his slum dwelling there is no room for him."

Despite the frustrations and problems, Sister Marie-Joseph says she will stay in politics for at least another year.

"Being a politician and a nun have one thing in common--you have to be able to hope for something better," she said.

A New Era In Bibical Study

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — The Pontifical Biblical Commission was born 59 years ago as a bulwark against the tide of new ideas sweeping the Roman Catholic church.

As far as it was concerned, God made the world in just six days. Adam was Adam, and that was that. And the devil appeared to Eve in the unmistakeable form of a serpent.

During the modernist dispute in the early part of the century, the commission was used to bludgeon opinions then considered hostile to the Holy See.

Times have changed. The Vatican Ecumenical Council put the Bible in a place of prime importance in the church. No longer do Roman Catholic biblical experts treat it as though it were factual in every detail. As their Protestant colleagues, they are investigating the possibility that the Bible expresses ideas rather than clear-cut history. They are digging into Hebrew and Aramaic texts. They are searching for meanings perhaps still hidden.

Recently, Pope Paul VI gave recognition of this change. He took away the independent status of the old biblical commission, whose members were appointed for life, and dismissed the 36 cardinals, prelates and sundry experts who belonged to it.

He ruled, instead, that a new biblican commission will be formed under the wing of the Doctrine of the Faith, the watchdog body for Roman Catholic dogma.

The world's bishops' conferences will be asked to nominate top biblical scholars to serve on it. But the Pope will have the final word on who is to be appointed to the 20-member commission.

His directive said the commission will include representatives of all schools of thought. Vatican officials said he would announce his decision within three or four months.

All members — and they can include laymen — will serve for five years. Non-Roman Catholic scholars may be consulted, but they may not be commission members.

The panel will continue to grant degrees in biblical studies.

It will study biblical questions posed by the Pope and by bishops' conferences.

Vatican officials predicted it also would aid Christian unity attempts. One recalled that the late Cardinal Augustin Bea, a champion of ecumenism, used to say that joint biblical study was the surest path to unity.

Behr Seeks Support On River Legislation

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, citing an upcoming crucial hearing on his legislation to preserve the Eel, Klamath and Trinity as wild and scenic rivers, has urged "every possible expression of support" from the public.

The bill, SB 107, will be heard at 9:30 a.m. on July 26 in Room 5007 by the Senate Finance Committee. The chairman of the committee, Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, who opposes the bill, had bottled it up without a hearing since May.

Behr said the hearing will be a "critical moment in our campaign" to save the three rivers. 'This is the bill's critical test. It is extremely important that Senate Finance Committee members be deluged with every possible expression of support: cards, letters, telephone calls."

Cyclist Avoids Serious Injury With Helmet

A San Rafael man, involved in a motorcycle-car accident Thursday, was saved from serious head injury by his crash helmet, police reported yesterday.

Police said William Robert Hurl, 27, of 1060 A Los Gamos Road, was traveling west on Third Street when his Yamaha and a vehicle driven by William David Caddell, 19, of 6 Britton Ridge, Belvedere, collided.

According to police, Hurl was thrown from the motorcycle by the impact of the collision but only received cuts to his knee and ankle.

He was treated at Marin General Hospital.

Profile Of A Marinite

By RALPH CHATOIAN

LeRoy French is a man who feels almost as comfortable underwater as he does on dry land.

French, owner of the Bamboo Reef skin-diving store in San Rafael, is one of those lucky souls who was able to transform a hobby into a profitable business, and at the same time have the talent to rise to the top in his skill inworld-wide competition.

Last February the 33-year-old French was the winner of the International Underwater Photographer of the Year Award, presented to him in Santa Monica at the 14th annual Underwater Film Festival. It put him in the same class as internationally famous underwater photographer-explorers Jacques and Phillipe Cousteau.

AND HIS business, which was started on a shoestring 10 years ago, is growing by leaps and bounds.

French started out as a 23-year-old business man by opening the Bamboo Reef with partner Al Giddings Jr. at its present location, 3765 Redwood Highway in San Rafael. Then it was hardly more than a small room where skin divers could get together to swap stories. The inventory was almost nonexistent.

But they did have a swimming pool for diving.

"THAT WAS something," laughed French. "We had a ready-made pool, something we couldn't have possibly afforded on what we started out with."

The premises had used by a patio supply business, French explained, and when it moved, the display pool remained. There the diving lessons are still given.

The shop was decorated in bamboo and sacking, all on a do-it-yourself basis. The help came from a San Francisco wholesaler who supplied some inventory on consignment, and the Bay Area's first "skin-diving only" store was really in operation.

FRENCH AND Giddings built up the business the first four years, and then opened another Bamboo Reef, this time in San Francisco. A short time later, the two dissolved their partnership, Giddings remaining the owner of the San Francisco store and French the owner of the shop in San Rafael.

"Even though we're in competition now, we remain good friends," said French.

As the San Rafael business grew, French reached the point about four years ago where he was able to tear down the old building and put up new structure, much largar than the one in which he started operation. And then came further expansion and diversification.

NEXT TO his skin-diving place is his second venture, Sojourns Ltd., underwater tour specialists. Last month he started his third business, French Underwater Industries Inc., in Northgate Industrial Park, dealing in underwater photographic systems and equipment.

French's underwater filming expeditions take him to the far corners of the earth, to spots in the South Pacific, the Caribbean, Latin America, the kinds of places many of us dream about. And when he's there, filming for magazines or television companies in the U.S. and Europe, his talents don't come cheap — unless you consider $250 per day and expenses a small sum to pay for those underwater pictures and films.

His next trips will take him to British Honduras and Swan Island, then Guam and the South Pacific. He'll be doing some work for Skin Diving magazine.

A NATIVE of San Francisco, French has been around water much of his life. He started skin-diving with a snorkel when 12 on his family's ranch in Idaho.

"There was always hunting, fishing and horseback riding," said French. "So I wanted to try something different. . .like skin-diving."

When he was 16, French started doing a little off-coast diving, with snorkel, around San Francisco. Two years later he got his first scuba-diving gear, when he was really hooked.

Scuba (which stands for Self Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus) diving was a relatively new thing then.

"YOU COULD drive up and down the coast and maybe you would see two or three divers. Now you see hundreds," French declared.

French remembers back to that first underwater breath. "It has to be one of the most exciting experiences of your life. All your life you've been conditioned to hold your breath underwater, then all of a sudden you can breathe while staying under. It is one of the greatest feelings a person can experience.)

French was involved in a near-fatal mishap when he was 24.

DIVING NEAR the Farallon Islands, he was attacked by a man eating white shark and suffered severe wounds to his left leg. He fought off the shark by using a spear gun as a sword, stabbing at the shark as he was pulled about 10 feet under the water before he fought free.

The shark attack came just days before a planned wedding with Carolann (Cam) McMenamin and forced a change of plans, with French spending a few weeks in a hospital.

The couple eventually were wed, and now live in Ross, with their two sons, LeRoy Jr., 6, and Matthew. 1.

THREE YEARS prior to that shark attack, LeRoy's brother, James E. III, nearly lost his life after a deep dive in Carmel. He suffered a severe case of the "bends" and was placed in a decompression chamber at the San Francisco Naval Shipyard for 48 hours.

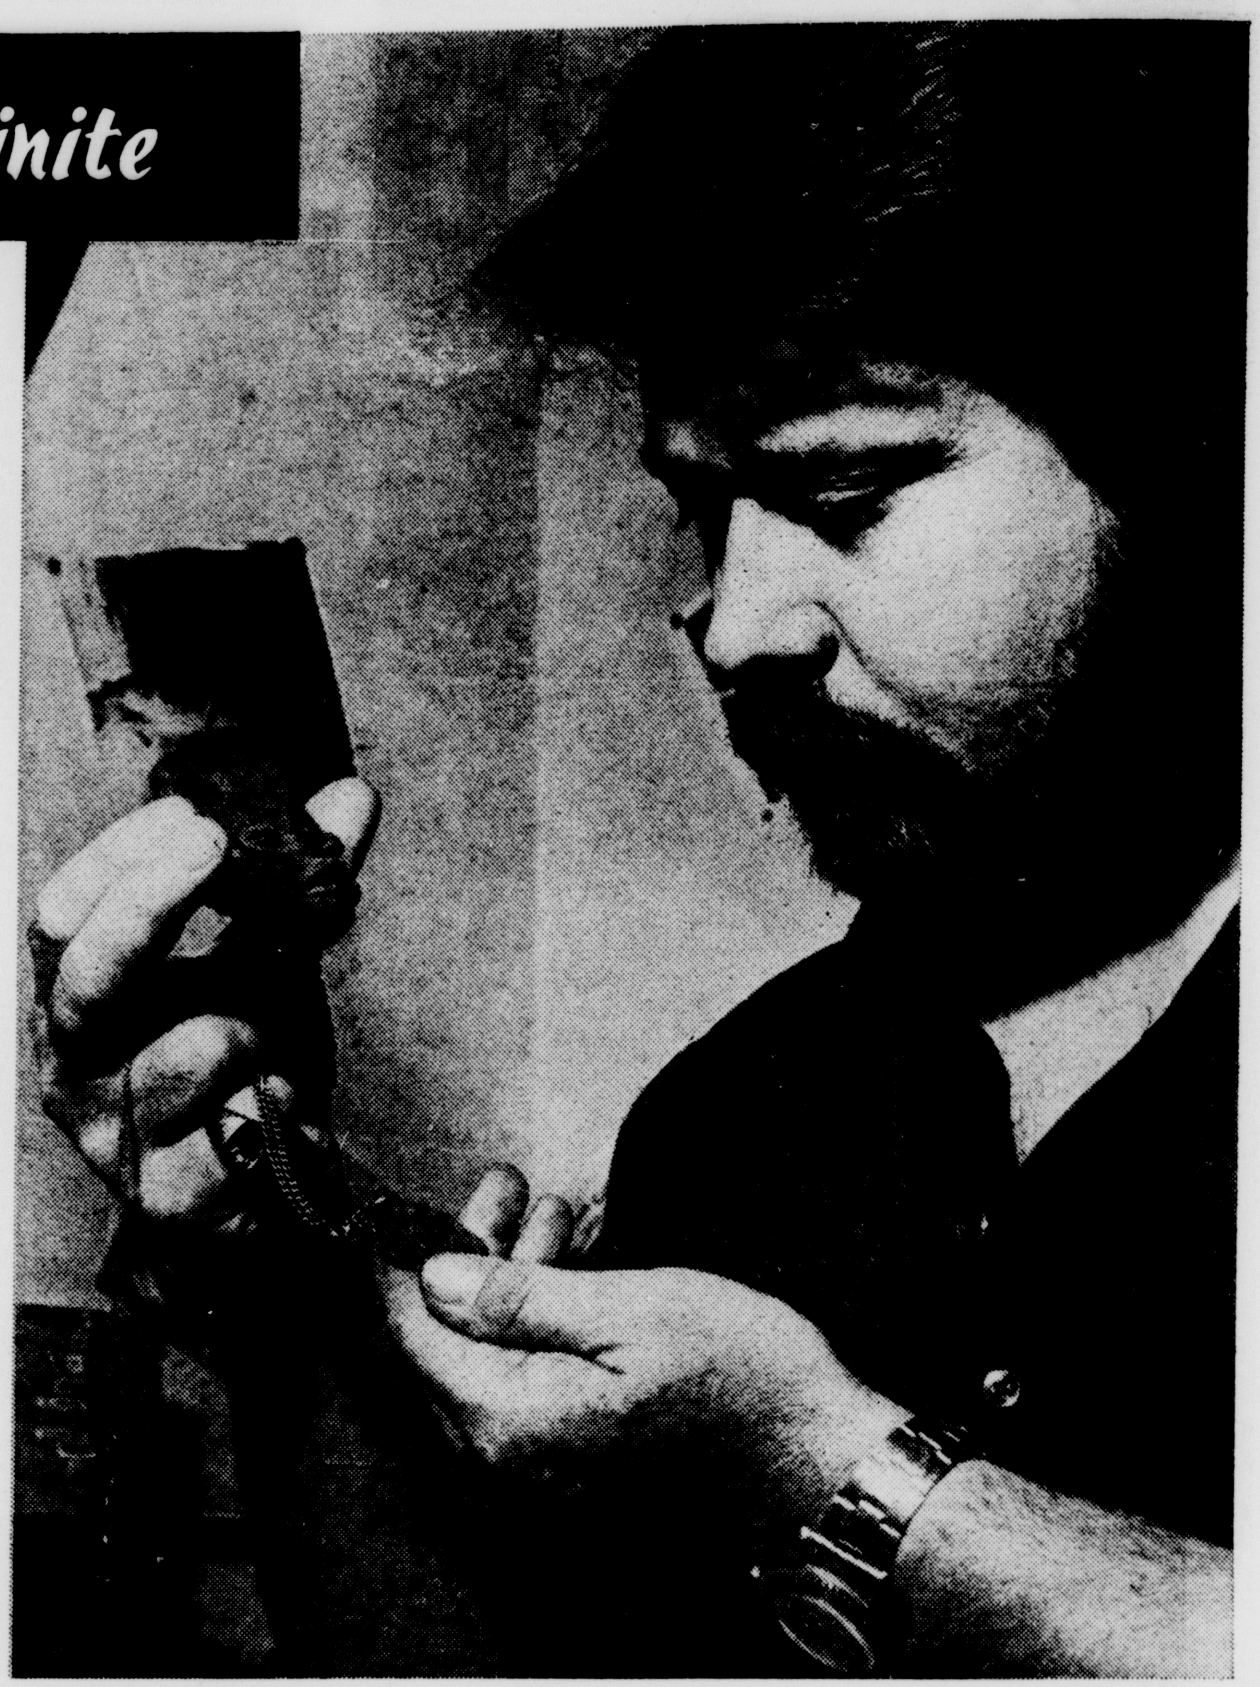
In his early days of skin-diving, French helped promote the Marin Skin-Diving Club. Thus when he opened his business in 1961 he had a ready-made list of customers who were happy to bring their business to him and save the trip to San Francisco or to other sporting good stores in the Bay Area.

AND FRENCH hasn't forgotten this.

"I would say that 90 per cent of our growth here is because of the people of Marin County. When we started here, the abalone divers and old fishermen used to bring their business to us.

"The people have been simply wonderful."



LeROY FRENCH EXAMINES a few of the artifacts he had recovered from the deep in his underwater diving and filming expeditions to some of the world's most exotic and idyllic spots. Coming up are trips to British Honduras and Swan Island to shoot still pictures for magazines and film footage for television. In February, 1971, he was named International Underwater Photographer of the Year at Santa Monica's Underwater Film Festival.

Tips on Purchase and Home Care of Your Wardrobe

"What Made The Bubbles On My Windbreaker?"

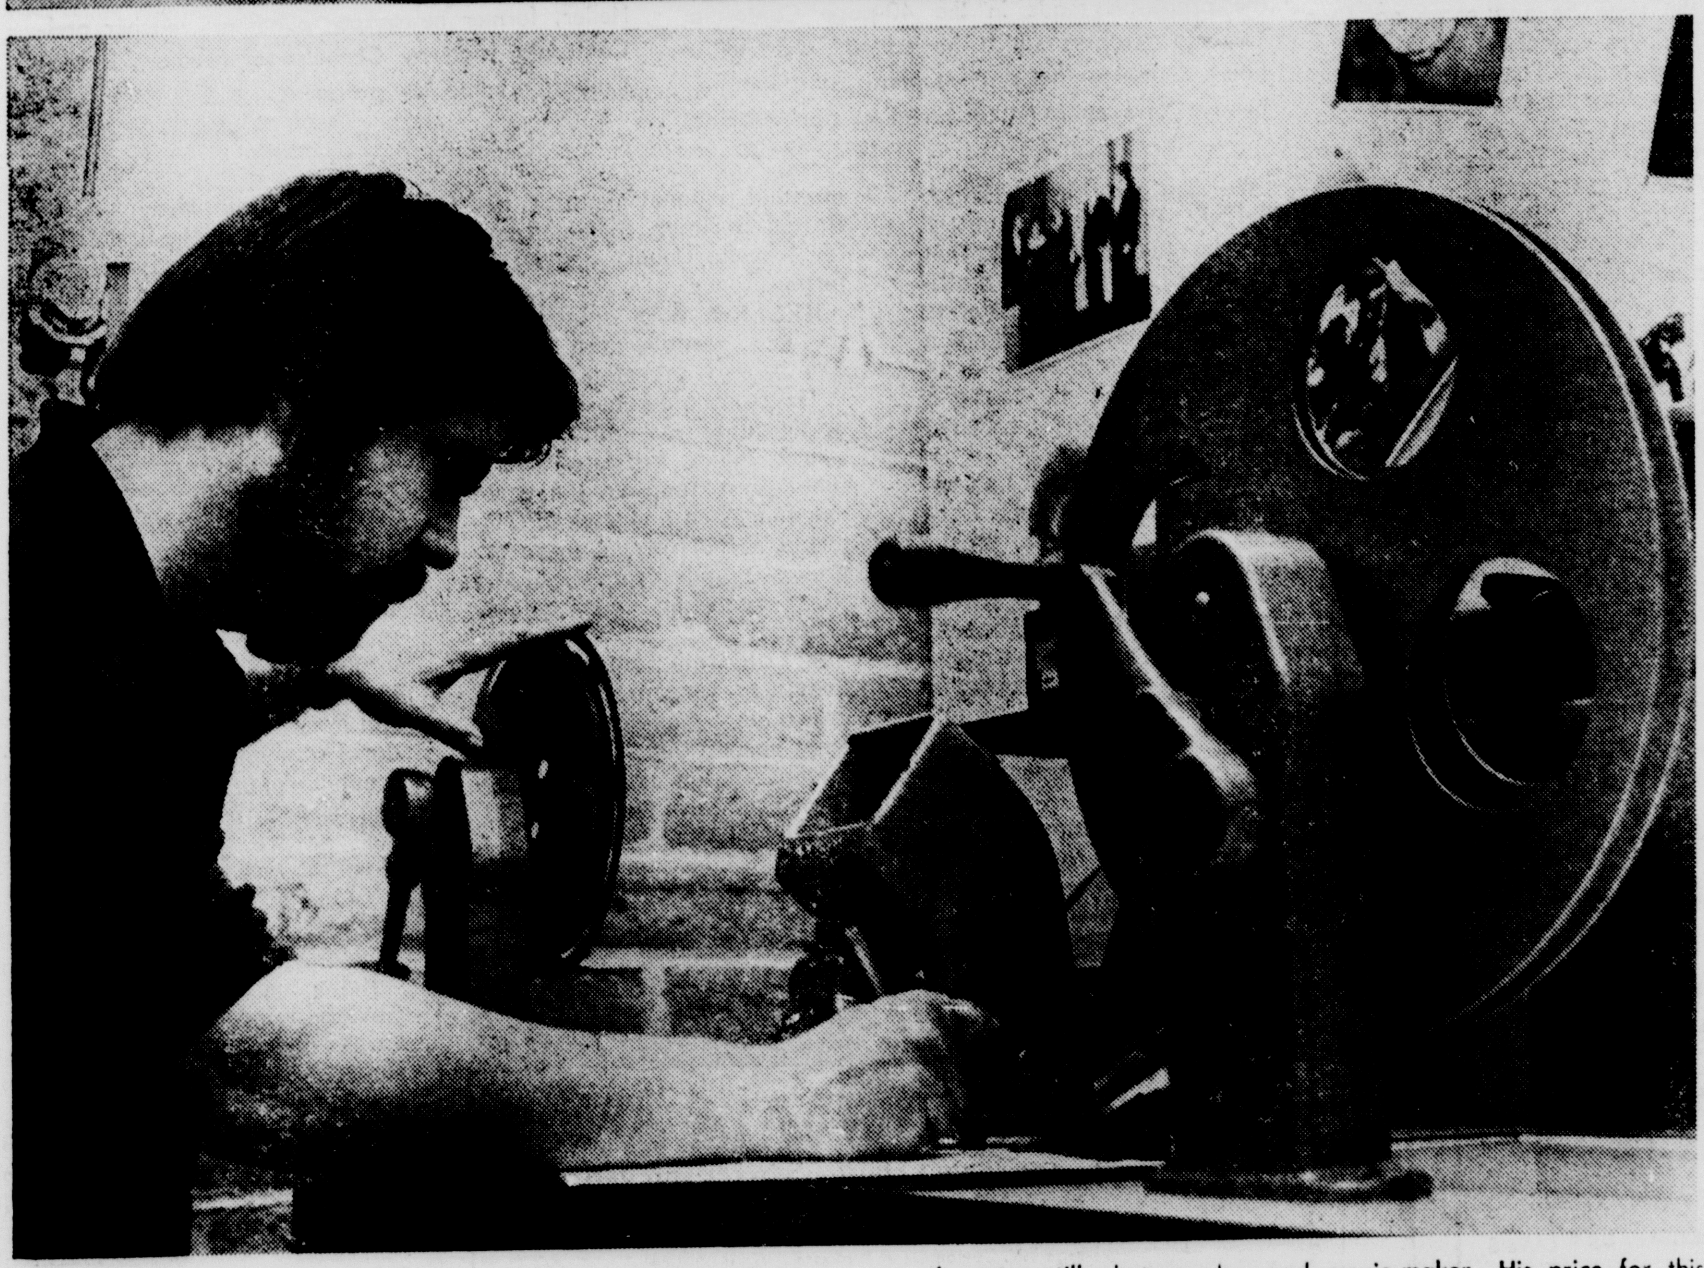
Your dacron windbreaker is lined with rubber. This lining is used to waterproof and windproof the garment. The dacron fabric is designed to adhere to the rubber lining. However, when the windbreaker is drycleaned the rubber lining and the dacron separate. Blisters appear. Sometimes the lining may separate completely from the fabric. Not all windbreakers do this.

There is no way to determine before cleaning whether or not this separation will occur. The National Institute of Drycleaning warns against such garments when labeled "Salik-suede" made in Belgium and "Heeksuede" made in Holland.

The "bubbles" you mentioned, Mr. J.R.C., are the blisters formed by the separation of the dacron fabric of your windbreaker from its wind and waterproof lining. This cannot be corrected.

By Robert and Ronald Cassasa, Marin Cleaners, Inc.

ABOVE, LeRoy French demonstrates for Kathryn DeMasi a camera fitted into a marine housing for underwater use that is typical of the underwater photographic equipment his newest business, French Underwater Industries Inc., deals in. The new enterprise was started up in June of this year in Northgate Industrial Park as an adjunct to his highly successful Bamboo Reef skin-diving school and store. French also operates Sojourns Ltd., dealing in underwater tours for sports-minded travelers.



IN HIS FILM-EDITING room, LeRoy French works upon some of the footage that has won him an international reputation as an underwater still photographer and movie-maker. A Plan For The Future California

Group Led By Marinite Sketch Proposed Course

By DON KEOWN

The California of the future can be a state with a runaway population headed toward the 40-million figure, with spreading cities that continue to gobble up our remaining good farming and recreational lands, with rural slums and run-down urban cores, with chronic unemployment, with increasing crime and social discontent, with an educational system that seems irrelevant to society's needs, with growing smog and worsening water pollution, with minimum integration, with prison disorders, and with its communities caught more and more in the stranglehold of automobile congestion.

Or, the California of the future can be a state with its population leveled off at a reasonable 30 millions, its urban sprawl controlled and contained, its housing renewed, its people guaranteed a decent minimum income and complete health care, its vehicular congestion and pollution relieved by public transportation systems, its recreational open spaces protected, its penal programs stressing rehabilitation instead of punishment, its schools serving not only as year-round study centers but also as places for avocational and recreational activities, and the shapes and attributes of its communities determined largely by the residents themselves.

THE CHOICE between these two alternatives, says Alfred E. Heller of Kentfield, rests with the people of California.

If we select the first alternative — a choice by which California will become more and more "a tortured place" — then we have only to continue as we have in the past, tackling our problems on a piecemeal basis after they have reached crisis proportions — doing too little, too late, and sometimes moving in the wrong direction.

The second alternative — "a California that is a constructive and compassionate society, working toward a better chance for the good life for all" — will require a considerable change in our thinking and, more importantly, in our actions.

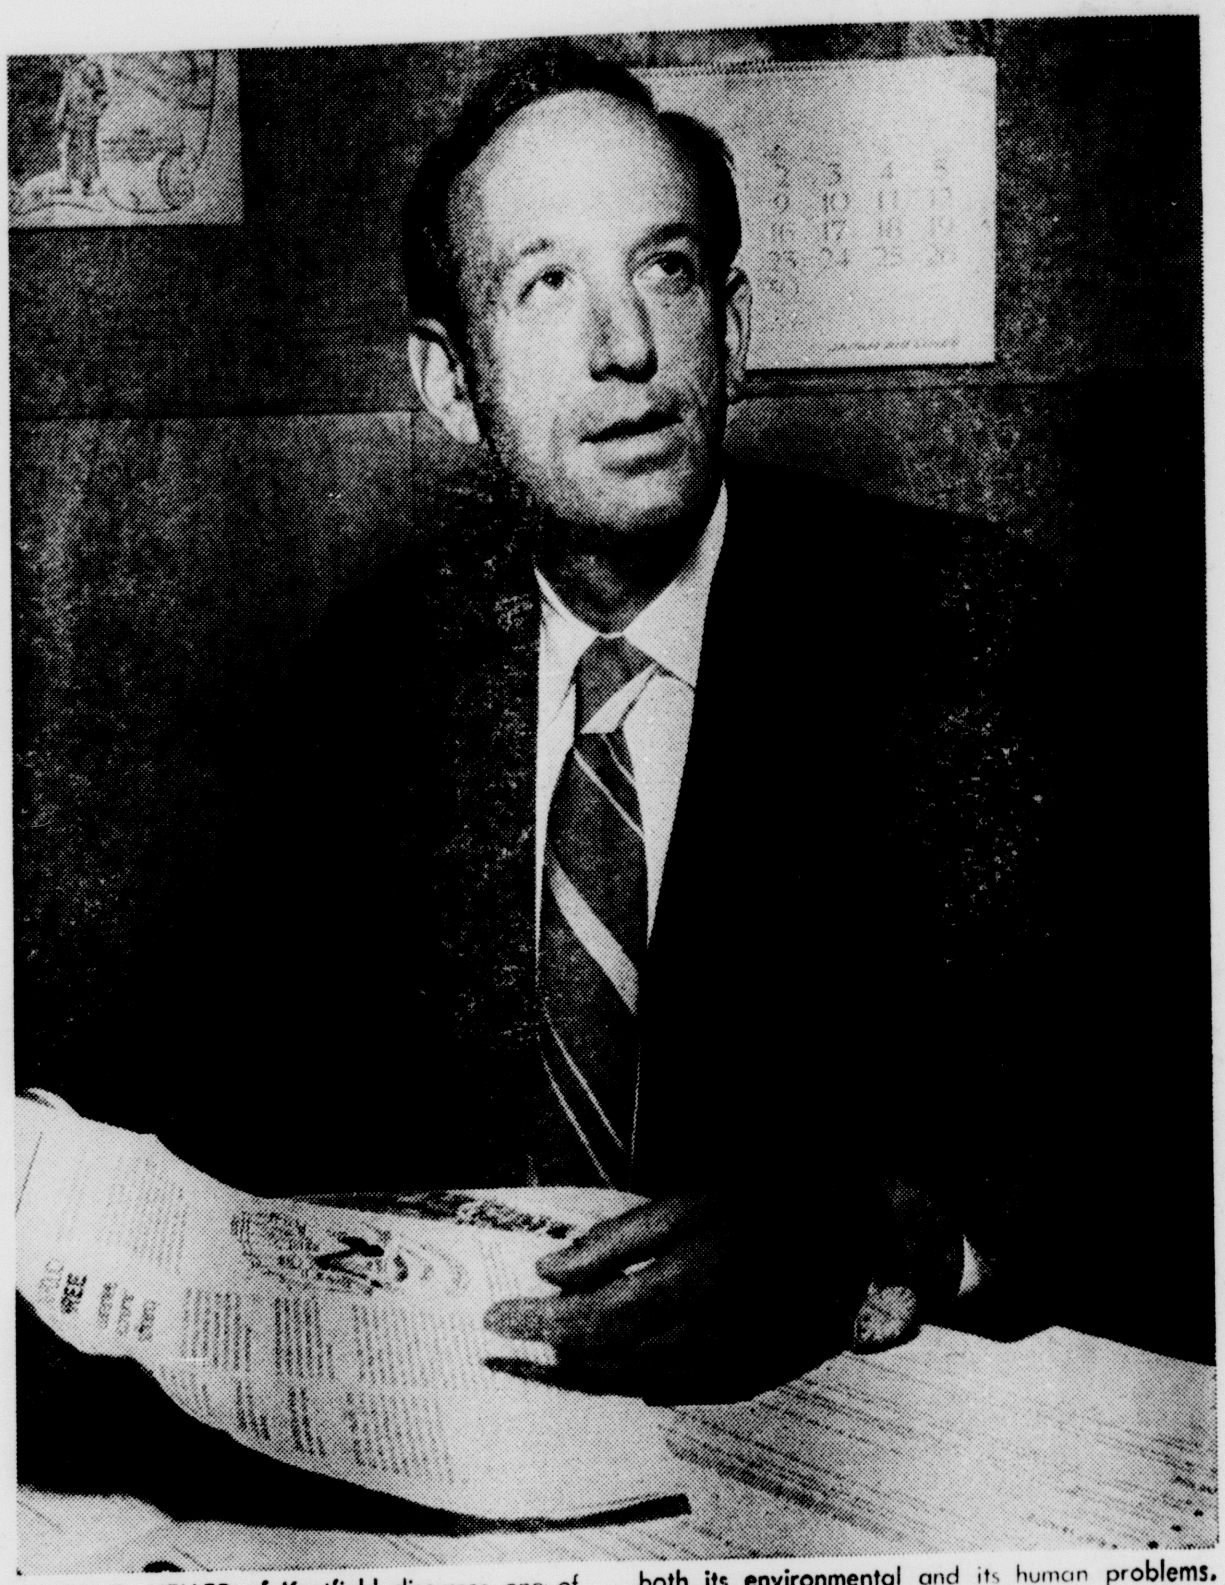
A PROPOSED course that might bring about that constructive and compassionate California has been sketched by an organization known as California Tomorrow in a 40-page illustrated report — "The California Tomorrow Plan, A First Sketch" — published earlier this year.

Alfred Heller is the president and one of the founders of California Tomorrow, and the editor and principal draftsman of the report.

He was born in San Francisco and educated at Putney School in Vermont and at Stanfod University. He served in the Korean War and then taught school. At the time he and some acquaintances conceived the idea for California Tomorrow, he was a newspaper publisher, living at Grass Valley and putting out the Nevada City Nugget.

IT WAS 1961, and Heller points out that "this was before there was any broad understanding of or any great interest in our environmental problems."

Still, it seemed to Heller and his concerned friends, that there was "a clear need for an organization that could bridge the gap that existed between the agency experts and the special-purpose conservation organizations and general public."



ALFRED E. HELLER of Kentfield discusses one of the proposals made in the 40-page California Tomorrow report which he edited, charting a future course for the state emphasizing a comprehensive and coordinated planning approach to both its environmental and its human problems. Heller, former newspaper publisher, teacher and California Highway Commission member, is the California Tomorrow president.

"We also felt," says Heller, "that we should be committed from the outset to the idea that the best way to solve the multitude of problems confronting California would be through a quiet, systematic process — an approach that, for the want of a better word, might be called 'planning'."

THIS, HE ADDS, has remained the theme of the California Tomorrow movement through its 10 years.

Heller recalls that there were four persons, including himself, in attendance at that first meeting he called in 1961 to begin the formation of a new organization.

On hand were Samuel Lee Wood, Sacramento planning consultant; the late Catherine Bauer Wurster of the University of California department of city and regional planning, and Harold Berliner, then and now the Nevada County district attorney.

HELLER WAS selected as the new group's first, and to date its only, president.

The first name chosen for the organization was California Resource Policy Institute. But in those first few months some one suggested a change to California Tomorrow, as more expressive and dramatic. And that suggestion was quickly adopted.

As California Tomorrow, that fledgling organization has grown as a non-profit, tax-exempt corporation to its present membership of about 7,000 concerned Californians.

"WE STARTED out with a bang," Heller remembers. "In 1962 we issued a report that we called 'California, Going, Going' that was the first significant voice to be raised in our state urging that the state engage in comprehensive, coordinated statewide planning."

True, legislation had been enacted in 1959 authorizing a comprehensive development plan for California. But there had been no follow-up.

And finally when the state did spend four million dollars for a study, the result was a document entitled "State Development Plan Program, Phase II."

"IT WAS," SAYS Heller bluntly, "virtually unreadable. But in essence it seemed to boil down to a call for the state to create a plan. This, of course, had been authorized years earlier. So we were no further along than we had been before.

"And in the meantime the problems had increased tremendously."

Heller had been appointed by Gov. Edmund G. Brown to the California Highway Commission in 1964. But before the year ended, he resigned to devote his time to other commitments.

Now he disposed of his newspaper to devote his full time to California Tomorrow, and he moved with his family to Marin County to be closer to the headquarters the organization maintains in the Monadnock

Better California Is The Objective Of Citizen Group

Alfred Heller Of Kentfield Edits Report That Sketches The Future

Building at 681 Market Street, San Francisco.

CALIFORNIA Tomorrow maintains a paid staff of five full-time employees at its Market Street address.

A prime project of the nonprofit corporation is the issuance of its quarterly journal, Cry California, "dedicated to bringing the public a greater awareness of the problems we must face to maintain a beautiful and productive California," under the editorship of William Bronson.

Heller is not the only Marinite involved in California Tomorrow.

William M. Roth is its vice president, Marty Kent Jones is an advisory board member and William L. Kahrl is a staff member.

CONCERNED OVER the state's failure to make real progress in comprehensive planning, and by the deteriorating environment, California Tomorrow launched a study of its own. The result is the report issued in March that has enjoyed a brisk sale at $1 a copy through the San Francisco office and at some newsstands in various California cities.

"It represents," says Heller, "about eight months of intensive work by a small group of people."

But the work California Tomorrow had already done through the years in environmental problems and in planning provided an invaluable springboard for the study.

ROTH SERVED on the Heller-headed task force that conducted the California Tomorrow study for which the technical staff came from the San Francisco office of Skidmore, Owings and Merrill.

Heller feels one of the greatest benefits that might derive from the study and the report is that it could serve as a pattern or model for a better-financed state planning program.

"We began to think," he explains, "that one of the reasons the state might have failed to come up with a comprehensive, statewide plan, is that there was no real model available to show how it might be done. It had never really been attempted anywhere on such a scope."

HELLER HOPES that the state will be inspired not only by the study and report that California Tomorrow developed on a small budget, but also by the follow-up program of scrutiny and criticism to which the report has been subjected.

Heller and others have been taking it before the public at various gatherings, to solicit reactions, objections and suggestions.

Turnouts have been large, Heller says, and interest high. And generally the responses have been favorable.

Heller enjoys especially the give-and-take exchanges that develop when he presents the plan to college students and to other groups of young Californians.

"WE TELL them that what we are saying is that environment is inseparable from urban and social problems, and vice versa," Heller declares. "We say that our sketch is only one way in which our system might be made to work. If they disagree, we confront them with this question: 'All right, have you something better to suggest?' And we are willing to listen. In fact, eager to listen."

But Heller believes the most serious opposition to the California Tomorrow proposals will come from land promoters and developers — "people with whom land value is such a prominent issue." He admits that land value involves matters that could not possibly be dealt with in detail "in a sketch report of this kind."

But he believes the answering of the developers' objections will be largely a matter of creating a climate of understanding of California Tomorrow goals. "For we all have a stake in a more orderly, healthier California, whether we be developers or in some other profession."

HELLER emphasizes that the report issued in March should not be regarded as a finished program. "It is an open-ended thing," he says. "We plan to continue to work with it, making revisions, particularly as we receive and evaluate suggestions during this feedback period."

A refined version of the plan is to be issued in about a year. And California Tomorrow might commission a number of special resource studies in connection with that updating.

What is vitally important about the report, Heller believes, is that it represents a first attempt at showing the interrelationships of environmental and social needs, and a first affirmation that both can be dealt with through a single, coordinated set of policies.

"THE CLOSE relationship of physical and social problems is well known," points out the report. "We have attempted to show how they can be met under a single, easily understood set of policies and goals.

"In preparing the sketch plan we have not felt bound by any established notions of what 'planning' is supposed to be. Instead we have attempted to determine what it must be, and to indicate why."

But does Heller really expect to see adopted a program that contains such proposals as a

$4,000 guaranteed minumum income for a family of four, a national health program, a limitation on election campaigns of 90 days with financing from public funds, the installation of "Constitutional controls" over migration into California, the elimination of capital gains tax relief and a special tax on automobiles to help finance their recycling?

"IF I WASN'T an optimist, I wouldn't have gone into this thing in the first place," Heller answers.

Then he adds: "That is not to say I am blindly optimistic. I'm aware of the obstacles. But under the conditions, you do your best. And the alternative here is too terrible to be accepted under any circumstances."

And Heller points out that California Tomorrow's program does not have to be accepted in its totality for it to be successful — as long as it starts the state to thinking in terms of comprehensive, coordinated planning that encompasses both its ecological and its human problems.

A KEY PROPOSAL in the California Tomorrow report calls for the establishment of an 11-member state planning council which would prepare a California Plan specifying both long and short term state goals and policies and absorb the budgeting responsibilities now exercised by the State Department of Finance. The California Plan would be submitted to the governor and the legislature for their approval and would be updated annually.

Regional governments, likewise, would have their regional plans, drafted within the framework of the California Plan.

All existing counties would become municipal governments, like the cities, providing the full range of municipal services to citizens who now live outside city boundaries.

AND THROUGH these local governments, community councils would be set up to help bring the decision-making to the neighborhood level.

One of the basic policies of the California Tomorrow program would establish as part of the California Plan state zones that would define generally those areas where building and development could or could not take place, thus preserving agricultural soils and recreational areas and checking urban sprawl.

Four zone classifications would be included:

Agricultural, where building would be prohibited or restricted; Conservation, for state-administered lands of scenic, historic and ecological importance plus hazard (earthquake fault, flood danger, etc.) areas, where building would be banned or allowed only under very strict controls; Urban, for lands already urbanized or suitable for urban development, and Regional Reserves of land which does not readily fall into any of the other three categories and which would be available to the regions for use for public purposes, as open space, for high density development or for a variety of other uses, thus providing flexibility and variety.

THE FIRST two zones would be under state administration, the last two under regional supervision.

Under the California Tomorrow plan quality standards would be enforced for the protection of air and water. For example: "Waste waters percolated into the ground may not contain toxic substances in excess of accepted drinking water standards. All taste and odor producing substances must be removed prior to discharge."

And: "No chemical poisons of any kind may be marketed until the manufacturer has demonstrated conclusively that the short and long-range effects of their use will not damage the ecology of the state . . ."

And: "The basic state requirement is 15 acres of public open recreation space per 1,000 population within 40 miles of population centers. In addition, the state requires five acres of distributed green space per 1,000 people within the jurisdictional boundary of each community council. At least half of this must be public open space, available to all."

ALSO ENFORCED would be standards to keep noise at levels "not merely tolerable but amenable." A recommended scale in decibels is included.

Building code requirements would be so written as to encourage investors to remodel old buildings, while owners of deficient housing would be deprived of tax advantages they now enjoy. Taxes would not be reduced as improvements deteriorate.

The assessment of land for tax purposes would be made according to its use and not according to its potential for development.

As a population control measure, the number of children who could be declared for income tax purposes would be limited to two.

NEW ARRIVALS in California would be charged a $1,000 "capital investment fee" to be collected in installments to help pay for the improvement services these new residents require. Federal authorization would be required.

Will We Choose The Coordinated Approach?

Special taxes would be levied upon motors of more than 65 horsepower, and upon excessive use of electricity.

The oil depletion allowance would be replaced with an oil depletion tax.

Along with the special tax on automobiles to pay for their recycling, there would be a packaging tax on containers and wrappings — cans, bottles, plastics, cardboard, etc. — with the proceeds used to pay for an efficient solid waste disposal system in each region. The government would also establish price supports to encourage the recycling of such wastes, and would sponsor research seeking new, economical recycling techniques.

A SPECIAL TAX on redwood is suggested as typical of taxes to be levied on building materials that represent limited resources.

A Federal Conservation and Development Bank would be set up to make long-term, low-interest loans "of enormous size" to the regions to finance their developmental programs.

A high speed rail line would link northern and southern California, with new cities developed along its route to relieve existing communities of some of their population pressure.

Regional transit systems would be developed.

THERE WOULD be a publicly-provided health clinic in each community.

Is the future California that would develop from the California Tomorrow plan a completely rosy one?

Alfred Heller and his colleagues admit that there would be results that some Californians probably would find disconcerting.

For instance, under the program "you would not have a great deal of money with which to buy great numbers of labor-saving machines for your homes. But you would have the basic appliances."

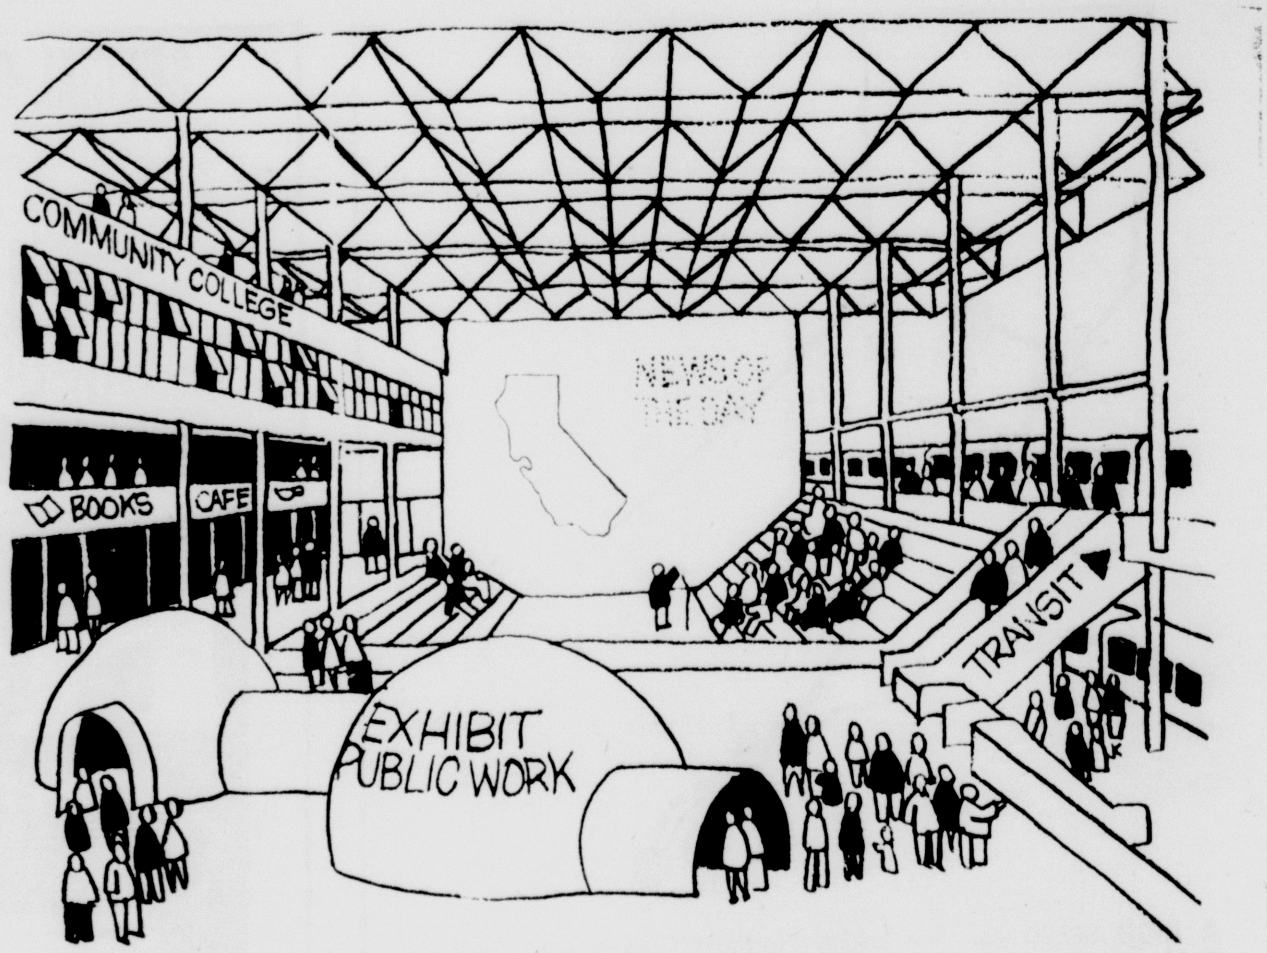
And: "Costs would be high, partly because of the environmental constraints on manufacturers. Taxes, too, would be high."

BUT IN RETURN, "you would have access to amenities such as public transportation and parks that would stand in lieu of purchasing power. You would eat better and enjoy better housing than you would have years before on an equivalent salary."

Many, they admit, would remain discontented, with restrictions on the use of private property, with income, with governmental interference, with bureaucratic red tape. But these same complaints are heard today when the state is making only ineffective attempts to protect the environment and to provide a framework for the development of our communities.

Nor would prejudice and inequities be erased from our society.

BUT THEY would be, Heller believes, eased, since the restructuring of the planning processes would give each citizen a better opportunity to work in and to influence the governmental bodies.



TRANSIT STATIONS could also serve as community centers, suggests the California Tomorrow study report. This artists's drawing from the 40-page report shows one such concept of a center that might be developed by a community council in cooperation with local government.

The California Tomorrow report puts forth eight "activators" which the organization regards as essential if the better California is to be realized, adding that these activators "cannot be compromised. Halfway measures enacted as substitute for an activator are worse than no action at all." They are:

1. Emergency action to protect valuable lands of the state in immediate danger of unhealthy change or destruction.
2. The adoption by the legislature of basic goals for the state of California that would serve as the basis for development and for the coordination of state policies and programs.
3. The instituting of one single, strong agency to direct state planning and budgeting.
4. The formation of the strong regional governments.
5. The organization of community councils.
6. The setting up of a social-economic-resources model of the state to be used in fact-finding and decision-making. Such a model, it is noted, is already in the formative stage at the University of California at Davis.
7. The use of California's influence upon the federal government to make U.S. grants and loans to state and local governments contingent upon the existence of strong state planning and budgeting operations, and upon the existence of regional governments with regional plans. Also: pressure for federal action on such U.S. programs as a minimum income for families and a national health system.
8. And finally, that the people of California be agreeable to taking the risks required "in a first attempt to find a path to decent survival."

ON THIS LAST point, the California Tomorrow report reads:

"It requires that we change some of our ways of living and switch around some priorities of spending. It may require that we take certain risks — that to pay for a future of amenity, for example, we share the risk of reduced expenditures for war; or that to protect the bright land of California we risk inconvenience by foreswearing the use of certain machines or products or poisons.

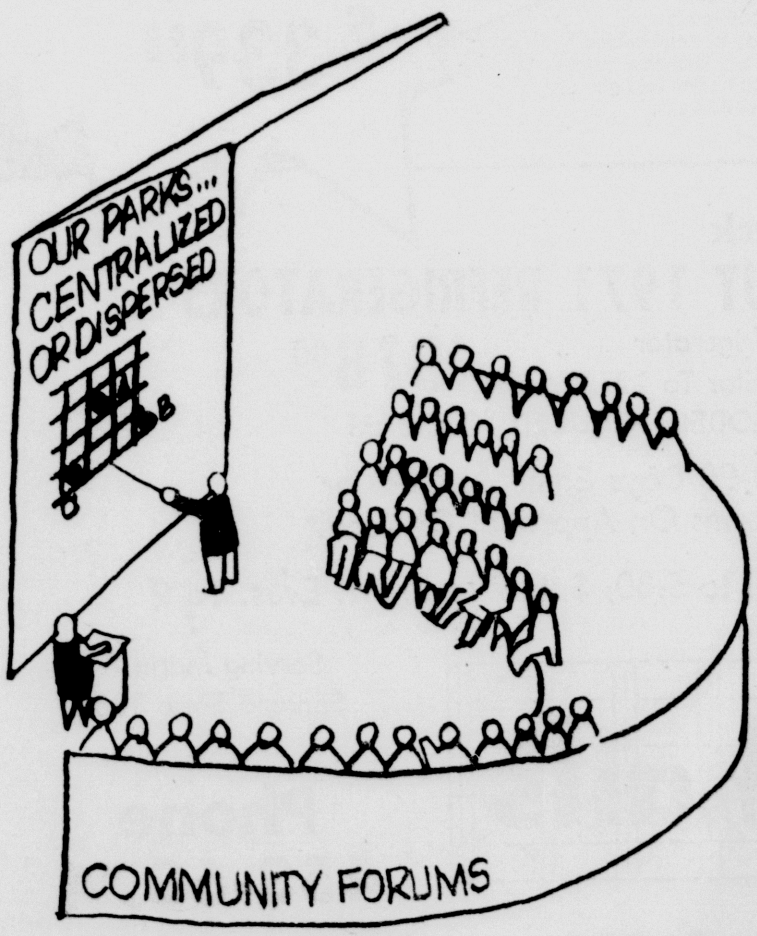
"But we can afford to take these risks and, to win the future, we will."

TO DATE, Alfred Heller feels, the reaction in Sacramento to the California Tomorrow "sketch plan" has been encouraging. The most hopeful and concrete response has come from Assemblyman Willie Brown who has promised to introduce legislation that would begin to move California along the path toward realization of at least two of the activators.

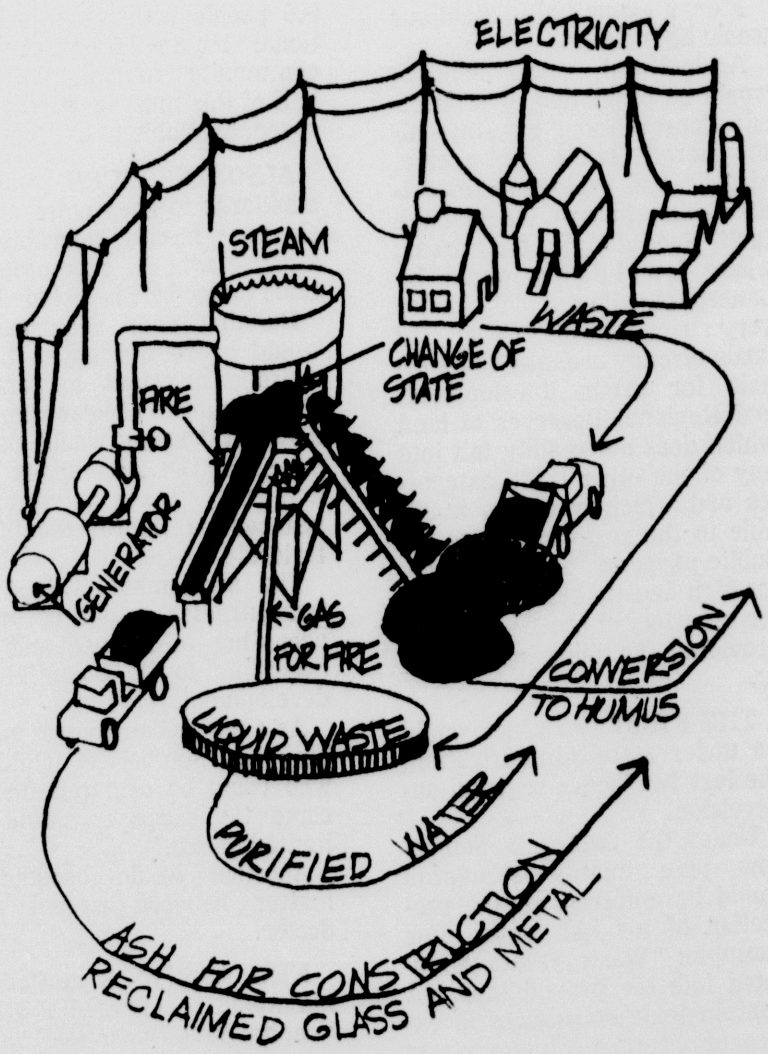
Heller acknowledges that a lot of work still lies ahead before California can be moved out of the bog in which it has become morassed.

But to those who term the ideas of California Tomorrow utopian, Heller replies that the alternative may well be a contemporary version of Dante's Inferno.

And the difference between even an imperfect Utopia and a Hades, he suggests, might well be worth a great deal of special effort and considerable sacrifice.



COMMUNITY councils would be assigned active roles under the California Tomorrow program in such matters as selecting the location and design of community facilities including local parks.



A TAX ON containers and packaging materials is proposed by California Tomorrow to promote streamlined, efficient regional solid waste disposal systems and to encourage the recycling of resources.

Training For Theater

Marin's Shakespeare Festival is celebrating its 11th season this year with a new "youth look."

When the 1971 season gets under way tonight at 8 o'clock with a performance of the modern musical in medieval dress, "Once Upon a Mattress," in the outdoor amphitheater at Dominican College's Forest Meadows, San Rafael, the vigorous presence of 90 selected drama students from the Tamalpais High School District will be very much felt.

They are the teen-agers from the drama classes of Sir Francis Drake, Redwood and Tamalpais high schools who are participating this summer in the Marin Shakespeare Festival's apprentice program.

They have been hammering on the sets, hanging and focusing lights, sewing on costumes, mailing brochures and taking reservations.

And they have been attending classes taught by their high school instructors, the professional staff of the festival and visiting lecturers and artists.

Now some of them will be seen on stage as well, or heard from the orchestra pit.

The apprentice program is the product of combined efforts of Dan Caldwell, drama instructor at Tamalpais High School; Dorthy Desrosiers, drama instructor at Drake High School; J. D. Nichols, music instructor at Redwood High School, and Scott Merrick, music professor at the College of Marin.

A pilot program was given a trial run last summer, with high school students enrolled in summer drama and music classes serving as volunteer apprentices in several capacities for a festival production of "Brigadoon."

This year the program is a recognized addition to the high schools' summer curriculum with students taking the theater classes and workshop for school credits.

The subjects offered are Acting; Oral Interpretation of Shakespeare; Mime, Dance and Body Movement; Props, Set and Costume Construction; Music Sight Reading; Voice Production; Theater Games; Improvisational Acting Techniques; House Management, and Techniques of Auditioning.

Class sessions are held at Tamalpais High School in Mill Valley and at the Forest Meadows Amphitheater, for approximately seven hours each day. In addition, the young apprentices serve on the working crews and rehearse for productions.

Fifteen units of high school credit are earned for their six weeks of efforts.

The founders of the summer project are enthusiastic about its opportunities and its results.

Dorthy Desrosiers, one of the prime movers, points out that potential young actors and techcicians on the West Coast are generally deprived of the professional theater experience available on the East Coast because of its summer stock and repertory theater traditions.

"This means," she says, "that our students often have a limited view of the various elements involved in actually producing and mounting a show."

The opportunity the Marin Shakespeare Festival program has provided for students to relate to skilled actors and to discuss theater questions with successful designers and technicians has been of inestimable benefit to them, she adds.

"The idea of on-the-job training," she comments, "is the very best way to bridge the gap between the school, with its limited school productions and in-class training, and the real world of show business."

Dan Caldwell agrees that the festival apprenticeships are providing the teen-agers with invaluable experience in working with professional adults and in "learning how to get along with other people — a necessity in the theater."

Scott Merrick admits an initial disinterest in the summer program until he learned it would cover all facets of music-and-drama production. Then he accepted the task of gathering and training the orchestra, its core composed of Tamalpais

THE AMPHITHEATER in the beautiful setting of Dominican College's wooded Forest Meadows provides an idyllic location for the summer-time Marin County Shakespeare Festival. The festival moved there from the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross in 1967. The event has continued to grow steadily in Bay Area cultural importance so that it now attracts nearly 16,000 spectators during its 11-week season. The 1971 season, opening tonight at 8 o'clock with a performance of "Once Upon a Mattress" will also include productions of "Much Ado About Nothing," "As You Like It" and "Wind in the Willows," plus guest presentations by the Lamplighters and the American Conservatory Theater Summer Congress.

THE CONSTRUCTION of the basic set which will serve for all the Marin Shakespeare Festival productions this summer at the Forest Meadows Amphitheater has been a major part of the indoctrination of Tamalpais High School District teen-agers into the real world of the theater. Here the set, to be in use tonight for the premiere of "Once Upon a Mattress," begins to take shape.

TWO YOUNG Marin Shakespeare Festival apprentices, Jeanne O'Long and Jama Yim of Mill Valley, work on costumes for the 1971 season's opening production, "Once Upon a Mattress," at Tamalpais High School. Both girls are in their second season with the festival.

MUSIC SIGHT-READING instruction so important in musical play production was provided for the young Tamalpais High School District student-apprentices by Scott Merrick, music professor at College of Marin. The class is assembled here on the Forest Meadows grounds.

Merrick, who has also taught a course in rhythm reading, praises his young charges for "a fine job of mastering a long and not too simple score in a short amount of time," and also lauds the festival and the school district for its joint development of the program enabling so many young people to gain firsthand experience with the creative processes involved in putting together a musical show.

His rhythm reading course was designed, he points out, because "rhythm can be the biggest problem faced by drama students who want to sing in a musical show." His students, he adds, have demonstrated remarkable progress.

John Brebner, creative director of the Shakespeare festival which he co-founded in 1961, is proud that his group has been able to introduce thousands of youngsters to good theater during the past decade, as spectators, as backstage workers and even as performers.

Some, he notes, have returned year after year to labor without reward other than the satisfactions of their jobs.

Now, he says, the availability of school credits for their efforts represents a step forward and marks a new plateau for the Shakespeare Festival's relationship with Marin youth.

Brebner is hopeful the apprentice program will be continued and developed still further.

The reaction of adult actors and technicians to the participation of the high school students in the festival is illustrated by the impressions of Robert Egan.

Egan, back for his third year with the Marin festival, is completing his work for his Ph. D. in English at Stanford University, and teaches at Columbia University. He is serving as the Marin Shakespeare Festival's educational director and teaching the course in Oral Interpretation of Shakespeare.

"I confess that I was surprised, in view of the technical nature of the material I covered, by the enthusiasm of these young people," he says. "And I feel the group now has a practical sense of how to speak Shakespeare that is far in advance of what I possessed at their ages. This bodes well for the future of many American theaters and Shakespearean festivals."

Marlene Egan, director of the 1971 production of "As You Like It," taught the class in mime. Jack Degovia, set designer for the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco, conducted a class dealing with the problems in set design. Beverly Ross, recent graduate of the Julliard School in New York, introduced the Tam students to dance and body movement for the stage. Ernest Simard, associate general manager for ACT and general manager for the Marin Shakespeare Festival, was the instructor for the course on the basics of house management.

ACT actor Peter Donat has lectured on acting techniques, Standford University instructor Paul Willis has conducted classes in stage make-up techniques and Brebner presided over a seminar on techniques of auditioning.

The principal Tamalpais District workshop participation in the festival's 1971 season will be focussed upon the "Once Upon a Mattress" production that opens the outdoor series this evening.

But many of the students will continue their work throughout the summer, and have been given responsibilities and roles in upcoming productions of "Much Ado About Nothing," "As You Like It" and "The Wind in the Willows."

Clairellen "Cricket" Waldeck of Mill Valley is, for example, now the director of the Marin Shakespeare Festival Singers that performs not only at the Forest Meadows amphitheater but also throughout the Bay Area at various functions.

Daniel Birnbaum of Sausalito has been cast as the Toad in the children's production of "The Wind in the Willows," a musical adaptation of "Toad of Toad Hall." Gary Berg of Kentfield plays Alfred the singing and dancing horse in the same play.

Lynn Phillips of Corte Madera will be seen in the lead role of Winnefred (Fred) in "Once Upon a Mattress."

Bob Herrmann of Kentfield has roles in "Once Upon a Mattress," "Much Ado About Nothing" and "The Wind and the Willows," and also appears with the Festival Singers.

Sydney Erskine of Sausalito has been cast in "Once Upon a Mattress," "As You Like It" and "Much Ado About Nothing," and also serves as an assistant to the production manager.

Many of the students will be cast as set pieces and fixtures in "Much Ado About Nothing."

And the costume shop has been the scene of a special volume of student activity. Among the teen-agers working there, Jana Yim and Jeanne O'Long are putting in their second summer with the festival.

How do the students feel about this opportunity?

Sandy West, a 15-year-old Redwood High School sophomore, sums it up: "For me, this is the chance of a lifetime. And although it means a lot of hard work, I am determined to take full advantage of it."

The full measure of the vitality and the dedication that these Marin youths have brought to what has become one of the Bay Area's theatrical traditions will become evidence tonight at 8 o'clock when the curtain goes up on yet another festival season among the big trees of Forest Meadows.

By BARRY BROADFOOT

The Travel Pages

There's something about an island, but what?

Can it be that one can, or feels one can, get away from the rush and the race, the push and the pace of mainland living, and that there is a greater sense of freedom on an island, a stronger feeling of being one's own self?

Ask a Vancouver Islander why he lives on his island and he'll usually say, "Because I like being on an island."

POINT OUT that Vancouver Island is huge — from the southern tip at Victoria to the northern point at Cape Scott, is about 280 miles, and its 12,408 square miles put it into the giant class of islands — and he'll say, "Sure, but there is still something about living on an island."

Okay. Come island wandering with us.

The swift and modern British Columbia Government ferry, after leaving the mainland behind and threading through the quiet and lovely Gulf Islands, has landed you at the Swartz Bay terminal. Instead of speeding into Victoria, take the first turn to your right, Wain Road, and drive through the green and farmy Saanich Peninsula countryside to Butchart Gardens.

Many tourist spots say they are world-famous, but this 30 acres of floral wonderland in an old quarry by the sea really is famous. Kings and queens, princes and presidents have visited here, among the more than quarter million persons who have admired it through the many years. It has six gardens, and during the summer when the gardens are softly illuminated, a one-hour revue of singers, dancers, chorus and orchestra entertains for the price of admission.

VICTORIA. A bit of Olde England? Not really, and even the chamber of commerce has dropped that line. But it is still the place to follow the birds to. The province's main museum, a house of wonder for the kids, is filled with Indian relics, birds, animals and historical objects. Don't miss.

Or the maritime museum, or lake-studded Beacon Hill Park with its views of the snow-mantled Olmpics across the Strait of Juan de Fuca. And be sure and take a guided tour through the Parliament Buildings sitting dowagerish and solidly on its green sward.

After a day's shopping in the fine shops — specialty English woollens and china — tour Marine Drive, and drop in at historic Helmcken House and pop in at turretted Craigdarroch Castle, as real a castle as you'll find around.

If there's a bit of adventure in your soul, from Victoria drive westward, on a good highway to Sooke, a small and flowery fishing village on the strait, and then on to Jordan River and you'll pass dozens of empty small beaches perfect for a picnic.

The pavement ends at Jordan River, and the gravelled road gets twisty and watch for logging trucks but the trip of 25-miles to Port San Juan can be made easily, and new vistas face you at every corner. At Port San Juan, cut left and cross the old log bridge and you're in back country, logging country, which twists and turns up and down for miles. Watch for deer. Good fishing in the small streams.

At the fork, unmarked, the right road leads to Shawnigan Lake and back to Victoria. The other road, in better condition, leads through more logging country to Cowichan Lake, Cowichan and then blacktop to Duncan. This short trip, taking about four hours, is what is called getting off the beaten track.

AT DUNCAN, follow the Island Highway to Nanaimo. In spring, your best chance for fish is in the district's many trout streams. Don't forget to buy that license.

NORTH FROM Nanaimo, 80 miles to Comox, are a succession of soft-sand beaches ideal for swimming and clam digging at low tide and, it you like oysters, the kind that grow wild are the best kind.

Don't miss Long Beach, where the giant breakers roll in from a thousand miles away and if a storm is due, you can see the cloud masses moving up a hundred miles or more away. In summer, Long Beach, 11 miles of hard-packed sand so smooth that bombers landed on it during the last war, thousands of tourists now visit.

Don't Pack Yet For That Trip To Red China

By MURRAY J. BROWN

Communist China no longer is off limits to the American traveler. But don't start packing your ping-pong paddles — Peking has given no indication yet that it is ready to roll out the red carpet for visitors from the United States.

The Nixon administration opened the road for the American tourist to Communist China after about 20 years by dropping all travel restrictions earlier this year.

Although a number of more optimistic U.S. tour operators immediately began making plans, no U.S. official would even speculate on when Peking would decide to lift the Bamboo Curtain and let Americans in.

PAN AMERICAN World Airways and Trans World Airlines, in the meantime, have expressed hopes of reinstituting their routes to China and the American President Lines has declared readiness to resume ship passenger services.

In addition, United Air Lines petitioned the Civil Aeronautics Board for permission to operate flights from the United States to Peking, Shanghai and Canton.

The ink was hardly dry on the State Department announcement dropping the ban on travel before American wholesale and retail operators began promoting tours to China.

Advertisements appeared in a West Coast newspaper while a major wholesaler distributed thousands of fliers to travel agents on tours which "will begin the moment we have permission from the People's Republic of China . . . which is now pending applied for."

ONE AGENCY EVEN began offering 22-day tours for $2,500 with a departure date of next May 5 if visas are granted by Peking.

Travel to Communist China by American citizens was banned by the U.S. State Department shortly after Mao Tse-tung's Red armies forced Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and his Nationalist regime to retreat to the island of Taiwan in 1949. Only a handful of U.S. nations are known to have visited the mainland since.

Passports with imprinted with warnings that "travel to, in or through the Communist controlled portions of China, Korea and Vietnam, or to, in or through Cuba" was forbidden without special authorization from the U.S. secretary of state.

LAST MARCH Washington announced that the special validation of passports for travel by U.S. citizens to Communist China would no longer be required. The curbs on travel to Communist North Vietnam, North Korea and Cuba remained in effect.

The following month Peking surprised everyone by inviting the U.S. table tennis team which took part in the world championships in Japan to visit China. At the same time, it granted visas to a small number of American newsmen who accompanied the players. The tour included visits to Peking, Canton, Shanghai and the Great Wall of China.

The Bamboo Curtain was slammed down again until mid-June when Peking admitted 13 students associated with the Committee of Concerned Asian Scholars in Stanford, Calif. The committee favors normalization of political, economic and cultural relations between the United States and Communist China.

IN THE PAST Peking granted visas to Americans only in what it considered were very special cases and there were no signs that it was about to change its policy in the near future.

In its announcement last March, the State Department noted that in the preceding 20 months — after a previous easing of restrictions by Washington — special permission to visit Red China had been granted to about 1,000 Americans. But only three were given visas by Peking.

The U.S. moves were in line with the pledge by President Richard M. Nixon last February "to create broader opportunities for contacts between the Chinese and American peoples."

THE PEKING authorities appear in no hurry to reciprocate.

The feeling here is that Peking could not be expected to open its borders to American visitors until the end of U.S. military involvement in Vietnam, at the very least.

Desert Beckons Summer Tourists

Palm Springs Plans Events

A HAWAIIAN BUFFET served at the poolside of the Sheraton-Oasis in Palm Springs every Friday evening is one of the special events with which that desert resort is attempting to attract tourists during the off-season summer months. The Palm Springs Convention and Visitors Bureau has launched a promotion campaign stressing the area's dry humidity and its relaxed atmosphere during the warm weather period.

PALM SPRINGS — By local definition, an optimist is someone who tries to sell travelers on the idea of visiting the desert in summer.

Which by actual count means that there are 21,500 optimists in Palm Springs. That's the latest census figure for this desert resort, and includes residents who live, work, play and otherwise enjoy life here the year around — including those once infamous summer months.

This year the local population has united behind a strong summer promotion campaign, spearheaded by the city's hoteliers. The purpose is to snare some of the millions of travelers vacationing in nearby Disneyland, San Diego, Hollywood and the beaches, as well as those who live in Southern California.

No one expects any crush of incoming traffic, but there may be a surprising number who discover that the desert in summer can be quite livable and enjoyable.

AMONG THE special summer attractions:

Reduced hotel rates.

A sure-lure weekend package that includes half-price Sunday night rooms (for those staying Friday and Saturday); and two-for-one Sunday night tickets at three first-run movie houses and the in-city drive-in.

A Sunday-through-Friday night line-up of dinner, entertainment, dancing, movies — for the entire summer, and at modest prices.

A full sports schedule, including golf at championship courses (early in the morning is best); tennis, also early in the morning or at night-lighted courst; bicycling along 10 miles of in-city bikeways; swimming, sunning and fishing.

A mid-summer "Some Like It Hot" festival. Although still in the blueprint stage, the program would be hosted by city officials in co-operation with local merchants, civic organizations, hotels and restaurants, and designed as a fun-for-the-entire-family weekend.

Actually, the city's Convention and Visitors Bureau has always undertaken a summer promotion, but this year's campaign is unique.

For one thing, the summer ghost-town image has virtually disappeared, and much more of Palm Springs is remaining open. That includes all but two of the major hotels, most first class restaurants and the established branches of Beverly Hills' best-known stores.

Then too, the city's hotel industry has taken an exceptionally spirited attitude toward increasing summer traffic. The most vigorous supporter of the summer promotion is the newly activated Hotel Association, which has been instrumental in getting individual members to contribute to a round-robin of week-night activity.

The result is a complete summer program of dinner and/or entertainment at a different hotel each Monday through Friday.

THE SPECIAL week-night dinner evenings will be a boon to the small hotel operators, few of whom have their own dining facilities. The program includes Variety Night on Mondays at the Ocotillo Lodge; French Cuisine at the Riviera Hotel and Country Club on Tuesdays; Margaritas and a Mexican menu at the Gene Autry Hotel on Wednesday; an outdoor Western barbecue at the new Palm Springs International Hotel on Thursdays; and a Hawaiian luau every Friday at the Sheraton Oasis.

Prices range from $2.50 to $6.50 per person plus drinks and tips.

ADMITTEDLY, summer months in the Southern California desert take some getting use to. No one denies that it's hot.

But it's a different kind of heat, they claim, thanks to an unusually low humidity that averages 20 and 22 per cent respectively during July and August. That's the lowest for any resort or major city in the United States.

To stress this "hot but dry" theme among the broadcast media, whose weather forecasts exert formidable influence over weekend travelers, the visitors bureau will expand last year's "Weatherman's weekend" program. That event brought radio and television weathercasters here from San Diego, Los Angeles, San Jose and San Francisco to sample the "no smog, no gunk-in-theair" climate.

The weathermen brought their wives, and after a weekend of swimming, shopping, golfing and sunning, went home assuring their hosts that they did indeed have a legitimate cause for promoting Palm Springs in the summer.

"A lot of people like our kind of warm," observes a local real estate broker, who also notes that the desert is a last refuge from the congestion of cities and heavily traveled routes.

FOR LOCAL mobility, there are 10 miles of city bicycle routes that have become regular thoroughfares for the pedal set. Adult cyclists, including those who might be more at home in chaffeured limousines, are a familiar sight.

Standard two-wheel models, three-wheelers, tandems and other styles, including those with strap-in seats for tots, can be rented for modest fees.

FOR FISHERMEN (yes, in the desert!), Whitewater Mountain Trout Farm is less than 30 minutes from the center of Palm Springs. There you can catch trout from eight to 20 inches long.

For a small fee, Whitewater Farm will clean your fish, pack it in ice, and let you take it to your hotel chef to cook, or to your home to barbecue.

It also has a special summer schedule: the 80-passenger cable cars operate Thursday through Monday between 10 a.m. and 9 p.m., and continue to offer one of the most exciting rides in the American West, traveling from the Valley Station at 2,500 feet to the Mountain Station at 8,500.

Guides For The Angler

For these anglers, Chronicle Books, 54 Mint Street, San Francisco, has put together "The Fisherman's Library," a boxed set of five softcover "tackle-box" guides by San Francisco Chronicle outdoors writer Jim Freeman.

The illustrated books cover fishing on the Trinity and Klamath rivers and in Shasta Lake, plus "California Trout Fishing" and "California Steelhead Fishing."

The books sell separately at $1.95, but purchased as a set, they will make a special impression as a gift.

Freeman's information on fishing sites, techniques and facilities are complete, down to choices of flies and baits, and the availability of campsites. And Freeman's expertise enables him to drop in those little extra tips now and then that enable the fisherman to improve his luck considerably. D.K.

The Spy Who Was For Real: Eli Cohen, An Israeli Martyr

THE SHATTERED SILENCE by Zwy Aldouby and Jerrold Ballinger; Coward, McCann & Geoghegan, 453 pages, $7.95.

By DON KEOWN

Fiction has made such heavy use of spies among its characters that one tends to forget there are men and women actually living and practicing that dangerous profession.

Certainly no creation of Ian Fleming, John LeCarre or Len Deighton ever ran greater risks with more fortitude than Eli Cohen, the Israeli agent who lived six years in Damascus and who infiltrated the highest echelons of Syria's ruling Baathite Party.

He was friend and confidant of Syria's highest government officials including its president and its premier. And at the time of his arrest he was under consideration for two cabinet posts.

Daily, each morning from his apartment in the very heart of Damascus, he transmitted by radio information to Israeli intelligence that proved invaluable.

Ultimately, it was this daily transmission that was to lead to his downfall.

Unaware that a radio silence for all government and diplomatic channels had been ordered to permit a test of newly-received sophitisticated electronic equipment received from Russia, Cohen went onto the air as usual. His "solo" transmission, uncovered by the clatter of other traffic, was detected and traced to his apartment.

After withstanding torture and undergoing a clumsily rigged trial, Cohen died bravely upon the Damascus gallows in May of 1965. And thus became a martyr.

It is the story of "The Eli Cohen Affair" that co-authors Zwy Aldouby, an Israeli journalist and former Haganah member, and Jerrold Ballinger, an American reporter, tell, in their book "The Shattered Silence."

This is a heavily documented report of the most astonishing and most successful espionage undertaking since Sorge and Cicero, told in fact in such minute detail that the reading sometimes becomes a bit difficult. The multitude of bewildering Arabic names adds to the confusion.

And yet it is a fascinating account whose narrators, like their subject, are deserving of our admiration for a most difficult job well-done. Needless to say, they researched and wrote without the cooperation of the Syrians and the other Arab states who wound up as embarrassed by Cohen's courage and the world reaction to his sham trial and execution as by the ease with which he had infiltrated the Syrian governmental and military structures and learned that country's supposedly most-guarded secrets.

It is not only the story of the courage and ingenuity of Cohen, or Kamal Amin Taabet the rabid Arab nationalist as he was known in Damascus, but it is also a book that makes a number of other revelations about the Mideast that help to clear away from some of the clouds that hover over that chaotic area.

It is revealing of the virulence of the anti-Semitism, above and beyond the to-be-expected anti-Zionism practiced in the Arab states and especially in Syria. It is revealing of the instability of Arab governments, outside of Egypt, with Syria especially the scene of inter-party and intra-party factional strife and duplicity It is revealing of the jealousy and the suspicion that poisons relationships among the Arab states. It is revealing of the extent to which the Mideast has served as a haven to the most despicable of the Hazi war criminals. And it is revealing of the corruption of officialdom and the poverty of the masses in Syria and its neighbors.

At least outwardly Eli Cohen was the quiet, methodical man in the pattern of the LeCarre and Deighton agent, and not the flamboyant spy of the James Bond ilk. But in one respect, the Eli Cohen story differs sharply from the fiction of LeCarre and Deighton.

Whereas in the novels the government invariably regards its agents as expendable and is cynical toward their fate, Israel went to extraordinary lengths in its attempts to save Cohen from the gallows. It offered a tremendous ransom plus hostages. And it mounted a vigorous world opinion campaign to bring pressure upon the Syrians to show a brave man mercy.

When the effort to save Cohen failed, and the Syrians turned his hanging into a televised circus spectacle, the international reaction was one of horror and disgust.

So that even as he died, the patriot Cohen contributed yet again to the efforts of his small country to survive in a hostile region. For world opinion and public support, as well as personal heroism and inspired national, determination and dedication have played major roles in Israel's survival against heavy odds.

ELI COHEN, Israel's master spy and martyr, was under consideration as Syria's deputy minister of defense when that country arrested him for espionage. His stranger-than-fiction career ending May 19, 1965, with his execution in Damascus, is told by Zwy Aldouby and Jerrold Ballinger in their book, "The Shattered Silence."

Sleuths & Suspense

This is strictly formula spy fiction, but well done formula.

George MacLeod, a veteran British agent, is none too happy when he is assigned to work with a Soviet counterpart in Marseille to thwart a Chinese plan to use the opium crops of Northern Laos and North Vietnam to raise a fortune and finance a power ploy. His pain is eased considerably when the Russian agent proves to be a beautiful, and capable, French woman.

To foil the Chinese, one of their key men — and a dangerous one — must be put out of action, permanently. And the Marseille waterfronte is inhabited by other equally sinister characters who also have a stake in the project.

The action is tough and fast-paced. But author Simpson, a foreign service officer whose experience has included duty in Marseille, does forego the temptation to give us the now expected cynical conclusion in favor of a happier ending.

THE JAPANESE used to do ornate, miniature sculptures that they used for dangling from their sashes such personal items as purses and tobacco pouches. These exquisite little pieces, usually one to four inches long, were called netsuke.

And that is what "An Introduction to Netsuke" (Tuttle, $3.50) by Raymond Bushell, connoisseur and collector, is all about.

It is intended for the unitiated as an introduction to one of the most treasured of all Oriental art objects. Bushell tells how the netsuke originated, and then gives detailed analyses of some especially beautiful or significant pieces that are pictured in black and white. Ivory, coral, wood, porcelain and metals were all used and are shown. And the special entusiasm that netsuke arouses in scholars and students of Eastern arts and crafts becomes not only understandable to the reader but contagious.

"THE COMPLETE Beginner's Guide to Sailing" (Doubleday, $5.95) by Ainslie H. Drummond Jr., the editor-in-chief of the Elhi Division of D. C. The 'Pirate Ship' Sailed By Slaves

On Aug. 26, 1839, a black-painted "pirate ship" was boarded by the U.S. Coast Guard off Long Island, and taken in tow to New London, Conn., seeing off a remarkable sequence of events.

The ship was the Amistad, Spanish-owned, from Cuba. It had started from one Cuban port to another with a cargo of newly purchased black slaves. En route, the slaves had risen and seized the vessel.

Spain claimed the ship. So did the U.S. Coast Guard. So did two American ship captains who had been preparing to board it when a Coast Guard vessel appeared.

Two Spaniards still aboard the Amistad claimed the slaves. But the slave trade had been outlawed by the U.S., and ostensibly by Spain as well.

While courts fumbled, President Martin Van Buren temporized, and the Spanish ambassador fumed, New York abolitionists took over the education and Christianizing of the erstwhile slaves, who were found to be from Sierra Leone where they had been sold initially to a Portuguese slaver.

The case dragged out for years, and as the story is told by Mary Cable in "Black Odyssey," it offers in miniature much of the confusion, many of the tensions that surrounded the status of blacks from Africa in the decades preceding the Civil War.

All turned out well for the slaves freed from the Amistad — in the view of the abolitionists. They were thoroughly instructed in Christianity; some of them learned to read English; then they were returned to Sierra Leone, accompanied by a few dedicated missionaries.

Yet in this denouement is the most poignant aspect of the plight of these Africans who rose to seize the ship on which they were being hauled as human cargo. The abolitionists, with supreme dedication, never questioned that converting these people to Christianity and returning them to their native land would serve to spread civilization (European-American style) to the Dark Continent.

It didn't, of course, quite turn out that way.

THE COMMON SENSE OF POLITICS by Mortimer J. Adler; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 265 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Revolutionary pressures are not new to man, but what is new today is a schism within the movement, giving us revolutionaries who are not only dedicated to changing our institutions but also revolutionaries bent upon their destruction.

So announces philosopher Mortimer J. Adler at the outset of his book "The Common Sense of Politics," whose purpose he pronounces to be the refutation of these "philosophical anarchists" who have despaired of institutional change and have turned to non-institutional means of striving for their goal of a better society.

Politics remain a viable instrument for mankind's betterment, he argues, and if formulated with "common sense" need not be the disreputable institution it has become for many today.

The goal, as seen by Adler, must be government that truly assures liberty, equality and "a good life" for everyone on earth.

To attain this idealistic objective, Adler enumerates three achievements that must be accomplished:

1. Our technology must be controlled, so as to eliminate, not contribute to, poverty and pollution.

2. A world government must be initiated if peace and tranquility are to be insured.

3. Universal liberal schooling for all, into and through adulthood, to equip man fully for his citizenship and to reap more fully the fruits of his leisure.

Some evidence to the contrary, Adler nonetheless argues that man's history shows a continuing record of progress, so that we have reached the point where the ideal of a truly just state is "genuinely achievable" today.

The form he sees for it is a world-wide union of socialist, democratic republics.

Present governments, he admits, are by their nature defective and unable to provide the classless society man requires if he is to achieve a society devoid of racial and ethnic divisions, of economic injustices and of conflict. But rather than destroy those governments and their institutions, Adler recommends that we work for their democratization — the elimination of the obstacles between ruling and ruled classes — and for their socialization — the eradication of the division of the population into haves and have-nots.

Thus, he argues, his world union of socialist, democratic republics would accomplish. "World-wide justice and world-wide peace are not embellishments of the ideal; they are of its essence."

Conversely, Adler admits that the achievement of this ideal may require revolutionary action as well as peaceful, civil means.

But once attained, he argues, then there will be no further justification for revolution "because no injustices will remain to be rectified and no deprivations will remain to be remedied."

Mankind, having perfected his institutions, might then, Adler suggests, turn his attention to his own progress as an individual — "toward fulfilling (his) capacities for understanding and wisdom, for friendship and love, that are the distinctive powers of the human mind and spirit."

Mortimer Adler is not a thinker and writer who tolerates casual reading. His books demand the total involvement and commitment of his reader. And always there lurks in the back of the mind this question: "Does political philosophy really have anything to do with existing conditions?"

Practical philosophy, be it ethics or political, is inadequate to solve the difficult practical problems confronting man in a particular society and under the specific circumstances of a given historic time and place. This Adler admits. But such wisdom, he adds, is indispensible for the formulation of a framework, a broad outline or plan, by which solutions can be developed for the future. "They point us in the right direction."

"Hence," writes Adler, "when we confess that political wisdom is by itself inadequate for practical purposes, we should be quick to add that it is also practically indispensable."

It is heartening to have a reasoning man of Adler's eminence argue that man, silly creature that he is, has nonetheless stumbled part way down the path of progress and reached a point where a whole, wide, bright new road to a better future may now lie just ahead. If only he doesn't despair and dynamite the access.

An Actor Turns Novelist

THE OTHER by Thomas Tryon; Knopf, 280 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown

Tom Tryon, best known as an actor, and not very good one, demonstrates herein that he has a considerably greater talent as a novelist.

Certainly there is none of the wooden quality of his acting in such pictures as "The Cardinal" to be found in his writing of this strange and eerie tale.

He builds his psychological horror tale around the relationship between two young twin brothers, both secretive boys, one gentle and mystical, the other of a more dominating and darker nature. From their boyhood games grows a sense of doom and disaster, for one or both of them, and for others in their family.

Tryon sets his book in a rural Connecticut town of the 1930s, makes the terrors of madness and the mysteries of death parts of his plot, and keeps a good grip on the reader's curiosity until the final revelation that still leaves much to the reader's imagination.

It is not a cheerful book but it is a compelling one, in the uneasy mood of Ira Levi.s bestselling "Rosemary's Baby." Tom Tryon has tackled a particularly difficult kind of novel for his first undertaking as a writer, and has executed it remarkably well — so well that it leaves the reader with a haunted and uneasy feeling. The story of Niles and Holland Perry is not easily forgotten.

Black Humor On Majorca

That the possession of talent, and the use to which these special gifts are put, are two separate and distinct matters is illustrated strikingly by writer George Fox and his first novel "Without Music."

After an advance reading of the manuscript, Mario Puzo of "The Godfather" fame quite properly described Fox as "a brilliantly, witty writer who has mastered his craft superbly."

But Puzo also wrote of "Without Music":

"I love the book . . . 'Without Music' is as haunting a story as it is a solidly satisfying piece of entertainment."

Haunting? Yes. Solidly satisfying? Hardly. As for loving the book, there is little if anything in "Without Music" to inspire affection from the reader.

It is black humor at its bleakest — a novel of adventure, suspense and psychology done with wit and a high degree of style. But it employs the writer's talents to spotlight mercilessly the worst in the human character and the most sordid in his society — and is a novel utterly devoid of hope or inspiration.

Thankfully the publisher has spared us in the jacket blurb the usual hypocritical claim that accompanies such a novel that it is actually a book of great compassion or charity.

Forthrightly, we are forewarned: "This intense story of character and the darker sides of human behavior is perfectly shaded by eerie and violent secondary characters — mangled war veterans, an escaped Nazi war criminal, a former wiretapper for the Mafia, and his grim coterie of assassins, revolutionaries and expatriates — and by the grim Majorcan landscape itself." To say nothing of a child murderess.

Merle Kraft, hack journalist and uninvolved, finds himself compelled to return to Majorca where years earlier he had an affair with a strange young woman. The woman has a child which Merle is certain he fathered. And he is haunted by the knowledge that this woman was once accused of killing two earlier children.

He detects signs of a relapse into madness on the part of the woman. But the habits of years of indecision are strong. And so he spends his time in the company of the colony of grotesquely crippled war veterans who drink and carouse their damaged lives away in Majorca's benign climate, and in making love to a varied assortment of women that include his ex-wife, the presumably madwoman and an eccentric English travel writer.

Merle drifts, as he always has drifted, while the danger grows for the small child. And finally, when action is taken, it is not Merle who is the activist.

Fox's writing is admirable, laced with flashes and episodes of sardonic humor and with considerable insight. It is too bad that his bizarre story is so totally a tale of despair and of pathos. And that sex scenes intended no doubt to lend earthiness often descend to dirtiness.

But to return to Mario Puzo's evaluation of "Without Music": While puzzled by his exuberant assessment of the depressing novel, one can nonetheless agree completely with him that in Fox "there's little doubt that a powerful, new talent has arrived permanently on the scene."

Sam Pepys' New Home

The University of California Press is rapidly becoming the new home for 17th Century gentleman Samuel Pepys.

First the press started last year the re-publication of Pepys Diary, a venture extending over the next several years. And now it has brought out a fine illustrated supplement to the work.

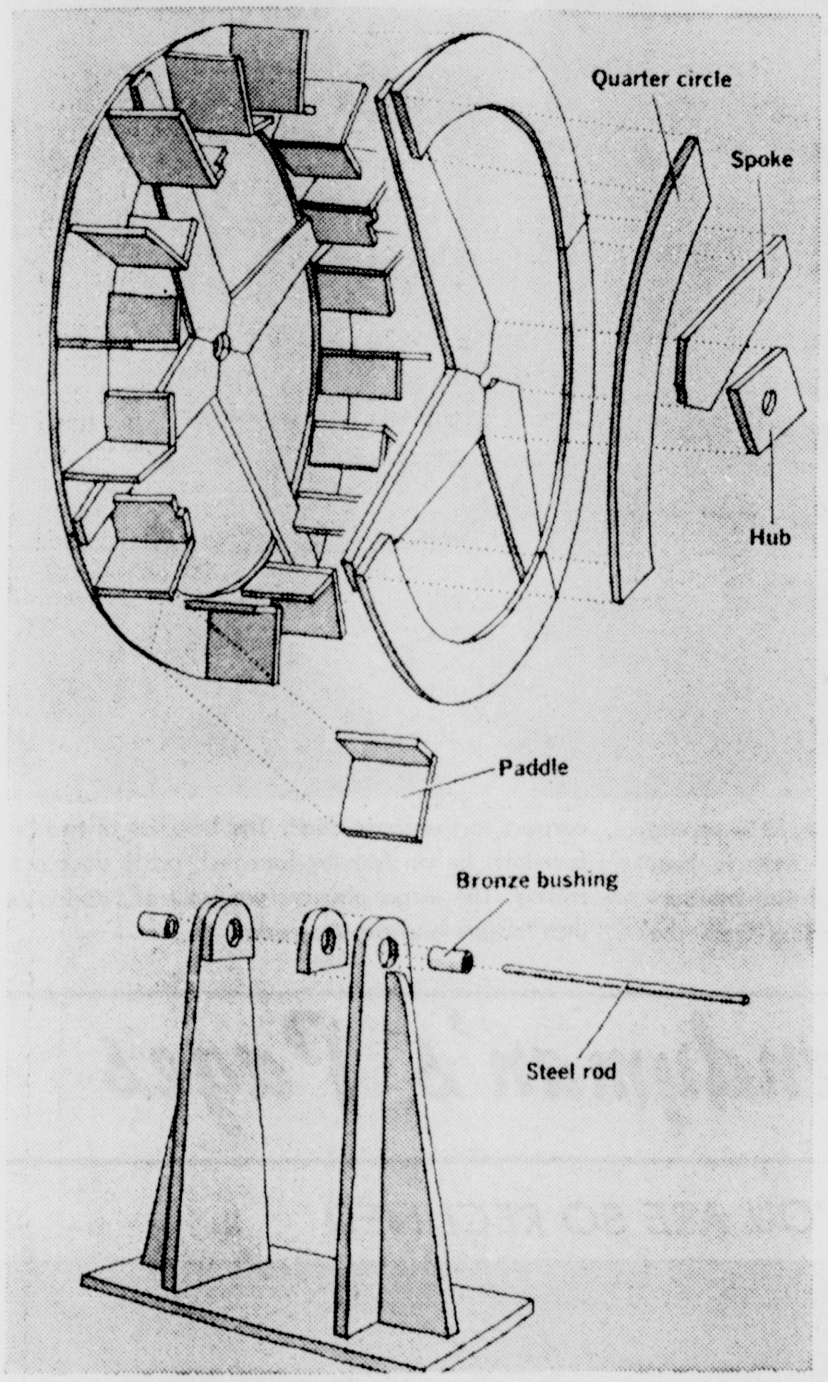
Water In The Garden



THESE DIAGRAMS show the basic pieces you will need if you decide to build a waterwheel for the waterfall in your backyard. You can, of course, modify the size and proportions to fit your own landscape needs and your water supply.

Shut your eyes and listen to a humming creek, a singing waterwheel, a shouting waterfall or just a steady little drip-drop.

Nothing cools off your thoughts more quickly, and nothing cools off the garden more efficiently during those warm summer and early autumn spells.

ANY WAY TO bring water into the garden is a good way. But there are hard and easy ways. To simplify the project, make use of a simple inexpensive (from $20) recirculating pump available at almost every garden store.

These compact little pumps can sit unnoticed at the bottom of a pool and silently send water through a tube up to the top of a waterfall or fountainhead. The pumps use the same water over and over — and that's good for plants and fish.

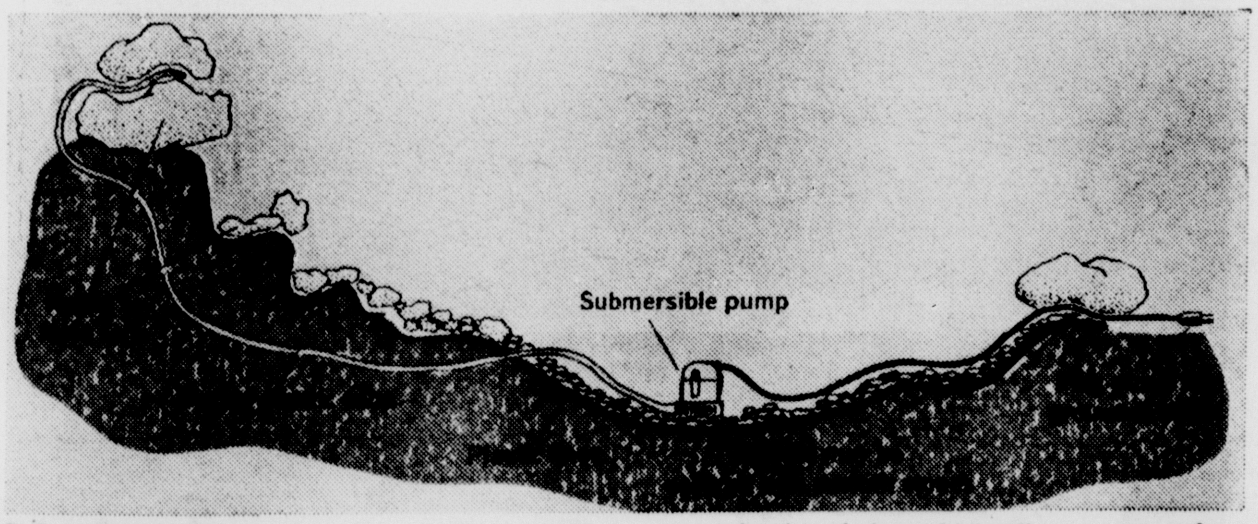
THE PUMPS are completely watertight and submersible. And they come in a wide range of sizes. There is no need to oil the parts,since lubricant is sealed inside.

According to information published by Ortho Garden Products Division of Chevron Chemical Co., when installing one of these pumps, here are some things to keep in mind:

Put the pump where it will have to move water for as short a way as possible; use pipes and fittings of galvanized iron, brass, or plastic (rubber tubes are all right for smaller pumps), and always use pipes at least as big as the pump fitting. A smaller pipe adds to the friction.



THE INSTALLATION of a backyard waterfall complete with a small pump that recirculates and reuses the water is a relatively simple project, as shown in this drawing. The constant circulation of the water aerates it and keeps it fresh. And the pumps, costing from $20, are completely watertight. They come in a wide range of sizes. A pump that will move 90 gallons of water an hour to a height of three feet will give you only a trickle down your waterfall. The next size, lifting 170 gallons an hour to three feet, will give you a stream in which you can wash your hands. To complete your setting you can add a waterwheel, the proper plantings and perhaps some free-swinging flower baskets inside the wheel. And fish are a possibility for the pond.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the following week:

- Primroses may be divided now or next month.
- Since lawns now require extensive watering, they also need regular feedings. The water leeches the nutrients from the soil, and these must be replaced.
- Nurseries have a wide variety of pre-started plants for hanging baskets.
- Many bedding plants — zinnias, marigolds, dwarf dahlias, etc. — can be purchased for quick garden color.
- Disbud dahlias and chrysanthemums if you want large, show-type flowers. Pinch off the side buds to channel all growing energy into the terminal or tip buds.
- Keep fuchsias and begonias in full bloom by feeding frequently. Every other week is not too often.

A View Of The Valley

Difficult Building Site May Prove Opportunity

As choice land in the Bay Area becomes scarcer, more families are turning to sites previously thought "impossible."

After the initial challenges to designers or builders are overcome, owners often discover they've come out of the situation with a bonus panorama.

John Carden Campbell, a San Francisco designer and director of the California School of Design, did just that for a family with a site in the hills near San Jose overlooking the Santa Clara Valley.

The house was built on two levels out over the steep slope, with open space below the lower level, so the house could face out to the valley with minimal disturbance of the land.

A SWEEPING walkway deck from carport to front door, flanked by window walls in the living areas, enhances the view for family and visitors.

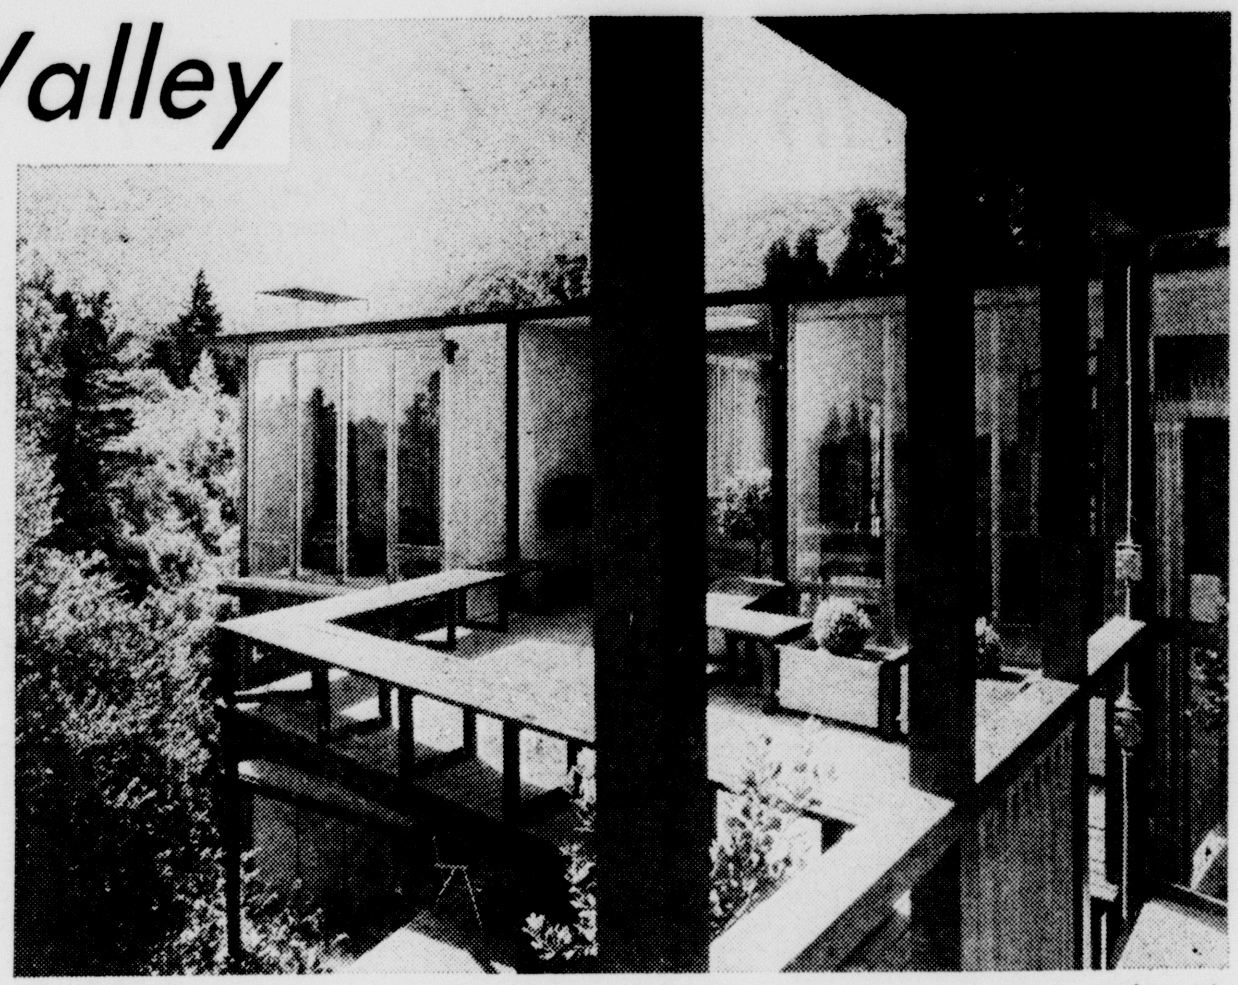
The deck off the main floor shades the paved area below, and there is another deck off the lower floor. Walkway decking is two-by-four-inch Douglas fir laid flat; planter boxes are built of two-by-six-inch tongue and groove western cedar.

Wide railings along the walkway, of seven two-by-fours laid flat on a frame of four-by-four-inch posts, actually are designed as benches and for displaying plant boxes and pots.

Many two-story houses or those built on more gradual slopes neglected in their original design to fully utilize view possibilities.

OLDER HOMES built before decks became generally popular may be naturals for opening up a room by replacing a window or smaller door with sliding glass doors, then adding a small or large deck, depending on use and space.

The line of sight from a deck added off a second-floor master bedroom, for example, should be pleasingly different from that below, and it's just the place for sewing, reading, or just relaxing.



THIS HOME BUILT on a steep site has a sweeping view of the Santa Clara Valley that is best enjoyed from the walkway-deck of two-by-four-inch Douglas fir laid flat and leading from the carport to the front door. The benches of two-by-four-inch fir on four-by-four-inch posts double as railing. The large planters are built of two-by-six-inch tongue-and-groove cedar.

Kicking Is The Last Resort In Repair Of Appliances

Repairing home appliances is difficult and discouraging, but not impossible, reports Dereck Williamson in "The Complete Book of Pitfalls," published by McCall Books.

He offers some trouble-shooting "how-to" tips:

"Electrical appliances don't work when they're not plugged in. If you have an appliance that keeps running after you pull the plug," the author advises, "get out of the house fast."

"When a plugged-in appliance won't work, check the outlet. It does no good to peer into the socket. You can't see electricity."

The author cautions, at this point, on the futility of having someone explain the mysteries of direct and alternating current: "It's easier on your nerves if you just think of electricity as Magic, and go on from there. The electricity is either in the socket or it isn't."

THE PROPER way to check the outlet is by plugging in something you know works, like a lamp. If the lamp lights, the socket is "good" and the appliance is "bad."

The author explains this is better than dragging the appliance to another outlet. Especially if the appliance is a refrigerator.

Check the cord on the appliance. If it is frayed, cut out the bad section and splice it together again. Williamson points out there are limits to the number of times you can do this: "A cord only an inch or two long is impractical especially for things like electric spayers."

CHECK THE switch. Sometimes cleaning the switching mechanisms will correct the problem. Says the author: "They tend to get gummed up, especially in toasters where the crumbs from last year's English muffins eventually find their way into the control room."

"An ailing appliance sometimes can be cured without actually fixing anything," Williamson confides, "which adds to the mystique of electricity. Turning a noisy electric clock upside down and letting it run that way a few days often silences it. Motor-driven devices can often be hit or kicked to life."

If all your efforts have thus far failed to revive the appliance, Williamson offers this final major piece of advice: "Remember that a wornout appliance is worth less than nothing. Make sure it is taken away—trade in or not—when you replace the one you couldn't fix. Make it part of the deal before hand."

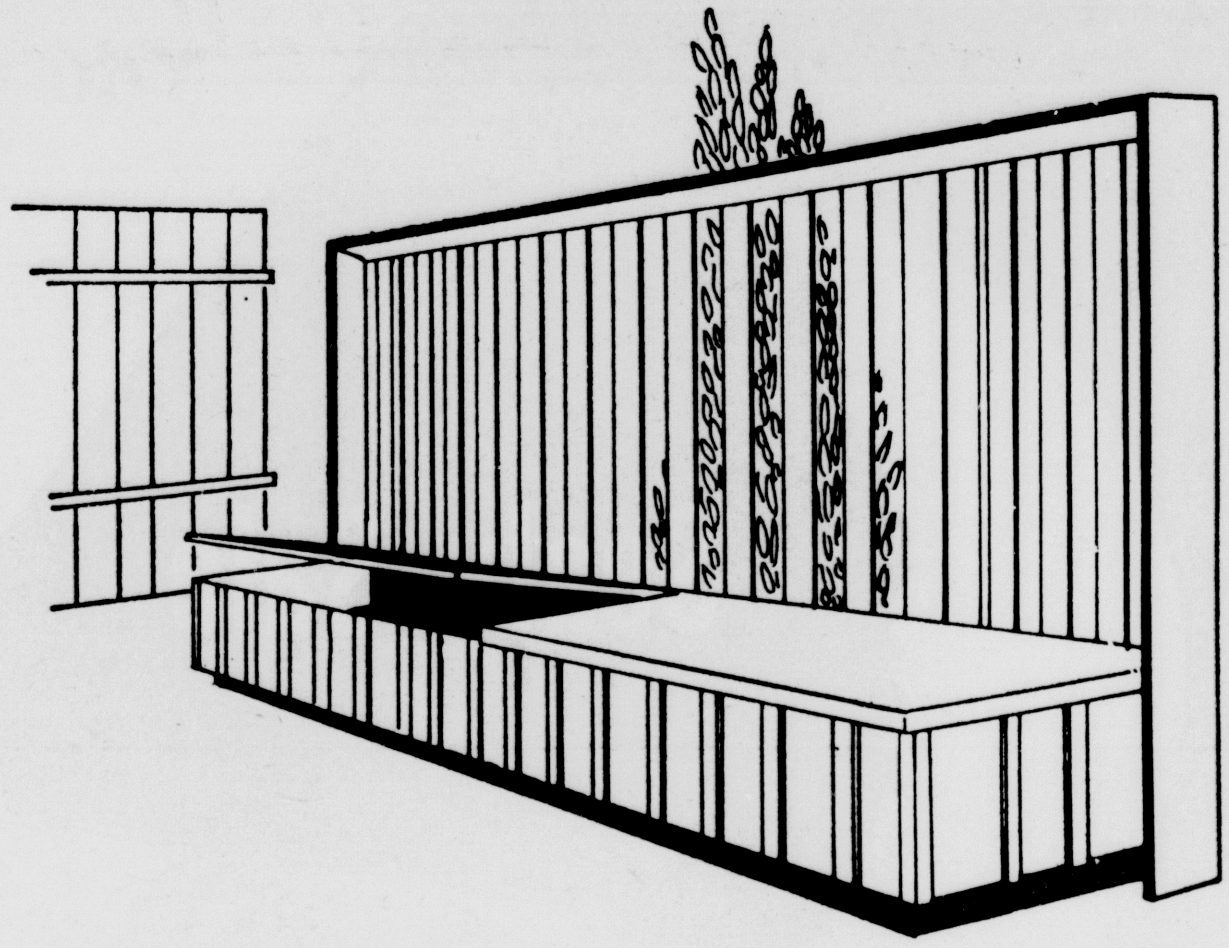
The Handyman's Pages

IF YOU ARE SO RECLINED

ACTRESSES Maria O'Brien and Linda Peck enjoy the comfort of this handyman-built rocking recliner or double lounge for two. You can build the recliner, too, with the help of a Steve Ellingson pattern, but you will have to furnish your own pretty girls. Send $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Rocking Recliner Pattern No. 451. The lounge is designed to fit the contours of the body perfectly, with feet elevated so that there is no strain on the heart.

This Lounge Bench Doubles As Buffet Table And Storage



A LOUNGING BENCH for sun-worshipers also serves as a storage area for garden or play equipment, and as a service table for buffets and snacks. The bench has been built on a frame of two-by-four-inch western wood. The facing and screen can blend with the house siding and the fence. The seat consists of two hinged lids, and its 12-foot length allows room for two to relax.

Benches do not a garden make, but they certainly add to the enjoyment of outdoor living, on a deck or patio, at poolside, or under a shadey tree.

One bench that can be built for lounging as well as storage combines good looks, utility value and ease of construction.

Its 12-foot length and two-foot width, combined with a built-on five-foot western wood screen, make it unusually useful as a yard divider.

JUST A FEW other possible uses include:

A sundeck, with foam rubber cushions; potting shelf; buffet or snack serving table, and as a game and garden gear cabinet, with two hinged lids.

Building the bench requires only moderate handyman skills, using sturdy outdoor lumber. Favored softwoods for this type construction include Douglas fir and western pines, hemlock or cedar.

The 12-foot length adapts to the average-sized outdoor living area and is suited to stretched-out relaxation for two persons. The same structural system can apply to a shorter, longer or wider bench.

THE FRAME OF two-by-four-inch lumber is supported by at least three legs on each side. The legs also are two-by-fours, notched into the frame and secured with flat-head stove bolts.

Facing for the bench is optional and can match the house siding, such as board and batten. Height of the screen and spacing of the slats are builder's options.

Another quite simple, but distinctive bench can be built by setting 18-inch sections of four-by-four-inch posts into the ground, with 16-inch cross pieces of four-by-fours notched in and fastened with wood screws, about four inches from the top of the posts.

TWO SETS OF these post-legs, about six feet apart, support a seat of two two-by-eight-inch planks secured to the cross pieces.

Treated western red cedar is ideal for this type of permanent outdoor furniture, subjected as it may be to continued dampness or ground contract.

Set against a house, fence or wood divider screen, this type of simple, artful bench makes an attractive display area for bonsai trees or other potted plants and bushes.

More likely, though you will want to put it to its originally intended purpose.

Second Homes Now Play Larger Role In Our Lives

Longer weekends and vacations, better highways, and increased population pressures are several reasons for the dramatic changes in the function of second homes.

What used to be considered a weekend cabin or a vacation homeoften serves now as a primary residence, with a smaller townouse or apartment used as a week day home.

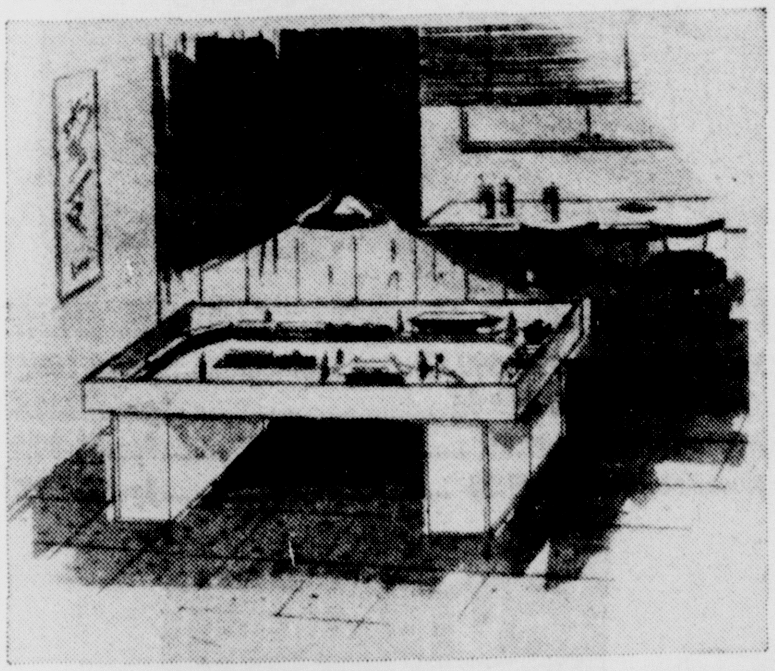
FOR TRAINS AND TENNIS



FOR THE HANDYMAN with one or more young sons and some extra space in the recreation room, this combination table tennis and train board is well worth the little time it takes for building. Model railroading trackage and scenery can be permanently fastened to the board which can be tucked away neatly under a tournament-size table tennis top that completes the 30-inch-high table. Only track equipment more than six inches tall has to be removed in order to set the top in place for table tennis. The compact table requires only two and a half panels of three-quarter-inch and half a panel of quarter-inch interior DFPA A-D plywood, and it also provides storage cabinets for extra rail and ping pong equipment. For the plans to build it, send 25 cents to the American Plywood Association, 1110 A Street, Tacoma, Wash., 98401, and ask for Handy Plan No. 55-410.

Hollywood Slips, Says Magazine

Hollywood's role as the motion picture capital of the world is slowly slipping away, TV Guide magazine reported today.

The main reasons are greatly increased foreign competition, high costs and the departure of many of its skilled craftsmen because of lack of job opportunities. The magazine noted that the same day (April 15) the movie industry was presenting its Oscar awards an estimated 85 per cent of the members of International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, Electrical Technicians Local 728 were out of work.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

This week let's look at several releases from the Everest label.

The first is a not-too-well-known Rachmaninoff score, "The Bells," for soloists, chorus and orchestra. The composer was inspired by the Russian version of Edgar Allan Poe's poem of the same name and attempted to capture the different textures of sound of the silver, gold, brass and iron bells of the four poems dealing with birth, marriage, terror and death.

Kiril Kondrashin conducts the Moscow State Philharmonic Orchestra and Chorus on this album and complete reprint of the poem is included.

Although Angel Records is supposed to have first pick of stereo performances coming from the Soviet Union, Everest seems to have obtained the identical tape to that released on Melodiya/Angel in this country. At the bargain price Everest discs sell for in most locations, the collector will find EV 3251 the best buy.

FIVE COMPOSITIONS by the American David van Vactor are conducted by the composer on Everest 3236 with the Hessian Symphony Orchestra. Van Vactor is conductor of the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra and has created a variety of works in many forms, most of them modern in sound while not avant-garde. Dates of composition range from 1932 to 1963, with the "Quintet for Flute and Strings" being of major length.

There is an interesting set of variations, "Variazione Solenne for Orchestra" and a march-influenced "Octet for Brass."

EVEREST HAS released many musically first-rate LP's in their continuing "Archive of Folk and Jazz Music" series. Among them is one of clarinetist Sidney Bechet with Lionel Hampton on several tracks (FS-228).

Highlights include a lengthy "Sweet Lorraine" and an epic 11½-minute "Night and Day" that really gets it on.
that really gets it on.

ANOTHER OF interest is Volume II of a series on Django Reinhardt, the fabulous French gypsy guitarist to whom so many of today's jazz guitarists owe so much.

On FS-230 one will find some prime tracks I haven't seen on the many other re-issues of Django's considerable recording career — "Moppin' the Bride," and "Heavy Artillery" among them. Jazz violinist Stephane Grapelly, who adds much to the quintet's sound, is present on several of the tracks.

Both this and the aforementioned album are re-channeled for stereo effect from the original 78's without too much distortion.

THE PEE WEE Russell LP in this series (FS-233), presents another fine jazz clarinet artist, who died only recently, in true stereo performances with such jazzmen as trumpeter Ruby Braff and tenorman Bud Freeman. Pianist Joe Bushkin dubbed Russell "the Donovan or Dylan of the clarinet."

The nine tracks are mostly old jazz standards, but they take life with Pee Wee's unique sound.

A NEW LABEL with headquarters in Germany recently began distribution in the U.S.—Polydor. One of their best pop releases is "Trip in the Country," featuring a group of Nashville back-up musicians on country recording sessions known as Area Code 615. (Polydor 24-4025).

This is some of the most listenable city-slicked-up instrumentals of country music I have ever heard. The musicians are obviously all virtuosi in their own right and many of the group of eleven are represented as composers of the eleven tracks.

There is even a sophisticated string sextet heard on three tunes, including one of local interest which is misspelled "Sausilito."

TONY WILLIAMS is the Miles Davis drummer who not many years ago was barred from performing with Miles in San Francisco because he was underage. Well, some time has passed and Tony now has his own trio called "The Tony Williams Lifetime."

Their Polydor album is 24-4021 and it is in the same unclassifiable area of music as Miles' recent efforts. Most people would probably pigeon-hole it as jazz but that would be too narrow a designation. This is hard-driving music with predominate percussion but a far cry from the primitive efforts of many rock drummers.

Another Polydor album which might be placed in a folk-rock category is John Mayall's "Empty Rooms" (24-4010.) The ballads, all by Mayall, are blessed with tender and sensitive lyrics dealing mainly with loneliness. The list of instruments Mayall plays on the LP in addition to his vocals is almost endless: several different keyboards, lead guitar, 12-string guitar, bass, harmonica and Moog.

"Lying in my Bed" was above par in its very realistic sentiments and language.

Don Galloway Shuns Crowds

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Don Galloway is seen by some 30 million viewers each week as Sergeant Ed Brown in "Ironside," but fewer than 30 individuals see Galloway each week off-screen.

The tall, muscular actor is an introverted man who suffers a phobia about crowds.

He avoids parties, sports events and even Disneyland to escape the press of people in large numbers. For the same reason he and his wife, Linda, seldom entertain at home or visit restaurants.

A NATIVE OF Brooksville, Ky., where his father is city engineer, Galloway is that rare actor: a private person.

For that reason he doesn't appear on talk shows, game shows or on television panel programs. He doesn't knock actors who seek publicity and wide public exposure, but it is simply not for him.

"I don't like the term 'public appearance,'" Galloway says. "It sounds pretentious to me."

Don and Linda live in a comfortable three-bedroom home in the San Fernando valley with their daughters Tracy, 5, and Jennifer, 3, both of whom attend a private school.

WHEN GALLOWAY bought the house four years ago there was a fish pond in the back yard. Tracy's first step was smack into the pond.

Her father drained the pool and filled it in. He hopes one day to install a swimming pool but not until both little girls are ready to swim the English Channel.

Linda has decorated the house with comfortable, contemporary furniture. But Don is happiest in a small cottage on the back of the property which he uses as a den and work room.

He sits there at a typewriter working on scripts. Thus far he has sold a teleplay to his own NBC-TV series.

THE COTTAGE IS unusual in one respect. Galloway has constructed a small aviary outside one window which is occupied by a pair of canaries, Monique and Tommy. He looks forward to a batch of young canaries, but so far there hasn't been a single egg produced.

Don cheerfully agrees that his life is not unlike that of any wage-earner except that he works in a glamorous industry — television.

He works 40 weeks a year in the series, leaving 12 weeks of hiatus for his writing and a two or three-week vacation.

On Friday or Saturday nights he and Linda can usually be found playing poker with another couple who have been friends for many years.

DON DOESN'T PLAY golf, tennis or laze on the beach. He resists personal interviews, saying: "I haven't got anything startling to say."

Last year he and Linda enrolled in a course in karate, paying tuition in advance. They attended a single lesson and decided it was not for them.

Galloway counts among his friends Raymond Burr who plays the title role in "Ironsides." They lunch together often when the show is in progress, and sometimes, have dinner when night shooting is scheduled. Otherwise Don sticks to himself.

Marin Poets' Corner

THE BROKEN FLOWER POT

Bits of clay in disarray 'round the dormant flower laying,
In quietness and emptiness on the winding road of going,
And the wind blew petals far from hope on the naked concrete straying,
Yet the quivering flower in quiet despair its inner petals showing,
Bloomed again within itself and kissed its concrete harbor.
The soil in clumps and scattered, crying to dust then slowly turning
The stem yet straight, proud, stretching up to meet the mystical arbor,
Spirited softness under the gray . . . life within still burning,
Feeling the broken flower pot with a cheek on the cold and hard
Where it is, is warm and sweet the rose before not knowing,
But the concrete lover embraces freely in blatant disregard,
For love of where the rose had been or sorrow in where it's going.

THE SONNET WITHIN

While laying low beneath the mask of hate,
Despising life and loathing all that's in it,
I saw myself through eyes deep piercing straight,
An empty room with candles all unlit.
And bloodless daggers pierce through skin of steel,
Knowing ashes lie within my being.
Then silent sweat in blood starts to congeal
Within the veins that twist through limbs unseeing,
Content to passive lie throughout the days
Accepting life and doing naught to change,
And sucking milk from falsely given praise
Do once again my ordered life arrange;
Then soft within a voice emerging saith —
A better name for life like this is death.
